PETERSON'S SAYS:
That they have NOT sold their business.
That they sold their building at 1224 S. Main because they made a handsome profit.
That they have a year's lease on the Main-st. store.
That they intend within a year to erect the most complete used car rebuilding plant and sales building west of Chicago.
That they now have four stores, Los Angeles, San Bernardino, El Centro, and Anaheim, and authorized selling stations in other cities, all doing a splendid business.
That business is good and getting better every day.
That the steel strike, the coal strike, and the abnormal demand for new cars will force used car values higher and higher for many months to come.
That the time to buy used cars is right now.
That the best place to buy, and the best car to buy, is at THE A. A. PETERSON CO., "Used Car King," 1224 S. Main st.

Two hundred Bellnote Rollers have arrived, the first to reach California since the beginning of the war. Do not fail to hear these wonderful songsters and compare them with other "would-be" roller canaries. Better make reservations at once as our stock is limited. Twenty-five dollars while they last. After January 1 the price will go up. None of these birds wholesaled or exchanged. We also have a large stock of cheerful warbler canaries and a nice lot of grand-looking deep colored fancy canaries.

In fancy and aviary birds you will find our stock always the most complete, with a nice selection of pheasants, ducks and ornamental land and water fowl. We carry the largest stock of bird and animal cages on the Coast; also all kinds of foods, seeds and remedies for your pets. You will find goldfish and goldfish globes.

FAMILIES WAR; UNCLE IS SHOT BY NEPHEW.

CLOCK SPOILS REAL ESTATE DEAL AND ROW ENSUES; WOUND NOT GRAVE.

A wall clock, a real estate deal, half a dozen families and a revolver got all mixed up late yesterday at 708 West Forty-first drive, with a result that George M. Wilson, 43 years of age, 919 South Grand avenue, found himself in the Receiving Hospital with a bullet wound in the left hip, and the police started a search for his nephew, John L. Shacklett, 708 West Forty-first drive, who fired the shot. Also, Mrs. Lelia Smith, 83 years of age, mother of Mrs. Wilson, saw the shooting and collapsed. Other members of the families involved fainted and the bottom fell out of a real estate deal that was thought to be completed.

The trouble all started, according to Mrs. Wilson, when she became engaged in a quarrel with Mrs. Shacklett, whose husband had just purchased the residence at 708 West Forty-first drive from Mr. Wilson. The quarrel started over a wall clock that Mrs. Shacklett said was sold with the house and that Mrs. Wilson declared had been reserved by her. The two women, according to Mrs. Wilson, settled their troubles after a time.

In the meantime, Mr. Shacklett arrived in his automobile and went into his new house to talk with his wife, leaving Mrs. Wilson on the front porch. At this point Mr. Wilson arrived and was standing on the front lawn at 712 West Forty-first drive, talking to other members of the family who were on the front porch, when Mr. Shacklett, according to the narrative, dashed out of his house and, without any warning, shot twice. One of the bullets lodged in Mr. Wilson's left hip and the other went wild. Shacklett then fled.

At the Receiving Hospital it was found that the bullet wound was not serious and Mr. Wilson was removed to his home.

Detectives from University Station late last night were still hunting Shacklett.

CHARITIES GET LAND BY McGILLIN'S WILL.

VERMONT AVENUE TRACT WILL BE SOLD FOR THEM AFTER FIVE YEARS BY BANK.

The will of the late E. M. McGillin, who died last Sunday was filed for probate yesterday by Attorney V. B. Vaughn, acting for the Guaranty Trust and Savings Bank of this city. Besides a large number of pieces of property left to relatives, the will also mentions the disposal of a large tract of land in Los Angeles to be divided among several church and charitable organizations.

The largest single item mentioned in the will is a forty-two acre tract at the northeast corner of Vermont avenue and One Hundred and Twentieth street, of which Mr. McGillin was half owner. This was left in the hands of the Guaranty Trust and Savings Bank, as trustee. The will provides for the disposal of this property by the bank within five years. Two-fifths of the proceeds of the sale are to go to the Catholic Bishop of Monterey and Los Angeles to be used by him for the education of prospective priests; one-fifth to the Little Sisters of the Poor of Los Angeles; one-fifth to the Los Angeles Orphan Asylum; and and one-fifth to Convent of the Good Shepherd of Los Angeles.

The remainder of Mr. McGillin's estate, not otherwise provided for in the will, is to be given to his widow, Mrs. Mary M. McGillin, and be apportioned by her to other charitable institutions at her own discretion.

SOLDIER MISSING.

Mother Asks Police to Locate Victim of Shell Shock.

Mrs. May C. Wilbur asked the police yesterday to aid in finding her son, Private P. Wheeler, formerly of the Coast Artillery, who is suffering from shell shock and who, yesterday wandered from his home, 5323 Pasadena avenue.

The young man has been in several hospitals in the East and has only recently returned to Los Angeles. He is described as being 24 years old, about five feet, eight inches tall; dark complexoned, weighs about 130 pounds, has blue eyes and hair slightly gray. When last seen he was wearing a blue serge suit.

According to his mother, he is suffering from shell shock, or some similar mental disorder. He is fond of the mountains and is known to have attempted to buy a ticket at the Southern Pacific station Friday afternoon for some mountain resort. Anyone having any knowledge of his whereabouts is asked to communicate with his mother or the police officials.

BIG FIRE IN BAY CITY.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 8.—Firemen Edward Laherty and Patrick Ganley were slightly injured in a fire which destroyed most of the block bounded by Market, Dolores, Fourteenth and Church streets, a short distance from the main business district, today, causing damage estimated at $40,000. Mrs. William Norton, a cripple, was carried from one of the burning structures by Fireman G. C. Racaborn.

FINAL TRIBUTE TO BIG HEART.

Many Friends at Funeral of Edward Cyprian Davis.

Eulogies by Friend and by Minister Mark Rites.

Pioneer Railway Man, Noted Gambler Laid at Rest.

A simple, gray casket reposed in a bank of flowers in the little chapel at 4254 Moneta avenue yesterday afternoon. In the casket were the remains of Edward Cyprian Davis, the man who fed the fire of the first railway engine that entered Los Angeles fifty years ago and who was found dead in bed at his home, 193 West Forty-second place, last Thursday morning.

Clustered in the little chapel was a motley group of men, women and children. They had come to pay their last respects to a generous-hearted man who had befriended them in their darkest hours of need. Curly-haired tots clung to their mothers' hands as a sweet voice, hidden behind the floral bank, sang: "Lead Kindly Light, Amid th' Encircling Gloom."

Three Japanese with bristling pompadours and tortoise-rimmed spectacles sat next to a little, white-haired woman, her kindly face furrowed with age. A big, burly negro, with a huge diamond sparkling in his necktie, whispered to his neighbor, a very old man with flowing white beard and a long frock coat. And scattered through the solemn assemblage were gaily-dressed young women, dapper youths, hard-visaged men with smart-tailored suits and dropping mustaches, business men, men without any business or visible means of support, and more old women, clinging to the arms of white-haired patriarchs.

"ONE LOVED BY MANY."

Into the midst of this strange group of mourners the minister entered, Rev. W. G. Mills, pastor of the St. Paul's Presbyterian Church. In his opening prayer he spoke of Mr. Davis as "one loved by so many and who has been taken away," and he pleaded "that this service may be profitable to us in that which can only be brought to us in death." Again the voice hidden behind the bower sang:

"And I Shall Meet Him Face to Face."

Rev. Mr. Mills spoke benevolently of the life of the deceased, mentioning him as a dear friends, who, like Christ among the Pharisees, was accused for mingling with sinners.

A brief record of Mr. Davis's life, written by one of his closest friends, was then read. It stated that Edward Cyprian Davis was born in 1850 at Detroit, Mich. His father was an Englishman and his mother a French-Canadian, who was born of a family of ship-owners and it was in one of his uncle's ships that he spent several years at sea.

EARLY SACRIFICES.

"At the early age of 11 years," the record states, "his father having suffered severe reverses and having become an invalid, the boy went out into the world and shouldered the responsibilities of supporting his parents and sacrificing his own education to send his brothers and sisters to school.

"To his friends in his later life he gave money without stint and without hope of having it returned. His honor was unimpeachable. His word to a friend was in verity his bond. From the men highest in the ranks of the departments of justice down to the unfortunate who stood before the tribunal his counsel was sought for and his friendship esteemed. Most of the big men of State politics were among his personal friends, ex-Governors Pio Pico, Gage, Stoneman and Pardee, Senators Stephen White and Del Valle and others."

Mr. Davis came to California in 1870. The first train that ran into Los Angeles found him firing the engine. He later served as brakeman, conductor and telegrapher and was badly injured in a train accident, which caused his retirement from the railroad business.

"To his family he was the soul of gallantry, kindness and generosity," concludes the friend's eulogy. "Nothing which he could procure was too good for them. His clear mind, his capable hand to guide their destinies, will be missed."

Such was the respect paid yesterday to Edward Cyprian Davis, known throughout the Southwest as "Poker" Davis, professional gambler, whose name has appeared on police records for the last half-century.

CHILD'S LIFE SAVED BY MODEST DOG-HERO.

WOLFHOUND SNATCHES SMALL GIRL FROM PATH OF CAR IN NICK OF TIME.

In order that heroism might not go unrewarded, a lady who prefers to remain in the background of this story told how an humble hero dashed into the path of an onrushing automobile yesterday in Hollywood and saved a little girl from death. After the rescue he avoided publicity and the "plaudits of the multitude" by retiring to his home and busying himself with the routine of his daily life, a dog's life in the main, but with at least one glorious chapter. For he is a dog, a magnificent, big Russion wolfhound belonging to George Hale, 701 North Wilton place, Hollywood.

The minstrel who sang the wolfhound's praises over the office telephone wire says she was driving along Santa Monica boulevard, near Western avenue, when she saw a little girl run out in front of a machine that was traveling at a good rate of speed. The child failed to appreciate her danger until too late and it seemed that nothing could save her from being crushed by the oncoming car.

There was a flash of brown and white across the roadway and the big wolfhound seized the child's dress and dragged her to safety in the nick of time. She sat on the ground and shed frightened tears, while the dog put a shaggy, sympathetic paw on her knee.

Then they ran back together to play in the yard, where there are no nasty automobiles to mar their fun.

SHIPYARD LEASE UPHELD.

J. D. Anderson's recent request that the City Council compel the full use of the city lands now occupied by the Los Angeles Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company or declare the lease forfeited, met with adversity yesterday when the industrial committee of the San Pedro Chamber of Commerce made a report to the effect that the contract is very fair to both the city of Los Angeles and the Los Angeles Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company.

In his request that the lease be cancelled, Mr. Anderson set forth that the company pays but $100 a year rental for the tract. According to the report of the industrial committee, he neglected to say that at the expiration of the thirty-year lease all the improvements revert to the city, and that the company has already spent $673,185.85 for filling grounds, building fences, paving streets, dredging, building piers and bulkheads, docks, wharves, staging, shoring, scaffolding, slip ways and water mains.

The report in part is as follows:

"The total area in the lease is 69.33 acres, and taking the city's schedule of rates for rental of tide lands, we find that the rental of twenty acres or more is 1 cent per square foot per year, and figuring the 69.33 acres at this rate, amounts to $30,180.14 per annum and for the ten-year period, the rental would be $301,801.40, providing the entire area took the water-front rate. The rate as charged by the city of Los Angeles for non-water-front area is 25 per cent. lower than the above quoted rate, but taking the highest rate possible to be used by the city of Los Angeles for the period of ten years, the amount of rental would only be $301,801.40, and we find that the Los Angeles Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company, according to the above figures, have an investment of approximately $850,000, which will revert to the city of Los Angeles, and when credited to the Los Angeles Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company's rental account, if the same rates are used throughout the entire thirty years, the investment, as above mentioned, will pay their rental for the next twenty-eight years."

SPEECH BEFORE WRITING

First Requisite is Americanization, Says Training School Head.

Americanization of the foreigner by means of the spoken word—not waiting for his acquirement of the written English—is a necessity of the hour, according to John Collier, who spoke before the City Club yesterday on the subject of "Americanization."

Mr. Collier is the head of training schools for community workers in New York City, and is now in Los Angeles for a five weeks' course of lectures at the southern branch of the University of California. He spoke of the great value of community center work in stimulating higher ideals in economics and American citizenship, and dwelt upon the direct influence this class of work has upon the newcomer to the United States.

CAMERMAN SUES STAR.

Roscoe Arbuckle, film star, was made defendant in a suit filed yesterday by Frank Williams, who asks $1829.18 damages and salary of $125 a week from June 16, 1917. He charges breach of contract. Mr. Williams, a camerman, says he contracted to work for Mr. Arbuckle March 1, 1917, and was discharged in June, 1917.

VOTING TO END HARBOR STRIKE.

Trades Council Expected to Approve Referendum.

Attitude of Workers Forces Action on Walkout.

Locals Ready to Return if They Get the Chance.

The first official step toward ending the strike called last May against the Los Angeles Shipyard and Dry Dock Company at the harbor, and the Coast strike order directed against the Southwestern and Craig yards, was taken last night when a special meeting of the Metal Trades Council was called to order at the Labor Temple, in the harbor district. The session lasted until long past midnight, and the official result of a vote on the question of holding a referendum to decide if the strike is to be declared off will not be announced until some time today.

The meeting, according to council officials, was called for the purpose of deciding whether a referendum vote should be ordered to allow the members of the various organizations involved in the strike to indicate their will on the subject of returning to work. The action of the Boilermakers' Union, and the sentiments of some of the men associated with the union organizations, yesterday indicated that the referendum vote will be ordered and the men will vote to return to work.

While the Metal Trades Council cannot order the Coast strike called off, it being a strike authorized by the international officials of the organization, the county body can declare the strike against the Los Angeles Shipyard and Dry Dock Company ended. This strike was called by the Los Angeles County Metal Trades Council, and at this date remains an unauthorized strike, so far as the international body is concerned.

Although the local officials of the council declined to say what their action will be, it was freely predicted by organization men that the strike at the Los Angeles shipyards, as well as the other strikes in the shipyards of Southern California, will be terminated in a few days.

The situation, so far as it involves the boilermakers, last night showed that the men of the Los Angeles and the Craig yards have voted to return to work, while the men from the Southwestern yards voted to retain the yard on the "unfair list." Another meeting of the Southwestern men today may reverse this, officials of the union said yesterday.

The sentiment among the different crafts formerly employed at the three yards varies, their officials say, but the general trend of opinion of the men is that they ought to return to work, and the sooner, the better. The Metal Trades Council officials have been given to understand what the sentiment is, some of the local officials say, and will not oppose any action the men may want to take.

W ONA MORTON ASKS FOR REINSTATEMENT.

DISBARRED ATTORNEY STAGES COME-BACK, BUT FAILS TO CARRY HIS POINT.

W. Ona Morton, lawyer, staged a come-back in Judge Monroe's court yesterday. In March, 1918, he appeared in disbarment proceedings before Judge Monroe. The evidence then justified the court in disbarring him instead of suspending him from the practice of law. He asked to be reinstated.

Yesterday he came into the courtroom a new man. He was well groomed and the picture of health.

His attorneys, W. H. Anderson and Mattison C. Jones, called leading lawyers of the city to testify that Mr. Morton has genuinely reformed. Dr. C. C. Selecman, pastor of Trinity Methodist Church, South, was also a witness and he told of his long conversations with Mr. Morton, as a member of his church, both before and after his disbarment.

Attorneys Anderson and Jones showed to the court that the act that led to the disbarment was committed when Mr. Morton was not himself; that he had been a hard drinker, but that since his disbarment he has foresworn liquor and honestly tried to rehabilitate himself. They asked that he be reinstated in the practice of the law in this State.

Mr. Morton declared he is practicing law at Breckenridge, Tex., and doing well, but that at any moment his disbarment here may be brought up against him there. This publicity would, he said, ruin him.

Judge Monroe feelingly discussed the disbarment trial, and in summing up said that associates of Mr. Morton at the time had been suspended from the practice of law for three years; that their acts were less flagrant than Mr. Morton's and that the evidence justified the disbarment. It is too soon after judgment to ask for reinstatement, he believed.

But the main argument against reinstatement is, the court said, that an innocent party has not been repaid the money stolen from him by crooks.

A long telegram, received by Mr. Morton in the courtroom, was signed by several district and appellate court judges of Texas, indorsing Mr. Morton and speaking of his good conduct in Texas. The attorneys who testified well for him are J. Wiseman Macdonald, Milton K. Young and George J. Denis. John Luckenbach also referred to Mr. Morton as a reformed man.

The Los Angeles Bar Association, which opposed the reinstatement of Mr. Morton, was represented in court by Attorney Leonard Slosson.

REDS MUST GO, SAYS BLEDSOE.

Knight Templar Chief Calls Comrades to Duty.

Assails Bolshevism, I.W.W., Radical Unionism.

Reception Notable Event in Annals of Order.

The practical duty of the Knights Templar of today is to protect and defend, at all hazards, organized government, the bulwark of our civilization, Judge Benjamin Bledsoe, Right Eminent Grand Commander of the Knights Templar of California, declared last night at a reception given in his honor at Shrine Auditorium:

"There never was a greater need for the practical uses, aims and ideals of the Knights Templar than there is today. We must protect the social integrity of our nation, even in the face of death," he said.

"Radical socialism, Bolshevism, I.W.W.ism and criminal syndicalism must go and it is the duty of every Knight Templar to stamp out this vicious un-Americanism wherever it is found."

Judge Bledsoe said that this is not a government of men, but a government of laws.

"This was proven in Boston a few days ago when the people of Massachusetts re-elected a Governor who stood for law. The union-labor adherents on the Boston police force attempted to institute a rule by men, but the law-abiding citizens of that city overthrew the men and remained with the law of the land," he said.

Judge Bledsoe declared that the Knights Templar of today should be organized for the purpose of enforcing the law of the land. He said the present-day laws are adequate for any exigency and that it was the duty of the Knights to see that they are enforced.

Judge Bledsoe was tendered the reception last night in honor of his election as Eminent Grand Commander of the Knights Templar of this State. The reception was given by Los Angeles Commandery No. 9 and Golden West Commandery No. 43, both of this city. However, the commanderies from Pasadena, Glendale, Alhambra, Covina, Whittier, Santa Ana, Long Beach and San Bernardino participated in the entertainment.

DRILL AND DANCE.

Following the address commanderies formed on the main floor of the auditorium and to the stirring tune of "Onward Christian Soldiers," passed in review before the Grand Commander and Deputy Grand Commander Very Eminent Sir Robert Wankowski. Following the review a picked drill team from Los Angeles Commandery gave an exhibition drill.

Besides Judge Bledsoe, Gov. Stephens, Charles Malcolm, Grand Senior Warden; Perry Weidner, Grand Sword Carrier of the Grand Encampment of the United States, and Capt. Wankowski, were on the stage.

At the close of the exhibition drill a dance followed in which the hundreds of Knights, their wives and invited guests took part. Music for the occasion was furnished by the Golden West Commandery Band

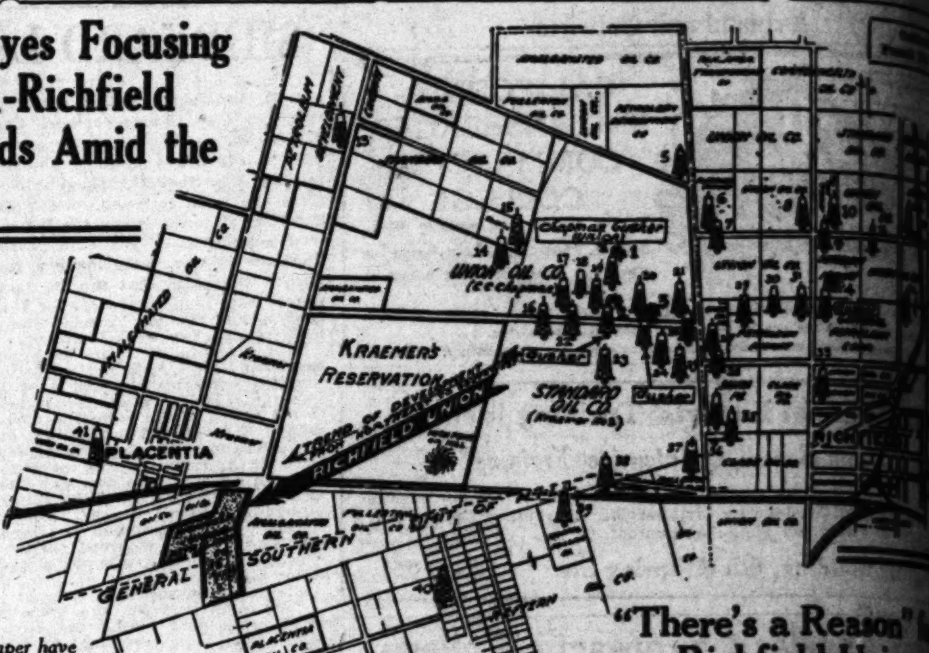
Thousands of Eyes Focusing on Placentia-Richfield Oil Gusher Fields Amid the Orange Groves

FLASH!

8 p.m.—Saturday evening.

"Richfield Union's" first offering oversubscribed.

Automobiles will leave office for field every day, including today. Please telephone for reservation. Our offices will be open every evening, beginning Monday until 9 p.m.



If the readers of this newspaper have followed us with the same care that we are endeavoring to exercise in pointing out what we consider the large possibilities of our future in a district, which, up to the present, has produced nothing but gushers, we invite a more thorough study of the map and the text matter that follows. We feel that you will catch a little of our "fever."

"There's a Reason" Richfield Union

The above map shows the exact location, from official blue print, of "Richfield Union's" two properties—one a drilling site in Richfield "just over the fence" from the Richfield-Yorba rig, now preparing to drill; the other approximately 36 acres adjoining Placentia

The "hog back" or "bulge" on which the four gushers of this district—Chapman Gusher, Standard Oil Gusher No. 1 and Gusher No. 2 and General Petroleum Gusher—are located extends in the general direction indicated by the dotted line marked "General southern limit of hill." It will be seen, therefore, that the Placentia property of "Richfield Union" in major portion, is squarely located on top of this "bulge." Standard Oil Gushers Nos. 1 & 2 are practically on the crest of the "bulge," while Chapman Gusher is on the eastern slope.

The land lying below the "general direction of the hill," is what is locally known as "the flat," where, it was boldly predicted, no part of the "oil pool" extended. Hefferin having been reported as having "come in," this prediction that put a serious blight on the "flat," appears, happily, to have been proven false.

The significance of the Hefferin well to this company lies in the fact that it fortifies the theories which we have held regarding this "Placentia-Richfield" field, and will have the effect, in our opinion, of increasing the value of our holdings far beyond what we have paid for the leases.

Thus, before Richfield Union actually begins drilling or even while making its initial offering of securities, it seems that these securities are to be given a value not claimed by them until Friday.

The "theories" held by this company are that the "hog back" that extends from north of Richfield to and beyond Placentia, to the westward, thus embracing "Richfield Union," is in a general sense, the outlines and general trend of an "anticline" beneath, in which are stored the oils which are coming up as "gushers."

Providing this theory shall prove approximately accurate, with the spreading of new rigs and producing wells, then, our theory proceeds, the highest point of the "hog back" will prove to be the "dome" of the anticline and probably the true center of the "oil pool." This is pointed out as theory, hence cannot be stated as a fact.

This much is true. The "high point of the hill" is on what is indicated as the "Kraemer reservation." If beneath this point, the dome or peak of the anticline and the center of the pool are ultimately proven to lie, then, by Nature's law of liquids, gravitation, bouyancy, etc., we conservatively believe that future development will prove that the oils below will be found to have flowed through friendly sands just as far to the wesward of the center toward and under "Richfield Union," as it has to the eastward or toward and under the Chapman gusher and its companion gushers.

"Richfield Union," is just about the same distance from this theoretical center of the theoretic pool as is Chapman gusher.

Hence, this company feels that it has every conservative right to believe and hope that it has an oil well beneath the point where it will drill its first well that the Union Oil Company had when it began drilling the Chapman gusher.

The fact that many persons have hurried to take advantage of our preliminary offering of stock compels us to point out that, in the light of this latest phase of the Hefferin well, the block will be quickly absorbed.

While our first offering of 50,000 shares of the par value $1.00, remains unsold they may be had for 50 cents.

News item from Los Angeles Herald, Friday, Nov. 7, adds new importance to already spreading signs of a "big pool"

"Oil was reported coming in strongly at the Hefferin well, in the Richfield district this morning............

"According to the report, oil began coming in at a depth of 3190 feet. The well was immediately shut off and blocked up to the 3000 foot depth. . . .

"Prediction was made today that the well would have a flow of from 1000 to 3000 barrels, but conservative oil men said this could be regarded only as an opinion. That oil has been struck no one doubts, but in what quantity will not be known for a week or more, it is estimated."

Bulletin

At 7 o'clock Saturday night, following a day of what honestly may be called a "wild scramble" to invest in "Richfield Union," it became evident that reservations of our 50,000 shares offered, at a preliminary price of 50 cents, had so far over-subscribed the block that a decided reduction in the amounts reserved may be compulsory. Formal announcement on this point will be made later. Also regarding future offerings.

This places our 40 acres on the main structure in the center of the great TEXAS field. We are surrounded by producing wells. There are approximately five thousand wells in this field.

Three Properties in Three Big Texas Oil Fields Win Favor of Many Who Recognize Opportunity.

Drilling Orders for First Well on Five Acres in Burkburnett Field Already Going Ahead Full Speed

This first drilling site land adjoins "Block 97," on which big "Texas Chief" well is located.

This location in itself should be sufficiently strong assurance that a "producer" will be brought in, as "dry holes" are far between in this rich portion of a rich field.

A time limit of two weeks has been placed on this $1.00 par offering

COMANCHE COUNTY

In center of production and near famous "Duke Knowles."

Because we have arranged for placing portions of our allotment of this stock in other cities, we shall not guarantee to fill orders after the date set for its withdrawal.

We are recommending this stock for the reason that we accepted our allotment, namely, because Brown-Gilbert is capitalized at only $150,000.

The undeveloped holdings of the company, as land, comprising 25 acres in all, we believe are worth every penny of that amount—or speedily will be, when the first actual drilling begins.

We do not believe you have had a better oil proposition—if so good a one—offered you from Texas.

We, therefore, recommend the investment as a "good buy" with strong promise of profit.

FACT AND COMMENT.

While the reason is not entirely clear, it is a generally admitted fact that considerable new home building is discouraged by the tendency of many builders and material men, in private conversations and otherwise, to create the impression that building prices must remain "unsettled and wobbly" for a long time to come and that an investor about to embark on a home-building venture will necessarily find himself on an uncharted sea. On more than one occasion recently the Fact and Comment man has found that architects after working painstakingly to work out plans for clients, have seen them slip away and decide to defer their building indefinitely because some contractor or material man had impressed them that material prices might go "away out of sight" any day.

If the purpose of the person so speaking was to put a damper on people's building hopes, it could hardly be done more effectually than by throwing out hints of higher prices than now prevail. It need hardly be suggested that the psychological effect of fear so created would be to quickly drive the prospective investor into the handiest hole, there to stay until the skies cleared. What the public interested in new building would like to know now more than anything else is that an honest effort is being made to stabilize prices. The average home builder, being perfectly aware that present prices are high and are likely to remain so for some time to come, is not adverse to going ahead with his plans if assured that overnight he is not likely to be caught in a squeeze. But once made suspicious that he is being imposed upon and made the "goat," his plans are likely to be laid aside among the cobwebs.

Another tendency of contractors—not all fortunately—is to add something to their building estimates in "anticipation" of some material price increase which may or may not come. The disposition thus to "play safe" at the client's expense is neither based on sound business judgment nor is it likely to work to the contractor's advantage in the long run. It has the effect also of strengthening the home investor's belief that, in the face of a probable rising market, the time for him to build is not ripe.

Nearing the Finish.

All Santa Monica is aroused over the prospect of a successful windup of the campaign to raise the balance of the money needed to erect the proposed $2,000,000 beach hotel at Wilshire boulevard and Ocean avenue, Santa Monica. Tomorrow night the working forces of the Santa Monica Beach Association and the Chamber of Commerce will rally to complete their plans for the final drive to make up the balance of the $250,000 needed to start the building enterprise. Forceful citizens, filled with the idea that Santa Monica must have this hotel, will take part in the proceedings, and the outlook is bright for a meeting brimful of "ginger" and enthusiasm.

The Beach Association, which realized the need of such a hotel several years ago, has laid its plans with great care, a fact which makes the success of the venture seem assured. A small minority, however, has as yet been slow to grasp the advantage to Santa Monica and, in fact, all of Southern California, through the possession of a hotel of the size and scope of the proposed structure, although it is felt that tomorrow's meeting will have the effect of uniting all the business and property interests necessary to complete the plan, and make possible the early building of the structure. It has already been agreed between the hotel promoters and the Linnard interests that the hotel, when completed, will be run under the general Linnard management, thus adding an important beach link to the chain of fine hostelries extending from coast to coast. This arrangement, in the belief of the interests behind the venture, will insure its financial success from the start and thereby put Santa Monica in close association with the lucrative tourist travel flowing to Southern California.

Extending the Chain.

Reports coming from San Diego say that D. M. Linnard and his associates are about to announce a plan to erect a magnificent tourist hotel in that city to be run in connection with the Linnard chain. The proposed site is said to be at Point Loma not far from the site of Mrs. Katherine Tingley's Point Loma settlement, overlooking the Pacific and within easy reach of the mainland. It's exact location has not been divulged, although both Mr. Linnard and his local architect have been on the ground recently, and since their return to Los Angeles statements have emanated from sources close to them that building plans are being prepared.

Mr. Linnard has had his eyes on San Diego as a probable location for a tourist hotel ever since the opening of his Atlantic City enterprise, and it would occasion little surprise if he would now go through with the plan, especially as the interests that backed the San Diego exposition are known to strongly favor a new tourist hotel there. The completion of the San Diego and Arizona Railroad, linking that city with the Southern Pacific, together with a new hotel, would give the southern city two projects long desired by its business leaders.

Building Aids.

All angles of building, together with plans for speeding up local building operations, will be discussed at the annual convention of the Southern California Lumber Dealers' Association at the Clark Hotel, this city, on Saturday, November 15. In his communication to members announcing the meeting, Secretary F. L. Morgan suggests that "every man who has anything on his chest either to help or criticise, to stand up and get it off." The business meeting will be called at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, followed by a dinner at 6:30. It is expected that from 250 to 300 members will be present.

NEW HOMES.

Company Acquires Large Site on Which to Build Bungalows.

The Edwards and Wildey Company report the purchase from the Sullivan estate of twenty acres immediately west of the Normal School between Santa Monica boulevard and Melrose avenue.

The property will be subdivided into 120 building lots, which will be improved by that number of bungalows, the new owners having commissioned Architect F. M. Tyler to prepare building plans. In connection with the improvement, Kenmore and Alexandria avenues will be extended and water, gas and sewer pipes installed. The improvements will represent an expenditure of $500,000, according to the Edwards & Wildey Co.

NEW PLANT.

Auto "Wing" Makers to Enter New Building.

The M. & M. Manufacturing Company expects soon to remove from its present quarters at 2217 South Main street to the new plant being erected for it at 3647 Moneta avenue. The new building is a two-story brick structure, plans for which were prepared by Architect H. L. Pierce. John A. Miller has the building contract.

The building will cost approximately $20,000. It will be equipped for manufacturing a special type of "wings" for automobiles. The company employs thirty workmen.

NEW FACTORY.

The W. H. Rees Company reports leasing the building at 1017-19 South Figueroa street for Burton E. Green to the Patsy Frok and Romper Company. The new factory will employ 150 operatives.

CHAMBER PREPARES FOR TOURIST RUSH.

BUREAU LISTING ALL AVAILABLE ROOMS IN PRIVATE RESIDENCES.

Rooms in 247 Los Angeles homes were thrown open to strangers in the city during the first six days in which the newly established tourist housing department in the Chamber of Commerce has been in existence. The tabulation was made yesterday, and officials of the chamber were gratified at the manner in which the public is helping to accommodate strangers.

A large number of these rooms were rented by the chamber bureau, although it was expected that the demand for the extra housing space would not develop for several weeks. Inquiries at the chamber, however, indicated that the need for all available rooms already is being felt and that it is the city's business to be ready when the winter rush begins.

Reports from railroad agencies, chambers of commerce, tourist bureaus and other sources indicate that travel to Southern California will be unprecedented during the coming winter. The United States Railroad Administration has called especial attention to Southern California as a winter resort.

Persons having rooms available for tourists are urged to list them at once before the heavy rush starts. The work of the bureau will be greatly facilitated if it can arrange to have thousands of rooms listed and ready for occupancy at a moment's notice.

DELTA LAND SALES.

The sale of 248 acres of Delta land in the Webb tract of the California Delta Farms, Inc., in the Sacramento Valley for $60,189 to Clark J. Bonner of Los Angeles, is reported by Arthur C. Parsons, sales agent. Another purchase of 253 acres in the Bacon tract for $59,650 was made by the O. H. Churchill Estate of this city. The total sales, according to Mr. Parsons, aggregated $6,100,000. One of the largest buyers was Victor Hualde, who has purchased, in two lots, 770 acres.

NEW "Y" BUILDING.

Fine Structure at Long Beach is Under Way.

Construction of the new building at Fifth street and American avenue, Long Beach, for the Y.M.C.A. has started and an effort will be made to complete the structure in the new year. HOME BUILDING HAS THE CALL.

Many Fine Residences Add to City's Charm.

Unique Hollywood Place for Film Star.

Twelve New Houses Going up in Beverly Hills.

Home construction "still" holds a large share of attention in the Los Angeles building field, several hundred thousand dollars worth of new residential structures being under way, while plans for others of the more or less pretentious types are being prepared by local architects. The prevailing fine weather is giving considerable impetus to this class of building—this and the unusual demand by newcomers to Southern California for distinctive homes. Builders and architects believe that home building will go forward steadily through the winter and well into the coming spring.

Unique among local homes is that being erected for Hallam Cooley, noted film star of the Paramount-Artcraft Company, at 7010 Lanewood avenue, Hollywood, from plans prepared by Harry G. Koerner. Charles D. Wagner has the building contract. The house, of rough plaster exterior, is designed in the Hopi Indian style, the owner and architect having studied the lore of these ancient Arizona cliff Indians to obtain the desired building effects. The building, containing ten living rooms, guest chambers and servants' quarters and three bathrooms, stands on sightly grounds overlooking the city. Along the front between the first and second stories is a row of rough Eucalyptus beams technically known as "stickouts," which have been especially aged to produce the effect of antiquity. Beam ceilings of rough-sawed redwood feature the living and dining-rooms.

The patio at the rear, in the center of which is a fountain, adds an unusually charming background to the dwelling. Overlooking this off the bedrooms on the second floor is an iron balcony. A rose garden is arranged at the rear of the breakfast-room. The estimated cost is approximately $20,000. Mr. Cooley a great admirer of distinctive forms of architecture, intends to harmonize the building plant with a front garden in which will be planted cactus varieties exclusively.

Twelve new homes will soon be erected at Beverly Hills by the Rodeo Land and Water Company, ranging in price from $15,000 to $20,000. Several of them will be for local clients. They will be designed in the French, Spanish and Italian renaissance styles of architecture, each residence to be distinctive in its interior and exterior arrangement. Plans are now being prepared by Frank Meline, who will supervise the construction.

Another attractive home will be that for Charles Eyton, a two-story frame and plaster residence to be erected on Vine street north of Franklin avenue, Hollywood. Architect Frederick J. Soper has prepared the plans. The estimated cost is $20,000. It will contain ten rooms, four bathrooms, sunroom and two sleeping-porches.

F. L. Blodgett has commissioned Architect C. H. Russell to prepare plans for a hollow-tile residence to be erected at Crescent boulevard and Franklin avenue, West Hollywood. It will contain seven rooms and four bathrooms, will have a two-story hollow-tile garage, and will cost approximately $20,000.

Plans are being prepared for two homes in the Richmond Hill tract, one for F. T. Briles at the corner of Council and Berendo streets, and one for Mrs. J. C. Sherwood at 210 North Catalina street. H. H. Whiteley has been commissioned to design the Briles residence and Harold Bowles the one for Mrs. Sherwood.

TO FIGHT ARMY DEPOT BATTLE.

Rotary Club Joining Drive to Keep Office Here.

Quartermaster Expected to Decide Matter Soon.

Data on October Purchases Favor Los Angeles.

Among local organizations that are taking up the fight to retain the Los Angeles quartermaster depot is the Rotary Club, as shown in the following letter, received yesterday by The Times:

"In the matter of keeping the quartermaster's depot in Los Angeles permanently, let me say that I am heartily in sympathy with this movement on the part of the various organizations in Los Angeles and I will do my utmost to urge an expression of approval from the board of directors of the club at their next meeting November 11 and from the club as a whole at its next meeting, November 14.

"I am sure the members of the club will heartily indorse this movement, as the business men of Los Angeles appreciate fully the value of the depot as an asset to the community.

"Very truly yours,
(Signed) "JOHN BLOESER,
"Vice-president."

Resolutions will probably be adopted by the club at its next meeting and immediately forwarded to Washington, to be used by California Congressmen in their fight to get the order closing the depot revoked.

FOR QUICK ACTION.

The date for re-hearing of the case has not yet been set by Quartermaster-General Rogers, but it is believed the matter will be considered within a week. The Quartermaster-General, it is understood, has requested the local office to forward an estimate of probable expenses of the office for the quarter beginning January 1.

Local business men are optimistic as to the outcome of the hearing of the case at Washington, but pending its settlement, no effort will be spared by local organizations and business men to give the Washington representatives all the support possible.

A comparison of the purchases made by the Los Angeles, San Francisco and Portland depots in October shows that Los Angeles as a purchasing point compares very favorably with other places on the Pacific Coast. Although authority to purchase perishable articles of subsistence was taken away from the local office at the time the order closing the depot came from Washington, the Los Angeles office has been authorized from time to time to purchase certain articles of subsistence for the camps of Southern California. The greater part of the supplies for these camps have, however, been shipped from San Francisco during the past month.

PRICES CONTRASTED.

Among the food supplies purchased during the past month, breakfast bacon was bought by the Los Angeles office for 43¾ cents per pound. For this commodity the Portland office paid 44 cents per pound, while the San Francisco office paid 46½ cents. For lima beans in bulk, the Portland office paid 16 cents per pound, as compared with 13¼ cents paid by the local office. In No. 2 cans, the Portland office bought lima beans at 20 5-6 cents per can, while the Los Angeles office paid only 14 cents per can. Onions were bought by the San Francisco depot at price ranging from 3¾ cents per pound, as compared with the purchases made by the local depot of 3¼ to 3½ cents. Potatoes, of which large supplies are purchased monthly for California camps, were bought by the San Francisco office at almost 4 cents per pound, as against 2 5-6 cents paid by this office.

These supplies are bought in large quantities for army camps from month to month. The results last month indicate that these supplies can be bought more cheaply in Southern California, while the expense involved in transportation from San Francisco will be saved if this office is maintained.

NEW RAILROAD FOR NEW TOWN.

California Southern to Run Branch Feeder Out from Blythe to Ripley.

The California Southern Railroad Company, J. M. Neeland, president, with offices in the Investment Building in this city, announced yesterday that it will extend its railroad from Blythe, in the Palo Verde Valley, Riverside county, to a point nine miles south. Contracts for material have been let and work will probably be completed before the end of the year.

The extension will tap a new town, which will be called Ripley, for E. P. Ripley, president of the Santa Fe, with which railroad the California Southern connects about eighty miles this side of Parker, on the Phoenix line. The new town will be in the center of the valley and has already the promise of sufficient development to warrant the extension.

BOOKS FOR CHILDREN. IS LIBRARY FEATURE.

WEEK FOR YOUNGSTERS STARTS TOMORROW IN PLAN FOR BETTER READING.

Tomorrow is the beginning of children's book week at the Los Angeles Public Library. The week is set aside for special effort to get more and better books for the children into the homes. It has the indorsement of the American Library Association, American Booksellers' Association and the Boy Scouts of America.

The Public Library takes the subject of books for children so seriously that a librarian may not suggest a book to a child without first taking a special course to fit her as a childrens' librarian; and the city of Los Angeles gives a separate civil service examination for childrens' librarians.

The Public Library issues from time to time short printed lists on the best books for boys and girls. These lists are nothing but lanterns to light children on their way through the unknown land of books and never a dull book goes down on one of them. This year the lists are divided up by different countries.

One reading list is called "Merrie England;" another "Under Three Flags, Belgium, Italy and Greece;" a third, "Glorious France" and so on until the giants, wizards and witches and great heroes of all countries have made their bows. These attractive lists may be had by requesting them from the children's department, Los Angeles Public Library.

REFUSE TO QUIT JOBS.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

ANAHEIM, Nov 7.—R. E. and Lee Baker, negro boys who have been shining shoes in Anaheim for several years, will continue to do so, at 15 cents per, despite the fact that they have just inherited a twenty-acre ranch at Riverside, said to be worth $10,000.

The boys refused to get excited over their new possession and say they will stick to their job. They have just been informed by their attorney that the estate of their father, John H. Baker of Riverside, has just been closed and that they are the owners of the twenty-acre ranch.

FAKE MASON WANTED IN NUMEROUS CITIES.

INDICTED HERE FOR FRAUDS, HAS LENGTHY RECORD IN THE MIDDLE WEST.

Which State will have the right to try Charles V. Zernack, indicted by the Los Angeles county grand jury, for using his former Masonic affiliations to defraud members of that order is a question that arose yesterday at the Sheriff's office. As soon as the news circulated through the Middle West that Zernack, also known as Dr. T. J. Peterson, Charles V. Sterling, Dr. Mark A. Gier and by other names, was in jail here, Sheriff Cline began to receive telegrams and letters from various police departments and sheriff's office departments and sheriffs' of-

In a letter received yesterday from Chief of Police Mooney of Chcago, Deputy Sheriffs Lips and Anderson, who arrested Zernack, are advised that the man is wanted in Chicago. Chief Mooney says Zernack escaped when his brother, William P. Zernack, was arrested. The brother, says Chief Mooney, is now serving a term in the house of correction.

Similar information comes from the authorities at Kansas City, Denver and other Middle West cities. A. W. Armstrong of Knoxville, Iowa, wrote that he was about to give Zernack $625 and was saved by the timely interference of the police. Information also came that the post-office inspectors at Chicago have been looking for Zernack.

He has been indicted by the grand jury here and his case set for hearing so, according to local authorities, there is little chance that he will be tried in another State.

RED CROSS WORKERS WILL HOLD REUNION.

FORCES THAT PUT BIG DRIVE "OVER" LAST YEAR WILL MEET ARMISTICE EVE.

Captains of the Red Cross campaign committee who made so notable a success of the Red Cross drive here last year will meet at the Alexandria tomorrow night and celebrate Armistice eve. A prize has been offered for the captain who rallies most of his team for the event, and all are looking forward to fraternizing with their former assistants and co-workers.

Many new friendships and social relations were created among those who participated in last year's campaign. One of the main purposes of the reunion is to bring the members into closer touch with one another.

Through this committee more than $1,000,000 was collected in this region for relief work and thousands and thousands of tons of clothing, magazines, books, tobacco and delicacies were sent to our troops at the front and to home camps.

Harry Haldeman, head of the recent Red Cross drives, says: "It is a great pleasure for me to look back over the work that has been accomplished by our Red Cross teams in past drives, to remember the many men and women who stepped into the front ranks of our organization, contributing time and money to this great cause and devoting many hours to this work. It will give an added pleasure for these valiant and patriotic workers to meet again. I expect this reunion to be a rousing event. I know the captains of the respective teams will again step to the front and do their bit in making it such."

JUDGE DELIVERS BOOZE LECTURE.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SANTA ANA, Nov. 7.—Appearing in court on crutches as the result of a street-car accident in Los Angeles, where he now resides, Fred Meyers, formerly of Ocean Beach, San Diego, was today put on three years' probation by Superior Judge Z. B. West. Meyers had been convicted of driving an automobile while intoxicated, following an accident at El Toro in which the car he was driving turned turtle and in which he, his wife and a friend were bruised.

Meyers told the court that he sometimes took a drink of hot whisky to break up a cold and also drank cold beer on occasions.

"There is no greater delusion under which a man can suffer than that which leads him to believe that by taking a cold drink of beer he can cool himself off or by taking a drink of hot whisky he can rid himself of a cold," Judge West informed him.

Under the terms of the probationary order, Meyers is to refrain from drinking any kind of liquor and is not to have it in his possession.

REDLANDS HAS RAIN.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

REDLANDS, Nov. 7.—A light rain here today showed a precipitation of .19 of an inch which makes to total for the season 2.26 inches. Last year at this time the rainfall totaled 1.78.

The fall was so light that no harm or no great benefit to growing crops is reported. Indications for tomorrow are fair and cooler.

"CHAIN" SYSTEM TO SERVE AUTOISTS.

Construction will soon start on the first of a group of buildings to be erected in Los Angeles and other California cities for the Standard Garage Company, a newly organized enterprise which will conduct a "chain" system of garages at points convenient for the motorist. Behind the enterprise are New York capitalists associated with Frank L. Dickinson of Los Angeles, who built the John Alden apartments and other local buildings. The company will be capitalized for $1,500,000.

The first of these garage and service buildings will be erected at Hollywood boulevard and Western avenue. This will be the "parent" unit, where the company's employees will be trained in accordance with a fixed policy. The building will be of concrete and brick construction, and will contain service department, offices, storage and repair shops, sales department, paint shop and rest rooms. The entire upper floor will be occupied by the paint shop, and top which will be reached by an incline concrete driveway. A distinctive type of architecture will be maintained in the construction of the twenty-five or more similar buildings to be erected as soon as sites are selected. Plans were prepared by Edward L. Mayberry.

The company's plan is to equip all its buildings so that efficient service may be given to motorists at all times. This service will include every motoring need. While the system will be run under a central management, each unit will be in charge of a manager. The company will handle one standard tire, one battery, one paint, etc., and, according to those interested in the enterprise, will introduce many innovations helpful to the automobilist.

"POOR LITTLE RICH GIRL" TO BE TRIED.

JUDGE SAYS JURY WILL DECIDE IF MISS MARSHALL IS GUILTY IN KILLING.

Eloise Marie Marshall, 19, called the "poor little rich girl," was held to answer yesterday by Justice Summerfield for manslaughter in connection with the death of Samuel Lund in an automobile accident on October 27 at South Park avenue and Fifty-sixth street.

Miss Marshall said that as she drove her automobile by the side of a street car Mr. Lund got off the street car in front of her automobile threw his arms in the air and fell in front of her car. Deputy District Attorney Heinecke asserted her car struck Lund and caused the man's death. A coroner's jury did not accuse Miss Lund.

Guy Eddie, arguing on behalf of the girl, held that according to the testimony of the street car conductor, the automobile could not have been going faster than ten miles an hour. Justice Summerfield held that the case all hinged on whether or not Miss Marshall was driving with due caution and carefulness, and that a jury should try the facts. The court held her on bonds of $1000, which had been furnished, pending her trial in Superior Court.

Only a Cold.

Are you ill? is often answered, "Oh, it's only a cold," as if a cold was a matter of little consequence, but people are beginning to learn that a common cold is a matter not to be trifled with, that some of the most serious diseases start with a cold. As soon as the first indication of a cold appears take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Remember that the sooner you get rid of your cold the less the danger, and this remedy will help you to throw it off.—[Advertisement.

Ample ground has been set aside for a recreation center for the workmen, and here will be installed tennis courts and an athletic field. The grounds will be beautified with lawns, flowers and shrubbery. In each of the buildings will be locker rooms and shower baths. It is also planned to have the assembly rooms equipped for holding entertainments and meetings.

According to present plans, the production of Moreland trucks will be tripled with the completion of the new factory. The company's intention is to make a strong bid for business in Latin-America, the Orient, New Zealand and Austrialia. In line with other progressive plans, the company expects soon to announce its intention of producing and marketing a passenger car and tractor.

THREE ARRESTED FOR SHOW-WINDOW RAIDS.

MEXICANS HELD AS BURGLARS HAVE GOODS STOLEN BY GLASS SMASHERS.

Jose Duarte, Enriquez Florez and Julio L. Castellano, all Mexicans, believed by the police to be the window-smashing burglars who have operated downtown for a number of weeks and have secured loot valued at almost $10,000, were locked in the City Jail yesterday. The three Mexicans, all of whom attempted to escape when arrested, refused to explain where they secured a quantity of jewelry found in their possession.

According to Police Detectives Wood, Murphy, Gamash and Burgess, who made the arrests, a number of pieces of jewelry taken from downtown stores by the window-smashing burglars were found in the prisoners' pockets and a quantity was recovered from pawnshops.

Burglaries are said by the police to have been committed by the three at the followings places: Benetiez Jewelry Company, 642 North Spring street; J. C. Wilson Company, 1004 West Ninth street; the jewelry store and curio shop of Albert Babdaty, 841 South Broadway; the Dunlap Clothing Company, 739 West Seventh street; the Colburn Fur Company, 806 South Broadway, and the Christianson and Curtis Jewelry Company, 711 West Sixth street.

WAR IS DECLARED ON RATS IN COURTHOUSE.

ORDERS OUT TO EXTERMINATE PESTS THAT RUIN PAPER AND WOMEN'S NERVES.

The Courthouse has long been famous for its pigeons; now it has become notorious for its rats. The rodents in the Courthouse and the Hall of Records have become an object of official investigation.

The Board of Supervisors has official knowledge that not only have valuable documents been eaten by rats in the judgment department, but that women deputies in the County Clerk's department have been badly scared by the animals.

Friday afternoon one of the women deputies sat rigid in her chair, gasped in affright and then screamed. The next moment she flew to a man deputy and clutching him by the arm, expressed by long-drawn-out "Ohs!" that something had happened.

A large rat on a foraging expedition had darted down the stairs leading from the office of County Clerk Lampton. The woman deputy's uproar instead of startling the rat only made it more bold. It sped across the floor. Then began a mad chase. Clerk Kinney seized a ruler; the rat fled for safeyt under a desk; it was dug out and killed by Mr. Kinney.

The Supervisors immediately referred the matter to the head of the janitor's department, Maj. Robinson, with instructions to waylay, besiege, circumvent, beguile, coax, trap, electrocute, kidnap, seize or otherwise apprehend and destroy the rodents.

TWO HIGHWAY PLANS ARE GIVEN APPROVAL.

The Board of Supervisors yesterday approved the plans and specifications for one and one-half miles of the Harbor Truck boulevard through the city of Compton. The estimated cost of this work is $101,670. The highway will be twenty-four feet wide, with an eight-inch base.

The Supervisors also approved plans and specifications for the new highway from Castaic to the Ventura county line. The distance is six miles and the estimated cost $119,000.

Bids will be advertised for both constructions.

A WONDERFUL BUY,

ONE BLOCK FROM WILSHIRE BLVD.

White plaster, semi-Italian type, 11 beautiful rooms, 2 splendidly-equipped bathrooms, and every feature that would be found in a house at far more than this price. Circumstances compel the owner of this lovely home to sacrifice it.

It is located on a large corner lot, faces east, and also has southern exposure. House is in perfect condition, was built by day labor and of the best in materials.

See this house Sunday, it will be worth your while. Located at 699 S. Harvard Blvd. Open for inspection from 2 until 5 Sunday afternoon. Or phone this office for further information, or an appointment at any other time.

A CHARMING DUTCH COLONIAL HOME,

IN PELLISSIER SQUARE.

This really distinctive home is constructed of the very best in materials—is unusual in design, and has some of the most beautiful interior decorating and woodwork finish to be found in Los Angeles.

The house, which was built for a private residence, was completed just 6 months ago—it contains 9 rooms and 3 baths. The lot is 78x150, and is located on one of the finest streets in Pellissier Square, being 722 SOUTH SERRANO AVENUE.

This home is elegantly furnished, the approximate valuation of the furniture being about $15,000, and which can be secured at a real sacrifice if the buyer so desires. In view of the present high cost of furniture and the perfect taste which has been displayed in the choosing of these furnishings, this is an item worthy of serious consideration. As for the house, it is without a doubt the best house for the money in Wilshire—and a really delightful home. Open for inspection from 2 until 5, Sunday afternoon.

IN PELLISSIER SQUARE,

TWO HOMES, ABSOLUTELY DIFFERENT.

One of these homes is of the beautiful French chateau type. Architecturally correct, and located in the heart of the most beautiful and highly restricted residence squares in the city. The other offering is of the pure Colonial design — by the same architect, and for those who admire this style of house—it will be JUST WHAT YOU HAVE LOOKED FOR.

Each house contains 10 rooms, and 3 baths, two of which are tiled. The interior finish is of ivory, with mahogany trim, and the walls are finished in the most delicate of pastel shades.

The lots are 70x150, and face east. These exceptional properties are located at Nos. 729 and 735 S. Hobart Blvd. and will be open for inspection all day Sunday. For further particulars call this office.

This is, without doubt, the best buy in the Wilshire district today. Eleven rooms and two modern bathrooms, solid mahogany and white enamel finish; five bedrooms maid's room and two sleeping porches; twin gas furnaces, automatic heater, double garage, etc. Lot 76x150. 1742 WELLINGTON ROAD.
$18,000.
In every respect this is one of the most charming Dutch Colonial homes we have ever had the pleasure of offering. A trim red brick walk leads to the hospitable colonial porch and entrance. The entrance is into a large hallway, from which rises the colonial stairway. On the right are the spacious living-room and sun room; on the left the artistic dining-room, separated from the kitchen by the butler's pantry. At the end of the hall is a delightful breakfast room. The second floor has an exceptionally well-arranged floor plan of four good-sized bedrooms, sewing-room and two baths, and maid's room and bath. The satin-finished enamel obtains throughout the house. Beautiful Japanese garden. Garage with chauffeur's quarters. This place is really artistic, in fine condition and well built in every respect. 75-foot lot. The furniture and hangings are in keeping and may be purchased if desired. If you are looking for a home, satisfactory in every respect, here it is. Shown by appointment.

A BEAUTIFUL HOME, COMPLETELY FURNISHED.
The early English type of architecture prevails in this house of brick and plaster construction, on a lot 150x150 feet. The interior is one of the most pleasing we have ever seen, with silk-tapestried walls, artistic lighting fixtures, finish in the choicest of hardwoods and white enamel, and an ideally arranged house. Two of the baths are tiled; there are four big sleeping-rooms and sleeping porch on the second floor; maid's room and bath on the first. A very large living-room, cozy library, spacious dining-room, delightful little breakfast-room. More than $10,000 was spent in improving the grounds, which contain the loveliest of roses, carefully selected shrubs and quantities of other flowers. Quaint little tea-house, a complete laundry isolated from the house, 2-car garage. And the furnishings and furniture are thoroughly in keeping with a house of this character. $20,000 worth of oriental rugs and an unusually fine collection of oil paintings. The place represents an expenditure in excess of $100,000, and is a rare buy at $70,000. Shown by appointment only.

McNAIR PLACE.

McNair place extends from Gardner to Crescent avenue, having a half-mile frontage on Santa Monica blvd. Lots facing on such well-known streets as Crescent, Orange Grove, Friend, Genesee, Fulton, Stanley, Curson, Pacific and Gardner avenue.

The car line runs on Santa Monica blvd. Cars run to and from Los Angeles, Hollywood, Beverly Hills and the ocean.

Nowhere in Hollywood or Los Angeles can lots be had at these prices, adjoining as they do such excellent car service, and on a boulevard that is fast becoming one of the busiest thoroughfares in the northwest section of Los Angeles.

Fifteen or twenty fine bungalows are now under construction, with as many more to start immediately. Have you seen them?

Home builders and builders have been so attracted by our prices, street car service, wonderful view of the mountains and nearness to both a grammar and a high school that they are buying these lots in preference to lots in other sections in West Hollywood.

On November 15 the prices are to be raised 5 per cent. on west-front lots. Present buyers are appreciating the advantage of a rising market.

These lots are going fast. Ruminate!

LONG BEACH.

A FIRST-CLASS FAMILY HOTEL.

THE NEED OF GREATER LONG BEACH.

BELMONT HEIGHTS THE PLACE.

The natural growth of greater Long Beach is eastward and its rapid movement in that direction is best evidenced by the many new homes being built east of Redondo avenue, yet not one-tenth of the contemplated building has commenced.

The place for the ideal Long Beach family hotel is in the heart of a fast growing residence section, near and overlooking the ocean, with a beach easily reached by young and old alike, and where autos can be driven along the water's edge. Somewhere close to Belmont Pier, the city's most beautiful and most expensive pleasure pier is the ideal location. The full block on Livingston Drive, bounded by Mira Mar on the west, Termino on the east and First street on the north is the logical site.

Drive east on Ocean ave. to Belmont Pier and on to Livingston drive, look at the one full vacant block available for this purpose, south of Broadway between Grand and Prospect. Livingston drive from Termino to Prospect is for residences only.

OIL SHORTAGE IS INCREASING—
No better investment can be made now than test holes in new territory. The country needs all the oil you can find, and you have a safe and sure market.
But don't resort to old-fashioned methods of drilling, with large and expensive machinery. Never forget the cost of a hole increases in the approximate proportion to the "square of its diameter."
So drill smaller diameter holes with the latest and most efficient portable machines ever built for territories from 800 to 2500 feet deep. Write us for particulars and circular.

Invest Your Surplus in a Texas Lease Syndicate

You can buy an interest in a syndicate owning the gas and oil rights upon 9656 acres of Texas lands—checkerboarded over 9 counties, where a large amount of drilling for oil is going on. These leases are distributed as follows: 1280 acres each in Culberson, Brewster, Terrell, Val Verde, [illegible] Kinney and Webb, 320 acres in Edwards and 375 in Wilson—totaling 9656 acres. Leases in the same counties are being sold in Texas at [illegible] per acre, and prices are going up because new wells are going down.

The Sinclair Oil Company has just paid $1.50 per acre for 20,000 acres in Val Verde and Kinney Counties—close to our leases, and they are preparing to drill. The Keller Oil Company has started a 4000-foot well [illegible] miles south of our Kinney County block. These things are responsible for prices going up. There is said to be from 100 to 150 deep test wells going down in this section of Texas—21 in Brewster County alone.

These leases are on form 88 running 5 years from May, 1919, carry an annual rental from 10 to 25 cents per acre, except $1.00 in Wilson. Some of the wells now going down are bound to bring in big production—for geological indications claim it is gusher territory. When this comes these same leases may sell again at astonishing prices—it will be history repeating itself.

These 9656 acres of leases are divided into 96.56 parts, or units, at $100 each. The owners of these units, or parts of the whole, will share equally in any profits made by sub-leasing, resale or other developments upon the entire 9656 acres—an unusual opportunity to participate in big profits for a little money.

For $100 you can become a part owner in these 9656 acres checkerboarded in 9 counties—where active work in drilling for oil is now going forward. It's better than an even chance for success because of the many test wells already started and others under contract. Big Companies are turning their attention to Southwestern Texas, and not without reason. It's your last chance on Texas Leases at $1.00 per acre.

By joining with a syndicate you have the added advantage of participating in the profits of reselling nearly 10,000 acres of leases—share and share alike, for any development that causes any part of the leases to sell at a high figure will benefit each syndicate owner. We have no salesmen, so deal directly with this office—come and see the geological maps.

Send your check for as many units as you can afford to buy—$100 each. You get a receipt and a Trustee's certificate showing you the [illegible] of the number of parts—or units—paid for in the entire syndicate.

There are only 64 units, or parts, remaining, so if you want one or more you must act quickly. Come to the office or send your check today.

We Have "Real Proof"

1. That the above figures are not theoretical, but are based upon actual results covering a period of sixteen consecutive months.
2. That the above schedule of dividends may reasonably be depended upon to double—treble—or quadruple—within six months' to one year's time.
3. That the above schedule of dividends may possibly be increased to as much as 100% per month within six months' or one year's time.
4. That this investment is as safe as the average of so-called high-grade investments, your principal being secured or guaranteed by a certain commodity of unquestioned value.
5. That the business from which the above results have been obtained is one of the largest in America, and recognized in every way as legitimate and honorable.
6. That the profits accruing to the owners of this security cannot be dissipated or used except for the sole purpose of dividends.
7. That the security producing the above dividends is not capital stock and is therefore not subject to the calamities oft befalling the investors in the stocks of corporations.
8. That the early investors in this security have, during the past consecutive sixteen months, received 123-1-3% in dividends, or $123.33 for each $100.00 invested.
9. That in addition to safety of principal, the owners of this security may reasonably look forward to a materially enhanced selling value of their interest, the nature of this business being such as to make possible, and we think, probable, an enhanced asset value up to as much as 100 times present values.
10. That there is a good and logical reason why a security so attractive might be offered to you or someone else on the market.

It takes "Real Proof" to convince you of the above —We Have It

Why SHOULD You "INVEST IN MY LEASES"?

WHAT ARE the considerations that should lead ANYONE to invest good money in an unproven OIL field? Is a person WISE or FOOLISH to do it?

IT ALL DEPENDS!

And FIRST of ALL it depends on WHO your ASSOCIATES are, and, SECOND, on WHERE your LEASES are located.

The Kind of Companies

In whose hands the destinies of GUADALUPE COUNTY, NEW MEXICO, rest are the KIND OF COMPANIES that you are JUSTIFIED in TYING UP WITH. These companies, STANDARD, UNION OIL of CALIFORNIA AND ASSOCIATES, CARTER, OHIO GYPSY, TOLTEC, COSDEN, EMPIRE, OHIO CITIES GAS, and many OTHERS, are not interested in SELLING STOCK. They are exploiting the SANTA ROSA DISTRICT to get OIL—and every day more reasons pile up for believing that OIL IS THERE.

And if oil is THERE, try to picture the FLOOD of WEALTH and PROSPERITY that it WILL BRING to my clients.

If the GEOLOGISTS are right—as I verily believe they ARE—every dollar you put up will INCREASE and INCREASE and INCREASE. The possible result is beyond computation.

BUT when OIL is found it will be the folks who ARE IN who will reap the HARVEST—not the ones who are OUT. The CLOSING date for the purchase of MY LEASES at $5.00 per ACRE has been changed from the 25th of NOVEMBER to DECEMBER 1st.

So BUY A LEASE and BUY IT NOW. BUY it because it's WISE to join with GOOD COMPANIES and CAPABLE COMPANIES where the SIGNS of SUCCESS are SO GREAT. SEND me your order for not less than TEN ACRES, and not more than FORTY ACRES at $5.00 an ACRE. DO IT NOW, as the TIME IS SHORT. Wire.

IN ALL NEW OIL FIELDS

Would You Like to Make $25,000 to $50,000?

Would you be willing to risk losing $250 if you had a fairly good chance to make $25,000 to $50,000 in a few months, or during the coming year? Don't say it can't be done—because other people have done even better than this in the oil fields. $250 is equivalent to only about $5 a month for five years. $50,000 is a lot of money. Others have made more than that. Maybe you can.

You can't expect to make $25,000 or $50,000 in a few months or a year from an investment of only $250 unless you are willing to take some risk. No one ever had a chance to make money unless they took some chance. This is your chance. Isn't it worth taking the chance and trying to make $25,000 to $50,000?

Oil leases in new fields often advance in value in a few months from a few dollars an acre to $5000 and $10,000 an acre, and even higher. We have made as high as $15,000 profit on an acre lease in the oil fields, by buying early and buying cheap and selling at high prices a few months later. You lost the chance to make money in the Burkburnett fields, shown above. Don't lose this chance we offer you in the new Louisiana oil fields.

5 acres, $125; 10 acres, $250; 20 acres, $500; 40 acres, $1000. Prices subject to advance and prior sale.

Only $250 for a 10 Acre Oil Lease

Your chance to make a fortune in a few months. Not an absolute certainty—nothing is—but the best chance you ever had, we feel certain—and we have backed up our judgment with our own money.

We were in the new Louisiana Oil Fields in September, early, ahead of the big crowd of oil men and speculators now flocking there by trainloads. One big gusher had just come in and we saw what was sure to happen in the next few months. It is happening right now. Many new wells have come in since we bought our acreage, 10,000 to 30,000-barrel gushers, high-gravity oil worth $2.25 a barrel.

Knowing what would soon happen we bought several thousand acres of leases, near the Red River and southern end of Bull Bayou field, in a district Surrounded by Producing Oil Fields, Only a Few Miles From Where Big Gushers Are Coming In. We bought all we could, for ourselves and clients at wholesale prices, before the boom started. We have already made arrangements to drill part of our acreage, part of it we are holding for the big prices, $1000 to $5000 an acre, which we expect to get in a few months. The rest, about 1000 acres, we offer to our clients, Subject to Prior Sale and Advance in Price, Any Day, at only $25 an acre, in lots of 5, 10, 20 and 40 acres or more. The only reason we will sell any of our acreage at this time is because we need money to carry out our plans. If These Leases Were in Texas You Could Not Buy Them For $500 to $1000 An Acre. It Will Soon Be the Same in Louisiana.

National Canners Here.

Fruit and vegetable canners of Southern California are enthusiastic about the nation-wide advertising campaign which is soon to be launched by the National Canners' Association. Frank Gerber, president of the association; Walter Sears, vice-president, and Frank E. Gorrell, secretary, have spent the past week in Los Angeles, outlining the plans of the association for the coming year, particularly with refernce to advertising, for which $500,000 has been underwritten by the members.

The campaign, which will open simultaneously in all parts of the United States on November 16, is not to advertise any brands, but it will be association advertising, intended to attract the attention of the reading public to the value of canned goods, to dispel some of the popular fallacies, and to remove the prejudice which still exists to some extent against canned fod.

"The National Canners' Association," said Mr. Gorrell, "is just what its name implies; an association of the canners of all kinds of food products. It has an enormous memberships, and its membership is its membership is constantly increasing. It is strictly a noncommercial organization; we are not attempting to sell anything. The purpose of the association is to insure to the public a clean and wholesome product. Toward this end laboratories have been established by the association at its headquarters in Washington, D. C., with Dr. W. D. Bigelow, formerly assistant chief chemist of the bureau of chemistry under Dr. Wiley, in charge. The association also conducts laboratories at Harvard University under the superivsion of Dr. M. J. Rosenau, the physician who, while associated with the public health department of the government, discovered and eliminated the yellow fever germ. Hundreds of thousands of dollars a year are spent by the association in its inspections and experiments, and the results of these experiments are available to all canners, whether or not members of the association. Nothing is copyrighted or patented.

"In the inspection departments we employ men of recognized ability, such as Dr. Hendrickson, for instance, who was sent to Southern California by the association to supervise the inspection of the products of the sardine canneries. When he puts his O.K. upon a case of sardines, he gives a certificate that they are pure and wholesome, and packed under sanitary conditions. The fruit and vegetable canners of Southern California have established an inspection department under the supervision of the National Canners' Association, and more than 150,000,000 cans of fruit will be inspected annually by this department. Experts are in charge of this bureau of inspection, and under them are employed a large number of assistants who visit the canneries constantly during the packing season.

"The high standard of cleanliness which govern both the canneries who are members of the association and the employees of the canneries is shown by the rules laid down by our department of inspection. These rules state that only clean, sound fruit will be used, labels shall not be misleading, and definite standards of cleanliness, both as to the factory and the employees are established."

The growth and development of the canning industry was briefly sketched by Mr. Gorrell. In 1908 the production in the canneries of the United States amounted to about 2,000,000,000 cans. By 1914 the annual production had increased to between 3,000,000,000 and 4,000,000,000 cans, and the statistics compiled for 1918 show a production of 7,000,000,000 cans. In this great industry California leads all other States in the value of its canned products. The production in Southern California of canned fruits and vegetables in 1919 is estimated at 3,000,000 cases, while the sardine pack totals more than 1,250,000 cases. The value of the canned products of California for the current year is estimated at more than $150,000,000.

Week in Review.

It was a week of heavy volume, steady progress, important deals and active progression. In local business, trade and financial circles conditions could hardly be better, and about the only complaint heard is inability to take care of the business in sight. There continues to be a heavy accumulation of funds, and although every legitimate enterprise, and some not so legitimate, are liberally patronized, the balance is still somewhat top-heavy.

Interest rates remain fixed at from 5½ to 7 per cent., but with a modified demand for call money, many evidently feeling that it is cheaper to use their 50-cent dollars as they earn them rather than borrow 100-cent dollars from banks and other sources of supply. There are some preliminary indications that a currency deflation is about to be undertaken, the raising of the rediscount rate by the Federal reserve bank giving emphasis to this opinion. With money and foreign exchange back on anything like a normal level a tremendous volume of capital would be released. This is coming and in the meantime business is good.

In the bond market there are not enough offerings to go 'round with municipals particularly in demand and particularly scare. In fact there remain but $164,000 worth to be sold during the balance of the month outside of the State offerings. Several bond elections are impending and a few weeks later the municipal market will again be supplied, but just now there is almost a famine. Public utilities, corporate, and foreign issues find ready sale.

In the speculative market the chief interest has centered in oil stocks, and of these the public cannot seem to get enough. Prices have been tending steadily higher, and the peak still seems some distance away.

Retail and wholesale trade is very heavy, and in the shopping district the congestion during the busy hours is increasing daily. The Christmas trade has already commenced, and there is no reason to change the prediction that the season will be unique in volume of business and gross receipts. High-class goods are moving, and a heavy trade is reported in all kinds of household labor-saving devices and in musical instruments.

Building is steadily cumulative, but the housing situation for the present season is hopeless. Thousands are arriving from the coalless and weather-stricken East, and what little space remains is being rapidly gobbled up. One wonders why it would not be practicable, in the emergency, to utilize our summer resorts for the overflow. Long Beach is already pretty well booked for the winter, but there must be room for 100,000 people in comfortable quarters from Port Los Angeles to Laguna, while the charming scores of inland towns within interurban distance from the metropolis could care for other thousands. The difference in rentals would much more than offset the additional transportation costs.

On the subject of these same rentals the least said the better. The landlord or apartment-house manager who has not raised the tariff from one to three times during the past quarter is as singular as a poor farmer. All the traffic will bear seems to be the motto of many of them, who short sightedly forget that there are other seasons coming and that our guests of this year represent the business of the future.

The coal strike is having no appreciable effect locally except to hurry the start of tourists who planned to come later in the winter. The slow-down in steel production because of the recent disturbance is being felt to some degree by builders, although there was a considerable supply of material on hand in the local mills. In Southern California there are no labor troubles worthy the name. Everyone is employed at high wages, and a tremendous volume of currency is in circulation evidenced by heavy buying and the search for amusement which is reflected in the bulging walls and long lines of ticket buyers at almost every theater.

The walnuts are about harvested, and husbandmen are clearing the decks to attack the new crops which will soon be ready. The citrus is in fine condition, and the outlook is excellent. The profits for 1919 are pretty well in hand, and this is another reason for the plethora of funds at the present time.

The food price situation is distinctly unfavorable. Prices remain on the levels of preagitation days or aspire to still higher flights. Large quantities of food have been withdrawn for storage, and this means high prices not only now but later. Dairy products are especially altitudinious; milk from 16 to 18 cents per quart; butter 75 to 80 cents and eggs 80 to 85 cents. A couple of

COTTON CLOSES WITH TEN-FORTY ADVANCES.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Cotton opening was somewhat irregular today, first prices being from 11 higher to 25 points lower. Wall street gave good support at first, but this was withdrawn later. Stop-orders were encountered, the list showing about 20 to 25 points net loss at the end of the initial twenty minutes of trading.

Trade interests were good buyers early and prices reacted later in the morning on unfavorable weather prospects and bullish spot advices. January sold up to 37.18 cents and March to 36.28 cents, with the general list closing steady at a new advance of 10 to 40 points.

LOCAL PRODUCE SELLS ON STRONG DEMAND.

BIG EASTERN DEMAND SENDS FANCY SHIPPING STOCK PRICES UP.

All varieties of produce were in strong demand on the local produce market yesterday, and the offerings of both the farmers and the wholesalers moved readily under the strong demand. Prices at the opening of the session corresponded closely with those of the preceding day's market but some commodities of which supplies were light or which were of fancy quality showed sharp price advances later in the session. At the close the market weakened slightly for some varieties of produce, but the general tone of the price list was firm throughout the session.

Cauliflower was very strong yesterday, the demand being active for this commodity. The majority of the sales were made at $1.70 per dozen, the top price of Friday's market. The season for cauliflower is not at its height, and the arrivals are of very fine quality. The local crop, it is reported, is about twice as large as that of last year, and the supply is heavy. Demand remains brisk, however, and with the quality uniformly good prices remain up for this commodity.

Cucumbers are also very high in price; many local dealers feel that the present prices are unreasonably high, in view of the generally poor quality of the stock which is now being offered on the local market. The demand is active for all grades, with shipping stock bringing high prices for shipment to the eastern markets. This grade yesterday brought from $2.00 to $2.50 per lug box, an increase of $1.25 within the past two weeks. Other grades were selling at prices ranging from $2.00 to $2.25 per lug.

The lettuce market yesterday was very excited. The demand in the eastern markets is growing constantly stronger, many dealers on the New York and Boston markets are reported to be paying as high as $5.00 and $7.00 per crate for California lettuce. Locally lettuce is selling at prices averaging from $2.25 to $2.75 per crate, while the fancy shipping stock brings from $2.75 to $3.00.

Heavy arrivals of grapes by rail and from the local growing sections caused the market for this product to weaken slightly yesterday. Tokays, which are now very scarce remained firm in price, but Cornichons averaged 7 and 7½ cents per pound, a decline of 1½ cents. Red Emperors were quoted at from 6½ to 9 cents, but most of the offerings were sold at the lower price. A new variety, the Queen, appeared on the market yesterday, selling at about 10 cents per pound. The quality of the new offering was very good.

Both oranges and lemons weakened under the slow demand which now prevails for these commodities. Fancy lemons brought from $5.75 to $6.00 per packed box yesterday, a fall of 50 cents per box. In loose boxes lemons showed the same decline of 50 cents each. The offerings of local stock are heavy at the present time, contributing toward a weaker market. Fancy oranges of the best brand sold at about $5.50 yesterday 25 cents lower than the prices of the preceding day. Valencias brought from $4.75 to $5.00, a fall of 50 cents per box.

CITRUS REVIEW FOR WEEK.

Both the private sale and auction markets have shown an easier tendency on Velencias the past week, resulting in generally lower prices in most markets.

There are 1800 cars of Velencias remaining for shipment according to latest estimates. Just how fast these remaining cars will be shipped depends almost wholly upon the available supply of refrigerator cars, which at the present time is inadequate and holds little promise of improvement in the near future. Grape shippers throughout the State are clamoring for cars and apple shippers in the Northwest report the worst car shortage ever known.

F.o.b. California quotations on Valencias are on a basis of $4.75 to $4.50 per box, according to district and pack.

Growers, shippers and buyers are all displaying keen interest in the opening of the Tulare county navel deal. Picking commended in the earlier districts such as Worth, success and Naranjo districts this week on Thompson Improved navels and shippers look for a considerable movement of fruit after November 15 to take care of Christmas orders. Sizes promise to run large but shippers expect to find no difficulty in working off large sizes for the holidays when large fruit is in demand.

Growers are generally holding for 3½ cents per pound for their navels and getting it. F.o.b. cash quotations are on a basis of $4 per box. No sales have been reported to date.

Florida oranges have been slow in maturing and early fruit that has reached the eastern markets has been generally unsatisfactory and has sold low. Warm weather is attributed to the slow ripening of the fruit.

The market on California lemons is dragging, especially in the 360 sizes.

Weather conditions throughout the East are not conducive to a good demand for lemons and trading is at a standstill.

F.o.b. California quotations are on a basis of $5.50 to $5.

There are on hand and available for sale within the next thirty days, approximately 60,000 boxes foreign lemons.

For Your Safety

The law provides that we can invest our funds in only three securities:

A.—A First Mortgage upon real estate, the appraised value of which is at least double the amount of the loan.

B.—Bonds of the United States Government.

C.—Municipal bonds of United States Municipalities.

As a further protection to you, our appraisers are appointed by the State of California. A copy of each appraisal on properties on which we make loans goes to the State of California so that they can verify the amount of the loan made by us.

Loans made in the above manner are the security back of our Guaranteed First Mortgage Certificates, which are sold in multiples of $100. There is undoubtedly no better investment in the world today paying as great a rate of interest.

A Chance to Make a Fortune

We have some extremely desirable Texas oil leases on practically proven territory where over seventeen wells are now being drilled. These properties are on the railroad close to towns, and within half a mile of wells now being drilled. These leases can be secured from $10.00 an acre up. Owner desires to close out his holdings to secure additional capital for drilling.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Selling of stocks was resumed during today's brief, but lively session, the movement being promoted by the news that the Federal administration would press its injunction proceedings against the striking miners.

The same shares which suffered great depreciation in the week's several reactions were again singled out for pressure. Steels, equipments, motors and oils recorded extreme declines of 2 to 7 points.

In a number of cases lowest quotations of the week were made and among some of the more speculative issues recent advances of 5 to 20 points were effected. Sales amounted to 775,000 shares.

Conditions in the bond market were mixed, Liberty issues easing again with most domestic issues. An irregular trend was shown by leading foreign issues. Total sales (par value) aggregated $9,550,000. Old United States bonds were unchanged on call during the week.

WEEKLY WALL STREET REVIEW.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—All other considerations of a feverishly active week on the stock exchange were subordinated to the erratic movements of the money market. Even the important political and financial events were eclipsed by the spectacular course of call loans and the firmer tendencies manifested by other forms of accommodations.

The action of the Federal Reserve Bank in advancing rates of re-discount was attended by renewed warnings against the diversion of credits for stock market uses and the rise in the Bank of England rate, the first in more than two and one-half years, was regarded as equally significant.

Heavy calling of loans by local banks occasioned several drastic reactionary movements in stocks, but in a majority of cases, substantial recoveries were made.

Extensive purchases of rails, evidently predicated on the assumption that favorable Federal legislation will accompany their return to private ownership at the end of the year, was one of the most reassuring features of the week.

Successful flotation of the $250,000,000 British loan and the $45,000,000 French municipal offering pointed anew to the inherent soundness of the investment situation.

Reports from the New York and Boston stock exchanges were not received yesterday on account of wire trouble between Denver and Los Angeles. The only report which was received from the eastern stock exchanges yesterday was the New York Stock Exchange report. All others were held up.

FINANCIAL AND TRADE REVIEW.

ounces of squash or of turnip in a cafeteria costs 12 cents, and fresh fruit for which Southern California is famed all over the world is offered only at ruinous prices. The beef and pork market is unsteady with upward tendencies; sugar, of course, is higher; staple groceries are firm. All this in the face of repeated assurances of increased production. Bread in Oakland has gone to 17 cents the loaf, but is still 3 cents cheaper than that here. In San Jose the women boycotted 95-cent eggs and forced a reduction to 80 cents. This method will certainly squeeze the "teers" out of profiteering, and restore a more healthy supply and demand level. There is too much of the "we should worry" attitude. Our pockets will not always be filled with loose change, and the day of reckoning cannot be always deferred. We are living on our principal instead of the interest. It is time to apply the brakes, for the normal controls are obviously defective.

Suspend Assessment Work.

State Mineralogist Fletcher Hamilton sends word that the resolution suspending assessment work on all mining claims has passed the Senate and is now in the hands of the President. Mr. Hamilton states that it will undoubtedly be signed and when effective will offer greatly needed relief to mining men in California and others States.

Pierce Petroleum.

The production of this company is said to have been increased in the past few months from 3000 barrels to over 5000 barrels. After the first of the week drilling work is to start on five new wells.

The Stock Market.

The market yesterday was rather narrow, finding its greatest expression in the oil issues, especially Associated, Amalgamated, General Petroleum and Republic Petroleum. All but Amalgamated advanced to a higher level during the short session. That issue opened at $119 but declined to a close of $112.50. On the other hand Associated was very strong within a well defined half-point range. The opening was at $139.50 but sales were soon recorded at $140 the high point for the local market, although $142 was reported from New York. There was a slight sagging just before the close which was at $139.25 bid. General Petroleum opened at $188, a $5 increase over mid-week quotations. It advanced under fairly liberal buying to $195 and broke sharply from that level to $190, rallying to a close of $191.50, showing a two-point net gain for the day. Union advanced a half point to sales at $192.50. Republic was a very heavy trader and touched the 30-cent mark for the first time since the opening price for this new stock a week ago. It sold during the morning up to 30½ cents and closed in demand at 30 cents, bid, at 31 cents offered. Mascot was firm at $2.50. United was around 90 cents and Jade was traded in at 20½ and 20 1-4 cents. Industrials and mines were firm but inactive. There was scattered trading in Los Angeles Investment which advanced to 87 cents. Goodyear, preferred, sold at par. United Eastern at $4.20 found some old friends. Tom Reed declined during the morning from $1.74 to $1.72. Telluride was at 23 cents. There was but little doing in bonds. The call, on the whole was rather quiet, and aside from the few active oil stocks there was little business. The exchange total for the week, during which oils were featured, shows a turnover of 320,332 shares valued at $1,368,093.42. This week there will be but four full days of trading. The exchange will be closed Monday morning on account of the funeral of Richard B. Kirchhoffer. Tuesday is a legal holiday, and, of course, Saturday a half-holiday.

Resolutions of Respect.

The Los Angeles Stock Exchange members yesterday adopted resolutions of respect to the memory of Richard B. Kirchhoffer in which record is made of his "undeviating devotion to the highest and finest business ideals."

Drilling Activity.

Republic Petroleum well No. 25 in the Midway field was reported yesterday to be down 410 feet. The rig is up for well No. 26 and work will begin this week. President A. S. Bradford, Secretary C. C. Spicer and Directors W. H. Brewer, Jay Lawyer and Ferdinand Bain left last night for an inspection of the company's properties.

Big Year for Goodyear.

Because of the great local interest in everything connected with the Goodyear organization and because of the millions of dollars invested here in the plant now under course of construction in this city, President Sieberling's recent statement of business and earnings is timely. He predicts that 1920 will be the largest year both in volume of business and profits in the history of the company. It is estimated that gross sales for the current year will exceed $165,000,000. This compares with $131,247,382 for 1918. Net earnings for the full year 1919 are estimated at $20,000,000 before allowance for Federal taxes. Last year net earnings before Federal taxes were $15,388,190.

In the last twelve years Goodyear has earned a total net income of $73,476,879 from which it has paid $20,540,178 in cash dividends. The balance of over $52,000,000 has been put back into the company.

The remarkable manner in which Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., has built up its business since the armistice was signed is revealed in the fact, that, due to government restrictions, the low point in production for 1918 was reached in November. At that time there were about 14,000 men employed and they were turning out about 11,000 tires a day. Volume of business was then running in the neighborhood of $8,000,000 a month. At present the company employs about 26,000 men at its Akron plants, making more than 30,000 tires a day and gross business for October will approximate $20,000,000.

CORN PRICES OFF IN LOW MARKET OF WEEK.

WEAKNESS FOR CASH AND FUTURES DOMINATES DEALINGS IN CHICAGO.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 8.—Weakness and lower prices for cash corn and futures dominated that market and was reflected in other grains, the close being at around the lowest of the day and week, with corn off 1⅝@3⅞ cents, oats ½ cent lower for December and unchanged for May, rye 2 cents lower and barley unchanged.

Losses in corn in the southwestern markets were about the same as in Chicago.

December corn finished the week 1⅝ cents higher while the other deliveries are ⅝@⅞ cent lower. Oats ⅛@1½ cents lower, December leading. Rye ¼@1 cent lower. Barley 2 cents lower on December and ¼ cent up on May. Pork is off 17½ cents, lard 10 cents lower to 2½ cents higher, the latter on January, and short ribs 7½ cents lower.

Scattered liquidation was in evidence in corn and, while there were many sharp bulges, due to short covering, the undertone was easy the greater part of the day. At no time were prices as high as the previous day's close and the finish was well toward the bottom, with December $1.32⅝, May $1.26⅞ and July $1.25⅝.

Range:

Corn—	Open.	High.	Low.	Close.
December	1.34	1.35¼	1.32⅝	1.32⅝
January	1.28	1.29⅞	1.26⅞	1.26⅞
May	1.27½	1.27⅞	1.25⅞	1.26⅞
July	1.26⅞	1.26⅞	1.25	1.25⅝
Oats—
December	.70⅞	.71½	.70½	.70⅝
May	.74	.74½	.73⅞	.74

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Wheat, spot, steady; No. 2, 2.35½, track New York, export billed. Corn, spot easy; No. 2 yellow and No. 2 white, 1.76¾ c.i.f. New York. Oats, spot, quiet; No. 1 white, 81½.

PLENTY OF WHEAT FOR THE MILLERS.

Julius Barnes, president of the United States Grain Corporation, has issued the following statement in reference to rumors that there is a possibility the Grain Corporation will offer for resale some of its wheat supply at various points in the United States:

"We are working out a plan to resell from our stocks of wheat if needed for milling, so that there need be no anxiety about milling supplies in the United States. Stocks of wheat are larger now than at any time last year, mill production is very large, and we are glad to help it continue so until the flour demand is thoroughly satisfied."

There is no pumping to this well, for this oil flows 24 hours per day. This well is located in the Placentia-Richfield district on the General Petroleum lease, which is not far from some of our holdings.

The large sale of shares of this company's stock in the immediate vicinity of its holdings shows that those who know most about its holdings and the personnel of the officers have confidence in its future.

Dame Fortune Take Notice!!

THE NAMES OF YOUR WOOERS ARE

Duly Recorded

Less than three weeks ago, the first "CHECKERBOARD" Tracts were bought by red-blooded "go-getters" in Los Angeles. On November 4th their Oil and Gas Leases were received back from Guthrie, Texas, the County Seat of King County, with the imprint of the Lone Star Seal of the State of Texas legalizing the following indorsement:

The State of Texas, County of King:

I, W. F. Ballard, County Clerk in and for said county, do hereby certify that the foregoing instrument, dated the 20th day of October, A. D. 1919, together with its certificates of authentication, was filed for record in my office the 27th day of October, A. D. 1919, at 8 o'clock A.M., and duly recorded on the 27th day of October, A.D. 1919, in Deed Records of King County, in Volume 13, Page 388. Witness my hand and official seal, at my office in Guthrie, Texas, the 27th day of October, A.D. 1919.

(Signed) W. F. BALLARD,
County Clerk, King County, Texas.

"Mother Earth" Is the Stake-Holder

Every owner of one of these 2½, 5 or 10-acre leases stands closer to a fortune today than he possibly realizes. The final verdict cannot be altered by any human agency. He is not gambling on the honesty or ability of his fellow men. No officers or directors of a Stock Company can vote to sell his holdings or dispose of any of his interests. No meager "pro-rata dividend" will be doled out to him. His signature alone, properly attested before a Notary Public, is the one and only authority that can sell, assign and transfer the Lease or enter into a drilling agreement. If dishonest people take possession of his land and drill a well, the Pipe Line Company that buys the oil will have to conform to the law and make the payment checks payable to the "Lease Owner of Record" for seven-eighths of the oil. The remaining one-eighth is paid directly to the land-owner, his Royalty.

The "Stampede" Begins

You have never seen another Oil & Gas Lease advertised for sale in King or Knox County, Texas. Furthermore, you never will see any advertised. Here is the reason in a nutshell: The five Giant Companies now drilling wells in this field make their money from producing oil, not from selling leases. The Prairie Oil & Gas (Standard Oil,) The Mid-West, The Gulf Production, The Home Oil and The De Leon Petroleum attended to the tying up of all available acreage before they started drilling. If the "New Field" develops, and they are spending about one-quarter of a million dollars backing their judgment and scientific advice on five wells, they will hold fast to all their Leases for their own development purposes. Their Leases won't be for sale at any price. With hundreds of other companies and independent operators frantically bidding for "drilling sites" in the new field, can you imagine a more favorable position to be in than the owner of two and a half, five or ten acres of the "CHECKERBOARD" Tracts. It will be a case of sitting in the driver's seat and writing your own ticket.

"Can You Afford" to Neglect Buying?

If you still cling to a shred of hope that you will some day "strike it rich," If you really believe what you have always said, namely, that you "would not mind taking a chance if you knew you would get a square deal." If you still have ambition for the luxuries of life for yourself and your family, THEN YOU MUST MAKE SOME EFFORT THAT REQUIRES A SACRIFICE ON YOUR PART. Unless you can point to the map of Texas and know that if oil is found in some certain spot you have "sewed up," then you are only a spectator of the Industry that is making thousands rich in TEXAS OIL. You must act quickly.

Or Forever Hold Your Peace

I own the Lease on 640 acres situated fifteen miles southwest of Benjamin, Texas, in King County. My title is perfect and the Original Lease and Assignment of same to me, both "duly recorded," may be examined by interested parties or their attorneys at my office. The land lies in the very pathway of the Tidal Wave of Oil Rigs that is sweeping southwestward from the stupendous Burkburnett Gusher Field and northwestward from the equally mammoth Ranger Field, less than one hundred miles from each townsite. Today, I am offering leases on 2½, 5 or 10 acres at ten dollars per acre. I am a strong believer in "hunches." I have a "hunch" now that I should be getting $25 per acre for the few remaining tracts. My next "ad" may announce this advance in price. However, I'll make this guarantee: I will agree to accept orders for Leases at ten dollars per acre until 12 o'clock noon on Wednesday, November 12th, that is, providing I have any left to sell and the post-mark on your order is before that time.

TRADING VERY DULL ON GRAIN EXCHANGE.

Milo maize weakened under an off demand on the local Grain Exchange yesterday. Chicago corn again made a break, and trading in milo remains very dull. Barley made advances during the early part of the session, but few sales were made at the higher prices. Later, prices for barley fell off 2½ points in order to feel out the market, but there were no buyers at the lower price, and the seller immediately withdrew his ask price.

Immediate shipment milo was 25 to 75 cents per ton lower, with a car in transit selling at $2.95. Futures were off from 25 cents to $1.25 per ton, with sales for all December at $2.88¾ and $2.85. Four hundred tons of milo were sold during the session.

Barley for immediate shipment was 25 to 50 cents per ton higher, with 100 tons for all December delivery bringing $3.50 early in the session. Later in the session barley fell to $3.47½, with no takers. Only 100 tons of barley were sold.

A car of wheat mixed feed, Utah-Idaho S. B. Div. sold for $48.00.

The Shumway Royalty Syndicate of Kansas whose units sold for $50, paid back SIXTEEN TIMES their cost last year, and the units sold as high as $2000 each. At the beginning of that Syndicate the possibilities were NOT SO GREAT as the present beginning of this P. S. WOLFE ROYALTY SYNDICATE with 3 per cent. at the START.

THE PINK SHEET—AUTOMOBILES—SPORTS

Los Angeles Sunday Times

Part VI: 16 Pages

VOL. XXXVIII.

SUNDAY MORNING, NOVEMBER 9, 1919.

IN THE VAN | First in All Automobiles. First in Sporting News.

MOTOR-CAR SPEED KINGS ARE GATHERING FOR RACING CLASSIC AT ASCOT.

PROPER BRAKES INSURE SAFETY.

Best Life Insurance for Motor Car Drivers.

Worn Parts Should be Removed Immediately.

Advises Drivers to Use Both Sets of Brakes.

Good brakes are about the best form of life insurance the motor-car driver can have. In fact, they are about the most important part of the automobile. A pretty poor sort of a motor will run the car, but to stop it requires the best there is to be had; "pretty good" will not do in an emergency. You need a motor to get there, but without good brakes you may get too far.

There is nothing the matter with the brakes on most cars when they come from the factory. There will be little the matter with them at any time if they are given the proper care, if oil is put on where it is needed and kept off where it is not needed, and if worn parts are renewed in time to prevent an accident. The brakes will hold the car as long as they are in condition; they are sufficient for all needs so long as they are in order. It is the driver's business to see that they are in condition before going out, even if he cannot take time to look [illegible] the motor. It may be a matter of life and death before the garage is reached again.

Every car has two sets of brakes, working independently of each other, and either one should be in shape to hold the car at a standstill or, in chauffer phrasing, "slide [illegible]." The average owner is careless about the brakes

USE BOTH BRAKE SETS.

Drivers should learn to use first the foot brake and then the emergency brake on long hills. This alternation allows each in turn to cool off where there is so much friction that cannot be avoided, and only by alternating the brakes is there safety from burned-out linings. Also the driver should learn how to use the motor as a brake. By engaging a lower gear and cutting off the ignition the engine under compression will retard the speed sufficiently that moderate use of the brakes will be enough for safety. Likewise, safety calls for slow speed descending a long hill, as less speed is developed, or at least developed more slowly.

A serious cause of brake trouble is poor brake lining.

As a matter of fact, the lining is really the heart and lungs of the brakes and few motorists appreciate just what qualities a brake lining should have to insure 100 per cent efficiency.

To be effective, brake lining must have three important qualities. It must grip—not grab—it must resist wear and tear and prevent the absorption of moisture.

A brake lining which does this and which was used with much satisfaction on all the army motor trucks in France is commonly known as thermoid hydraulic compressed brake lining.

Another serious cause of brake failure is oil. As a rule, this comes from the differential oil leaking through the axle housing to the hub and thence overflowing to the brake drums. This may be the result of enthusiasm in lubrication, which prompts a too-liberal quantity in the differential. Then, when the car turns off the crown of the road the oil overflows the casing and the only outlet is the axle housing. And sometimes the play of parts acts like a pump and sends the oil out along the axle. The remedy lies in using less oil and if that does not remedy it put a felt washer in the axle housing

This consists of a long, thin strip of hard felt wound around the shaft. Wind it, beginning at the wheel end, in a direction opposite to the forward motion of the shaft. It should be fastened to the shaft with shellac and bound with cord in several places. It need not cover more than six or eight inches of the shaft.

HUNDRED THOUSAND FOR COMING YEAR.

DAY AND NIGHT SHIFTS TO TURN OUT MOTORS FOR THE CAR.

Additional details about the projected expansion of the Oakland Motor Car Company, which will provide for a production of 100,000 cars in 1920 have been received by H. C. McVey, the Los Angeles representative of this popular six-cylinder line. Three new buildings that will cost $2,000,000 are to be erected.

One of the new buildings will be an addition to the engine plant which will bring production up to 500 engines daily with day and night shifts working. The expansion of the assembly department will be taken care of by a three-story and basement building which will bring production up to forty cars per hour. Five years ago the total Oakland production was but forty cars for a ten-hour day. The third new building will be a large warehouse and loading docks to accommodate thirty-four freight cars at one time, all under cover.

These additions do not include the new administration building already under way, which will release 50,000 more feet of floor space for manufacturing activities.

U.S.L. BATTERIES HAVE LONG LIFE.

COMBINATION OF WOOD AND RUBBER INSULATION PROVES THE BEST.

The U.S.L. Light and Heat Corporation has increased its production facilities until it is now able to produce from 3000 to 15000 batteries per day. A. W. Dunlop, the Pacific Coast representative, is now in the city and is planning an extensive selling campaign for this battery.

The Electric Equipment company handles the U.S.L. battery in this territory and has inaugurated a time payment plan for the convenience of purchasers.

The construction of the battery combines a wood and pure rubber insulation, which greatly lengthens the life of the cells. An eighteen month guarantee goes out on all U.S.L. batteries.

SPEED CLANS GATHERING.

Ascot Speedway Bristling with Racing Entrants.

Choice Fields to Meet on Thanksgiving Day.

Many Crack Drivers are on Their Way Here.

The speed clans are gathering. With sensationally fast racing cars, lightning-like motorcycles, airplanes and running horses, the seekers of gold and thrills and honors are concentrating upon Ascot Speedway, where, beginning Thanksgiving Day, a four-day programme of "intensified speed" in various forms will be held.

The big auto offering for Thanksgiving Day this year will be America's All-Star Sweepstakes, with the fastest field that ever gathered at Ascot. Held down to fifty miles, the motor classic unquestionably will tumble all the records from one mile to the half-century mark.

STARS TO RACE.

The motorcycle stars will have their day on Sunday, when they, too will run fifty miles for the American two-wheel championship. Just as the auto speed feast is attracting the best stars of the country, so is the motorcycle event to be representative of America's best riding talent

The thriller for Saturday will be in the air. Sergt. Jack de Villiers, brother of Miss Elsie de Villiers, who recently leaped from an airplane at Ascot, will outdo his sister in flirting with disaster. The sergeant recently returned from abroad, where he served with the Canadian forces. He brings back a unique distinction—that of being the one man to be shot through the brain and live.

GATES OPEN.

The activities among the auto stars will begin this week. The gates will be thrown open to the drivers to engage in informal practice so as to get a line on their cars and the track. Most of the cars have never been driven on Ascot and several of the drivers themselves are to have their introduction to the hard mile course.

Lieut. Arthur H. Klein has led the invasion from the East. Already the old favorite here is re-established in popularity. The records of what Klein has been doing in the East since he returned to civilian life are enough to make him an early favorite with the speed fans.

STARS AT PHOENIX.

Stopping at Phoenix on the way from Detroit, Joseph Boyer raced his three Frontenacs at the Arizona State Fair. These Frontenacs will be whirlwinds at Ascot in the hands of Boyer, Goodson and Roscoe Sarles.

Two more entries last week were those of Cliff Durant, the Pacific Coast road champion, and Eddie Hearne. They will drive their Chevrolet Specials which have been such sensational winners this year.

That Durant's close escape from death at Elgin has left him unafraid of speed is shown by his races since then. He has been burning up the tracks. At Bakersfield recently he won the fifty-mile race just under the world's record for the distance set there by Bob Burman.

HEARNE FEARLESS

Hearne is one of the most sensational performers on Ascot. He eats up the turns and will rub hubs with any of them. His hard luck in the spring race, which, his friends declare, cheated him out of the winning money, has made him desirous of meeting Sarles again. This time Sarles will be in a Frontenac, and there should be some tough brushes between the two.

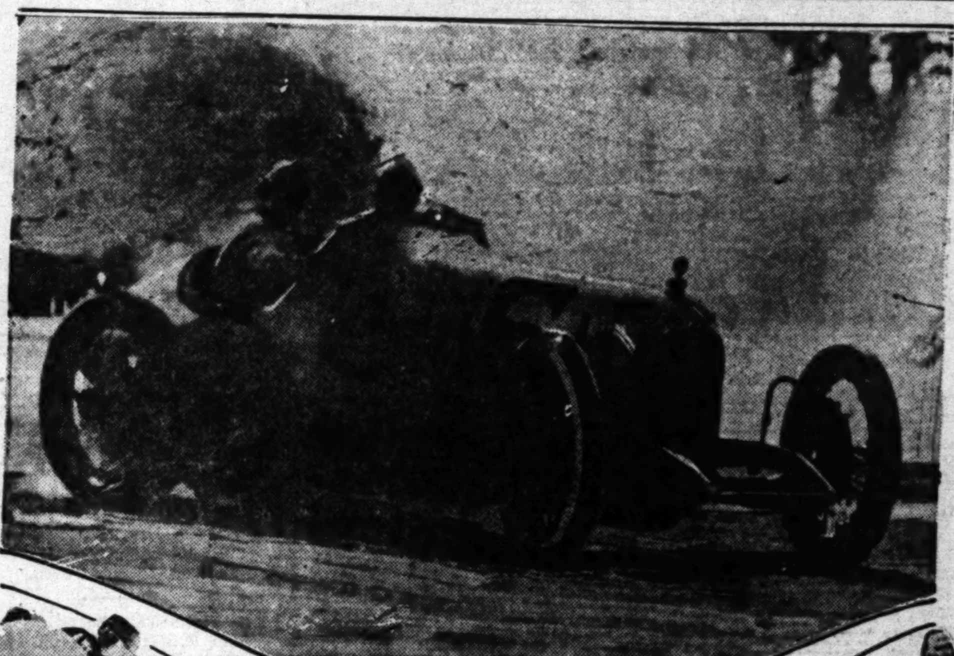
Eddie Pullen is coming, but is undecided yet as to what his car will be. It must be fast. That much he insists upon. He was leading in the last big event at Ascot when some fouled plugs slowed him down. But even then he coasted into third money.

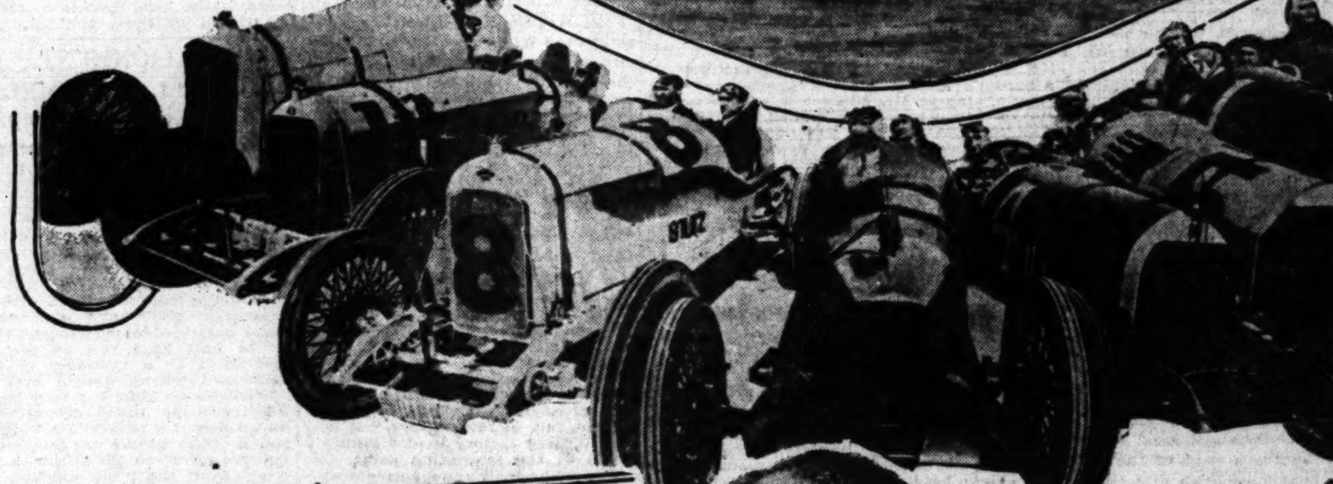
ON WAY HERE.

Joe Thomas is in the East with the Frontenac that Ralph Mulford drove. Waldon Stein with Barney Oldfield's special is at Phoenix on the way to Los Angeles. Omar Toft, too, is there, headed this way.

Eddie O'Donnel wired Klein last week from the East, asking if he could drive either the Mercedes or Detroit Special. Dave Lewis, too, wants a chance with one of the cars in the Book stable.

While the speed stars are preparing for the big Thanksgiving Day race, the motorcycle riders are just as busy. Already two factory entries have been made. First came the Harley Davidson and then the Indian. The Excelsior is expected to make a nomination this week.





Cliff Durant.
Omar Toft
Eddie Pullen.

They'll be Roaring Here Soon.

Some of the finest race drivers in the country have sent in their entries for the Ascot classic to be staged on Thanksgiving Day. Many of them are bringing cars from the East especially for this event. Below are three of the stars who have already signed up for the race—Omar Toft, Eddie Pullen and Cliff Durant.

MOBILIZE MOTOR TRANSPORTATION

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—As a precaution against the possible tie-up of the railway transportation system of the country for want of coal, Secretary Baker last week called on the Council of National Defense for a statement regarding the availability of motor-transport tonnage in the United States. The report of the council has been presented to Mr. Baker.

Whereas, the actual motor tonnage is only a tiny fraction of the needs of the nation in matters of transportation, it nevertheless will furnish, according to the figures in Mr. Baker's possession, a partial stop gap in the shortage of facilities.

The report shows there are 20,000 available army motor trucks and, further, it estimates that, in addition, the government can rely on private interests to furnish through the methods of commandeering for public use 300,000 more trucks.

While it is not regarded as possible to use motor transport in substitution for rail-borne freight to the extent recently employed in Great Britain during the strike of the railway operatives, nevertheless the 320,000 trucks of various sizes may be expected to relieve to a considerable extent the elimination of rail facilities.

Along with the report the council furnished Mr. Baker with its best suggestions as to how the work of mobilizing the motor-transport facilities could and should be accomplished.

SOME BASEBALL FAMILIES.

Irish and Bobby Meusel are Shining Examples in Big-League Line.

BY HARRY A. WILLIAMS.

While brothers are not uncommon in baseball, and are frequently to be found competing in other lines of sports, it is seldom that one league sends up two of the caliber of Irish and Bobby Meusel.

Both of them experienced their baptism of professional baseball in the Coast League. Irish, the elder, is an acknowledged batting star in the National, and topped the league until near the close, when he went into a short slump, which forced him to surrender the leadership. Bobby, the younger, and only two years out of his teens, is generally rated as the most promising young player sent up in recent years, if not in the history of the league. He goes to the New York Americans.

RUNS IN FAMILIES.

Boxing had its Attels, football its Poes, McFaddens and Brickleys. Baseball, however, more than any other sport, seems to run in families. Here in the Coast League we have had the Brashear brothers, the Zamlock brothers and the Howard brothers. Jack Killilay was with Oakland when Harry Killilay was with Oakland, and there were two more Killilay boys playing in other leagues at the same time. Strangely, all the Killilay boys were pitchers, and it is believed to be the only case of the kind on record.

Stanley Coveleski went from the Portland club to Cleveland, only to find himself opposed by his brother, Harry, of the Detroit Tigers. When the youngster was billed to pitch his maiden game, Detroit happened to be the opposing club. Harry was slated to pitch for the Tigers, but refused, apparently fearing that he might defeat his kid brother in his first appearance, and in that way discourage him.

EXCEPEIONS.

While there have been exceptions, usually each family only produces one star. Ty Cobb's brother, Paul, never was able to rise permanently above Class A company. Vean Gregg, doubtless the greatest curve-ball pitcher of his era, but whose career was cut short by overwork, had a younger brother, Dave. David had a tryout with Cleveland when Vean was a member of that club, but even with the moral support of his skilled brother, was unable to show major league form.

The Stovalls, George and Jess both saw service in many leagues, including the majors. Of the two, George attained the greater degree of fame, occupying managerial berths in Cleveland and St. Louis, and piloting Kansas City in the late-unlamented Federal League. Both ended their careers on the Coast as members of the Vernon club.

Walter Schmidt of the Seals and Pirates, and Charley Schmidt, who backstopped for Detroit in the championship days of the Tigers, were reared under the same roof. Both saw service in the Coast League, Walter as a youngster and Charley as a veteran.

Frank and Abe Arellanes both played professional ball, although Frank alone attained major league renown.

The Killefers, Red and Reindeer, rank among the game's smartest players. Reindeer, who is the younger, is still in the majors. Red saw service with several big league clubs, and is now manager of the Angels.

Kid Gleason, manager of the Chicago White Sox, has a brother.

DOINGS AT THE FACTORIES.

Willys Interests Embark in Commercial Vehicle Line.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DETROIT (Mich.) Nov. 7.—Stockholders of the Saxon Motor Car Corporation at a special meeting in the past week voted to adopt the reorganization plan proposed by the creditors' advisory committee. Holders of 43,000 of the 60,000 shares outstanding approved the plans.

Under the reorganization the company would have $1,200,000, 8 per cent. cumulative preferred stock to be taken up by the creditors par for par, in liquidation of their claims. The present issue of 60,000 shares of $100 par value would be substituted for by an issue of 200,000 shares of no par value.

NEW SHARES.

Stockholders will be given the privilege of changing their present stock for new stock share for share and of subscribing to two shares of new stock for each share now held at around $15 a share. The 120,000 shares thus offered will be underwritten by a Chicago banking syndicate, and any stock not taken by the stockholders will be offered the public. Twenty thousand shares will be held in the treasury.

With the sale of the new stock the company would have working capital of between $2,500,000 and $3,000,000.

The resignation of Walter P. Chrysler as vice-president of the General Motors Corporation, which was announced the past week from French Lick, Ind., where Mr. Chrysler is sojourning, furnished a theme for much gossip in Detroit automotive circles. Personal disagreement with President W. C. Durant is reported to have been responsible for the resignation, although this cannot be confirmed.

STUDY ABROAD.

Only recently Mr. Chrysler returned from a visit to European cities in company with others of the General Motors organization. In England and France the party gave much attention to the study of conditions in the automotive industry and to the consideration of possibilities abroad for the establishment of quantity production factories.

Mr. Chrysler is considered one of the best-posted men in the auto industry. For several years he was president of the Buick Motor Car Company, resigning from that position less than a year ago to become one of the General Motors' chief executives. It is said that he has no plans for the immediate future. Mr. Durant was in Detroit, but refused to discuss the matter

That John N. Willys and the Willys interests are preparing to embark extensively in the commercial vehicle end of the automobile business was disclosed the past week, when announcement was made by the Republican Motor Truck Company of Alma, Mich., that Mr. Willys had purchased a controlling interest in the concern, which is capitalized at $1,000,000, and which is producing more than 1200 trucks a month.

Announcement of Mr. Willys's purchase was made by Charles G. Rhodes, secretary-treasurer of the Republic company who declared that no change in the personnel or management of the company would be made for the present.

THE LARGEST.

The Republic company is the largest exclusive manufacturer of motor trucks in the United States. It was organized in 1913, when it built a large factory in Alma, with more than 500,000 feet of floor space. It began to make trucks in July of that year. Since then it has sold more than 60,000 trucks. The company makes four sizes of trucks, ranging in capacity from one to three and one-half tons.

In addition to its capital stock of $1,000,000, the Republic company has outstanding 100,000 shares of common stock which have no par value. F. W. Ruggles is president, and C. A. Burt, vice-president of the company.

Mr. Willys has for some time owned the controlling interest in the Garford truck company, an Ohio corporation.

The new $220,000 assembly plant unit of the proposed $2,250,000 Hudson-Essex Motor Company extension will be in full operation by November 15, it is announced by Roy D. Chapin, president.

A machine shop and heat-treatment plant, two additional units of the extension plans, are in course of erection and will be in operation soon after January 1.

BIG PLANT.

With the assembly plant they will add 276,000 square feet of manufacturing space to the 1,000,000 square feet already available. Both buildings are one story and of steel and concrete construction.

The ground occupied by these buildings and a building erected during the war for government work covers forty-two acres in addition to the twenty-six acres now occupied by the main factory.

The new machine shop will be 400 feet long and 300 wide and will contain 120,000 square feet of floor space. It will cost $300,000 and equipment will cost an additional $600,000. The heat treatment plant will be 200x100, containing 20,000 square feet. It will cost $50,000 and equipment $100,000.

The Hudson and Essex Motor interests now employ 6000 men and when extensions are completed this number will be doubled.

REO
Can You Get Spare Parts?

The REO Motor Car Company has been in existence for fifteen years and manufactures and sells more REO "SPEED WAGONS" than any other truck built—we said trucks, not little delivery wagons.

REO products are known and sold in nearly every civilized country in the world. There is a REO dealer or REO service within the reach of every REO owner.

Therein lies the protection to REO users. They are assured a supply of repair parts to take care of wear or accidental breakage. They have REO service, which insures them the maximum efficiency from their vehicles if they will but avail themselves of their opportunity.

The widespread use of REO cars and trucks is due to continuous, conscientious effort skillfully directed toward the production of the most reliable and economical motor transportation built.

PERFECTS TWO FARM TRACTORS

New Models to be Free from the Usual Troubles.

Experimenting Done at Expense of the Factory.

Traveling-Track and Wheel Types are Adopted.

Watt L. Moreland is ready to announce the production in a very short time of two farm tractors—of two different types.

For the past five years these products have been worked on almost continuously with the desire to produce a tractor that might be placed in the buyer's hands with the experimenting done at the expense of the maker and not of the buyer.

INVESTIGATION.

A very extensive investigation of tractor faults has been made over a period covering two and a half years and the deeper the investigation went the mare convinced was Mr. Moreland that while there were a number of good tractors on the market there were mighty few good enough to bear the Moreland name. It is a surprising thing in the tractor business that one finds spotty reputations. One make of tractor will be a great success in one section and in another section in a not very far removed district, the same tractor will have a very poor reputation with sales almost a negligible quantity.

Investigation of this condition led to the conclusion that in the unsuccessful communities the fault lay with the manufacturer, for this reason—tractors were sold before they were mechanically perfect, and the attendant troubles gave them such a black eye that several years of intensive effort have not been able to eradicate it. In the successful territories it was found that tractor sales had been made after the machines had gone through the experimental stages and buyers were able to do the greater part of the things promised with each machine.

NO TROUBLES.

Knowing these things Mr. Moreland determined that when the Moreland tractor went into the market it would be, as far as human desire and effort could make it, entirely free from usual tractor troubles.

The Moreland traveling-track type tractor is a 15-30 H. P. job, and has several unusual features in design that make it highly desirable. It has shown, under very severe tests, a most remarkable working value.

The entire job is a product of the Moreland factory. The motor has detachable sleeves so that worn or scored cylinders may be replaced by sleeves—an inexpensive operation, compared with the older method of reboring. The motor is equipped with the Moreland gasifier, which gives a very high horse-power return on distillate, at a very low cost.

In test work, in hard baked "dobe, four twelve" plows have been handled for months without the slightest upward throw to the front end and farming implement manufacturers who have watched tests at various times have stated it is one of the best medium-powered jobs in the western territory.

WHEEL TYPE.

The second tractor is of the wheel type with a 10-20 H. P. rating, and is primarily designed for citrus grove and orchard work. It is also highly practical for small acreage ranches and will fill a big need in this territory.

These two types of equipment will go into production sometime next spring with a new company to be formed by Mr. Moreland, the capital of which has not yet been determined. It is expected that a large proposition of the units used in the production of these two tractors will be manufactured by the Moreland Motor Truck Company in its new plant at Burbank, and the marketing will be handled through the present Moreland Motor Truck sales organization.

Breaking Ground with Their Own Tractors.

The new Burbank home of the Moreland Truck Company is being started by the use of a Moreland tractor, which is leveling the ground for the new plant. The Moreland company plans to produce two models in the tractor line—tractors which are without usual tractor troubles.

PREPARING FOR WINTER.

With the approach of winter, the season when we can expect to get an occasional shower, there is always a movement among motorists to have their cars put in condition for wet weather or to do the work themselves, which on so many little jobs requires so little if any real skill.

"Our business is naturally a barometer of activity on the part of motor car owners," says Mr. S. Minnice, sales manager of the Western Auto Supply Agency, "for it is here that they get their supplies and equipment and we can quite easily get a line on what kind of work they are doing and there is no question but that more Los Angeles motorists are caring for the mechanical condition of their cars today than ever before in the history of local motoring.

"Two things have contributed to the great increase in numbers of motorists who adjust and fix up their own cars; the higher cost of labor in automobile repair shops is the first incentive to "do it yourself;" and secondly a great deal of pleasure and benefit is derived from keeping the car in trim."

Among the many things which motorists are doing in the way of preparing for wet weather, according to Mr. Minnice is waterproofing their tops or putting on the new one-man handy top—painting their own car, which with our Shine-Brite Paint makes it a very simple thing for any one to do a first-class job—relining their brakes—replacing worn skid chains—looking after tread cuts in tires—and so many other little things which takes so little time and yet which all means added comfort or safety to motoring."

COMPLAINTS ON SIGNALS.

That delivery wagons and trucks on urban and rural highways in the southern part of the State are not paying enough attention to the new rules for arm signals is a contention of many members of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

In fact, several complaints have been filled with the organization, according to its officials, stating that truck drivers and delivery boys evidently never heard that an arm or hand signal is the correct thing. They go slewing around corners, state the complaints, as though they were privileged characters who are not called upon to comply with the law.

Whether or not it is just plain bone-headedness on the part of the operators of some commercial vehicles or whether it is an exalted idea of their importance which compels them to omit any signals whatsoever has not yet been determined by the authorities, but Auto Club officials are convinced that the law must be obeyed by every driver, whether touring or commercial, and the authorities are going to start a strenuous campaign of arrests to that end.

As a general rule, the club points out that the new hand signals have been carefully adopted by Southern California motorists, with the exception of some truck drivers, and all commercial corporations having trucks in the field are being urged to impress upon their drivers the dangers arising from failure to give the correct signals.

POTENT SELLING ARGUMENT.

The most potent selling argument for a motor truck has just come to the Republic Motor Truck Company, because they, of all companies, have earned the right to use it.

"This argument will undoubtedly carry more weight to those who are in the market to purchase a truck than any other statement we could possibly use," said Harold L. Arnold, distributor of Republic trucks in Southern California, "due to the fact that there are more Republic trucks in use than any other make in the world.

"Users of Republic trucks have all along recognized their high standing, power and performance in an extraordinary degree; ability to stand abuse; unusual economy under the extremes of use and misuse; exceptional service ability—these are the qualities which have made the Republic the largest-selling motor truck in the world. The potentiality in that statement will certainly impress everyone interested in a commercial vehicle. The Republic Company, because of the feeling of confidence that is in the mind of the average business man, has become the largest exclusive motor truck manufacturer in the world. That, in a single sentence, speaks volumes for Republic performance, Republic economy, long life and every other factor that enters into the use of a motor truck. It is the proof of the fact that the Republic is a good truck for any business, and that it deserves all the good reputation that its performance has built for it.

"In our own locality, one of the features which has made the Republic truck such a staisfactory commercial asset to every business house is the splendid service station and experts which we have for the care and attention of Republic trucks. Our parts department is especially valuable to owners, because in case of accident where breakages occur, we can supply any part needed for the instant rebuilding or reassembling of the damaged part. Commercial service is making friends and increased sales of Republic trucks every month."

MOTOR TRUCKS AT THE BAT.

"Coal—that is the commodity that the nation is most concerned about at the present time, due to the strikes in the great eastern mining centers, but this concern over coal will quickly die out just as soon as the controversy is settled," says Mr. R. T. Bull, branch manager of the Garford Motor Truck Company.

"Coal is impossible to replace when once mined and there is a limit to the coal supply in the United States, yet knowing this, we continue to use coal for power that could be replaced by energy from other sources.

"It is a fact that there is available in this country 25,000,000 horse power of water, which at the present time is wasted. The railroads are the greatest sinners in this country — 25 per cent. of the coal mined in this country is burned by them. And 10 to 12 per cent. of the total mileage movement behind the engine is made up of company coal and coal cars.

"The future of our commercial progress depends upon the ability of our transportation facilities to keep pace with our fast-growing industries. The motor truck has been a great factor in relieving the strain that has been placed on our railroads. And the motor truck is one of the methods of transportation that will enable us to keep our traffic moving at the pace required by our swift moving industries.

"As for use of oil on a railroad engine the policy is an industrial sin. The West is where the oil-burning engines are consuming oil that will be needed in the future for the moving of motor trucks, and transportation men state that motor trucks will be the salvation of our industries.

"In the western mountains millions of horse power of water are wasted that could be utilized to run these engines that are now consuming our oil supply.

"By analyzing our sales of Garford trucks," continued Mr. Bull, "we are able to ascertain the trend of transportation and we have found that thousands of motor trucks are purchased to be used in place of the railroads on hauls up to 100 miles and longer.

"In this era of reconstruction that is now going on the motor truck is a factor in keeping the finished products of our industries moving at sufficient speed so as not to retard the unprecedented growth of our manufacturers. And the public should see that all power is utilized and that the wasteful use of oil should be prevented."

HOTEL EXPERTS TO DISCUSS GOOD ROADS.

There is to be a discussion of the good roads problem by numerous hotel men on Tuesday, November 11, the day following the opening of the New York hotel men's exposition and convention, which will occupy the week of November 10, in Grand Central Palace, New York City. This is the fourth annual exposition, which draws upwards of 40,000 hotel and restaurant men from all parts of the country to the metropolis, and is considered an important get together by the hotel interests. The subject of good roads is one that is vitally important to the hotel industry, and to a material extent the hotels have received the co-operation of various automobile organizations.

SERVICE IDEAS REGULAR THING.

ADOPTION OF TIME-PAYMENT PLAN APPROVED BY ALL MOTORISTS.

Innovations and service ideas have become quite the regular thing down at the Western Auto Electric Corporation, the Willard battery headquarters, and many of their ideas put to practical use here have proven so satisfactory and of so much benefit to motorists that they have been taken by the Willard factory for use in other parts of the country.

It was Mr. A. J. Tobey of local Willard battery fame who first conceived the idea of carrying battery service to the home of motorists by establishing the neighborhood service stations and who later was the first man to give definite battery insurance by issuing an unqualified eighteen-months' insurance policy on every Willard threaded rubber battery sold here.

The last idea brought forward by this firm, and one that has proved a very interesting one to motorists, was the breaking of all precedent and arranging a time-payment plan on the sale of this battery, but now the Willard factory is also taking a hand in the innovation game, too, as shown in their announcement they are now making that reinsulation of batteries is now a thing of the past because the threaded rubber insulation of the Willard battery will outlast the plates and therefore makes it unnecessary.

"On first thought, this may seem preposterous," says Mr. A. J. Tobey, "and as far as all battery precedent is concerned it is, but to those who know threaded rubber insulation for what it really is there is nothing strange or unusual about it, because the four years of service which thousands of motorists have been getting have proven this very thing to be true."

DRIVES WITH EASE ON HER FIRST TRIP.

PILOTS LIGHT CAR THROUGH TRAFFIC AFTER INSTRUCTIONS ON GEAR SHIFTING.

It wasn't such a long time ago that the sight of a woman driving a car was unusual enough to cause comment and remarks about their pluck and nerve, but with the thousands of women driving nowadays this is never given a thought. However, when one of the fair sex takes a car out for a hundred-mile spin and part of it night driving, the very first time she ever sat at the wheel, it is still something to marvel at.

This is just exactly what Mrs. Belle Ott did last Sunday in a Nelson car, according to Mr. Frank Nelson of the Nelson Auto Company, distributors in Southern California for this car with the Aerotype motor.

Mrs. Ott had never driven a car before, but last Sunday she decided to try and after a few instructions on gear shifting she piloted a Nelson up to Newhall and Saugus, says Mr. Nelson, and most of the trip back was made after dark and there was a tremendous amount of traffic on the road, too, but she said the Nelson handled so easily she never once lost her nerve or was scared.

ONE-EIGHTH OF ROADS IMPROVED.

"According to figures recently compiled in Washington," said T. W. Cushing, general sales manager of the Maibohm Motors Company, Sandusky, Ohio, "only one-eighth of the public roads in the United States have been improved. The total length of these roads is 2,478,552 miles, of which 299,135 miles are improved with some form of surfacing. A large portion of this mileage is, however, composed of sand, clay, much of which is proving inadequate for present-day traffic.

DECIDED TREND TOWARD HEATERS.

One of the outstanding features of motor car production this season is the trend towards car heaters. Twenty motor-car manufacturers are equipping all or part of their line of closed cars with car heaters.

This may be regarded as an indication that before long a heater will be considered as a necessary part of standard equipment to the same extent as a starter.

Comfort being one of the principal features of owner interest, car heaters are certain to have a strong appeal to car owners and influence their decision in purchasing a car.

THE BODY IN WINTER.

Many car owners have found that the body finish needs extra protection in winter. The outward attraction of a perfectly good car may be spoiled by leaving the body finish without attention throughout the winter. At this time of year it is a good plan to give the car a thorough cleaning and then give it two coats of varnish. Varnish is simply a protecting medium and if it is allowed to wear off the paint beneath is sure to suffer in the rains and mud of the winter.

AUTO OWNERS BLED BY FREAK STATUTE.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 7.—How a State law is being used to "bleed" automobile owners was disclosed at the directors' meeting of the National Automobile Dealers' Association in Denver, October 1-4, by George D. McCutcheon of Atlanta, southeastern director for the association. McCutcheon called attention to the fact that in both North and South Carolina there is a law providing that wherever an automobile injures a pedestrian or other person by collision or otherwise, the person so injured may institute a suit for the forfeiture of the vehicle.

This law has been taken advantage of very curiously. The courts have ruled that anyone driving an automobile with the owner's consent stands in the same relation before the law as the owner. Under this interpretation chauffeurs take out expensive, high-powered automobiles and having previously conspired with unscrupulous persons have accidents in which pedestrians are run over and injured, though seldom seriously. Instead of buying an automobile or stealing it, the "prospects" in North and South Carolina is now going out, spotting the car he wants and permitting it to run into him.

So serious has this situation become and so dangerous to the automobile owner that the National Automobile Dealers' Association passed a resolution denouncing the law and pledged its support to the newly formed Bi-State Trade Association in the Carolinas that when the Legislatures next met the national association support would be given to the local dealers to obtain the repeal of these statutes.

WATCH ALIGNMENT OF ALL CAR WHEELS.

RIM AND WEEL ADJUSTMENTS ARE NEEDED TO INSURE TIRE LIFE.

Have you ever noticed in driving along the roads, how the rear wheels of cars directly in front of you and going in the same direction, wobble? or how the front wheels of cars approaching you have an erratic, dizzy, side-to-side movement?

The next time you do see this just let it be a reminder to have your own wheels looked over for the wheels on your car may be doing the same thing without your knowledge of it and such a wobbling action of the wheels has a most destructive effect on the life of a tire, wearing off the tread quickly, says F. H. Osler of the Osler-Racine Rubber Company.

Rim and wheel alignment should be frequently and accurately checked as it takes but a short time to ruin a tire if the wheel is badly out of alignment and the damage may be done before the motorist is aware of the trouble.

There is a new instrument which a few good tire houses have, which can quickly and accurately determine whether wheels are properly aligned and any firm that has one of them should be glad to help you at any time to see if your wheels are running true.

ENOUGH SIGNS TO LINE CANAL.

Club Trucks Cover Wide Territory.

Seventy Thousand Guide Posts Erected.

plaints Registered Against Sign-Shooting.

Enough guide signs to provide a roof over the major portions of the Panama Canal or an eighteen coastal wall along the entire border from San Diego to Ariz., have been erected to date by the Automobile Club of Southern California, according to a comprehensive report issued yesterday.

This constitutes the most remarkable highway signposting system in the world, and not only includes Southern California but also the transcontinental routes leading to this part of the State, it is pointed

In road charting and actual signposting work, club trucks are covering approximately 100,000 miles of road annually, and in the month of October the club crews totalled 10,- miles in erecting signs in the

By the end of the fiscal year it is estimated that the organization will have placed 67,500 guide signs for the use of local motorists and visitors coming to California who wish to see the southern part of the State to the best advantage. At the present time there are 62,145 signs on local and transcontinental highways bearing the insignia of the Southern California organization of motor car owners, which is now the largest and most powerful in the world.

If all the signs so far erected were placed point to point, a "figure shark" has doped it out that they would reach from Santa Barbara to San Diego, with enough left over to spill over into Imperial county. Each sign is of metal enamel, and if they were welded together they would provide a permanent roof for the locks of the Panama Canal.

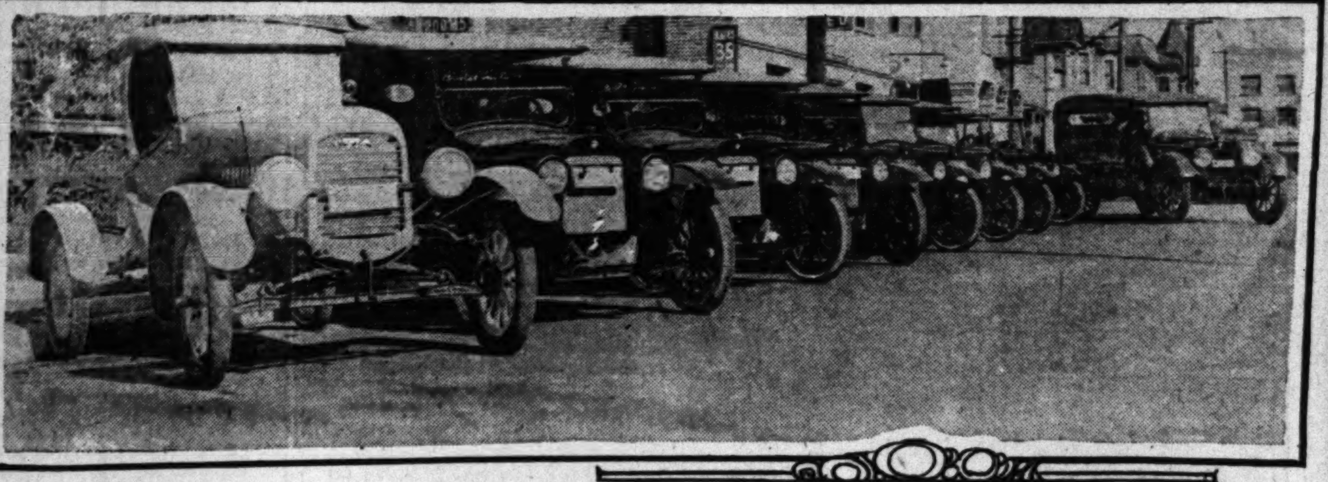
Motorists arriving here by the railroads from eastern points state that they had been seriously influenced in choosing Southern California as a terminus because of the marked transcontinental routes which lead westward from the vicinity of Kansas City. These signs had been erected by the club for the use of cross-country tourists as well as for local motor car owners driving East.

At the present time the organization is engaged in making the desert roads safe for travelers by the placing of signs marking water holes and indicating every trail so that no motorist who follows them has any reason to get lost or to find himself without water.

Special signs state how far it is to the next available water, and warning the traveler to "stock up." This work is being done in and around the famous Death Valley region and extends into Nevada. Two trucks are also at this time in Inyo county putting up a new and complete system of signs, and a crew is likewise engaged in renovating the sign system of the Imperial Valley and vicinity.

It is expected that more than 5000 additional signs will be placed before the end of the year, this form of activity being one of the several major works of the club in giving service to its members and to others who "sponge" off of their support.

Sign-shooting as an out-door sport is not as popular as it was a few years ago, say club officials, but many complaints are daily registered by motorists who say that signs are defaced on highways through the alleged duck-hunting regions. There is a law against shooting from the highways in this State, evolved for the safety of the traveling public and for the protection of valuable road guide signs, and the authorities are going to enforce it to the limit from now on, it is stated.



A Large Flock of Maxwells,

Recently delivered to a local taxicab concern by Harold L. Arnold. The Maxwells will be rented by the concern without drivers and it is claimed that the charges will be within the reach of all.

GOOD MEMORIES IN MOTOR GAME.

FINDS OUT THAT PUBLIC KNOWS MORE ABOUT CAR THAN WAS THOUGHT.

That motorists generally have good memories is being given daily proof in Los Angeles in the growing volume of inquiries being received about the Briscoe motor car, deliveries on which are again being made to the Frank O. Renstrom Company, the distributors.

"Selling Briscoes is about the easiest task our salesmen have ever encountered," J. C. Planck, Renstrom sales manager, avers, "because we find they know much more about the Briscoe than we suspected."

"Oh, yes, I know all I need to know," Manager Planck says a visitor declared last week, "all that I have been waiting for was an announcement that the cars were ready for delivery. I could have bought any number of cars since I first made up my mind to own a Briscoe, but I held off because I knew what I wanted."

It developed later on in their conversation, the Renstrom sales manager said, that the visitor, who left with a Briscoe, had made up his mind to own one after reading in the Los Angeles newspapers an account of the Yosemite economy run some months ago in which the Briscoe averaged for the entire trip 28.8 miles to the gallon on gasoline.

TAKE 'EM WITHOUT DRIVER

At last it has become possible through the efforts of H. J. Bristol, president of the Bristol Taxi Company, for every man to run an automobile without driver; charges of which will be within the reach of all.

A deal has just been consummated by the Bristol Taxi Company through Harold L. Arnold for the purchase of a large fleet of Maxwell automobiles for this purpose. The first unit of these was delivered last week.

Mr. Bristol in speaking of his success states, "about March 1, 1917, I started the Bristol Taxi Company, in a short time I realized what a large field there was for a taxi company if operated on a strictly clean, legitimate principle by the use of first-class automobiles. In the short time of four years I have been able to increase from four cars until the present time, with my first delivery of Maxwell automobiles, I have thirty-one cars in service. All of this was due to the constant fighting to overcome such delinquencies as are known to the taxi game.

In looking about to find an automobile which, in operation would be economical and easy for the most inexperienced driver to handle, of the entire field I picked the Maxwell. Patent clutch made the action so easy that anybody with ordinary intelligence could be taught to successfully operate it in a very few minutes. I anticipate having at least fifty of these Maxwells in service by January 1, provided I can get delivery of them. Maxwells linked with my policy of business, which is fairness to all, better service and lower rates, will at all times be in great demand."

KEEPING ITS PROMISE.

Fulfilling the ambitious promises made to its distributors some months ago when announcement was made of enlargement of the factory, the Jordan Motor Car Company has notified the Seager-Clark Company of Los Angeles that six carloads of new Jordan motor cars are now on the way to this city. In these times of automobile scarcity such good news comes like a meteor, so momentarily the sales-crew of the Jordan distributors gave a first-class demonstration of college-yell leaders.

For months the distributors here have been inundated with orders, and floods of telegrams to the factory for more machines invariably brought the response that new factory additions would remedy the situation soon. There was hope in such advices—but that seemed to be about all.

Comes now word that six carloads of glistening new Jordan models, both of the silhouette and the sensational new silhouette five types, are well on their way toward Los Angeles. It will enable the Seager-Clark Company to clean up many of its back orders, and incidentally it will gladden the hearts of many purchasers who patiently have been waiting for months for their Jordans.

Robert S. Weaver, vice-president and general manager of the Seager-Clark Company, will leave Tuesday for the East. He will go direct to Boston to attend a meeting of the Amateur Athletic Union, of which the well-known os Angeles automobile merchant is national vice-president. He goes East as representative of the Southern Pacific Association of the Amateur Athletic Union, being president of the district organization. He will endeavor to bring a number of championship events to Los Angeles, and also hopes to get a number of Southern California athletes in the American team to the Olympic games to be held in Belgium next year.

From Boston he will go to Cleveland to confer with officials of the Jordan Motor Car Company, with one large hope of being able to increase the allotment of Jordan cars for Southern California. The demand here is unprecedented, and with the enlargement of the Jordan dealership organization in the territory increased shipments are necessary.

Tom Hughes, famous pitcher for the old Boston team, has entered the automobile field as salesman for the Ostrander Motor Car Company in Pasadena. The noted hurler feels confident of being able to put Jordan orders right over the plate with the same good control and speed as he sent the horsehide zipping over the plate.

ONE REASON FOR SHORTAGE

In addition to getting action on shipments of cars from the factories a trip East has other advantages and very illuminating ones, at that, according to George W. Franklin, manager of the Security Motor Corporation who got back to Los Angeles a week ago from the plant of the Mitchell Motors Company at Racine, Wis.

One of the things Manager Franklin learned concerned several of the reasons for the motor car shortage which are not understood by the motoring public.

"I'll bet there isn't a man in the motor car manufacturing game in Detroit," the Security manager declared, "who doesn't own or at least drive a car. I never saw anything like it, and the conditions in Detroit are duplicated practically in every motor car manufacturing center of the East.

"With wages as high as they are for all classes of labor it is easy to understand the demand for motor cars coming from people who never owned them before, but what makes it hard for the rest of us is that the auto factory employees are really grabbing the new cars hot off the griddle, as it were, with the result that prospective purchasers throughout the country have to wait."

Another thing which came to Franklin's notice was the difficulty which some manufacturers are having getting a supply sufficient for their needs of small items for cars, such as bolts and the like.

TOURING CHAMPIONSHIP.

Women motorists in California are no novelty. Many women tour extensively in this State, driving their own cars into the mountains and along the shores, but to Mrs. M. M. Yarborough and her daughter, Mrs. L. Y. Cunningham, who recently toured California and then drove home to Dallas, Tex., in their Cadillac Victoria, undoubtedly belongs the women's touring championship. During the past two summers they have driven 17,000 miles exclusively on tours and for next summer are already planning an extensive trip.

In 1918 they thoroughly covered the southern and eastern States, traveling 12,000 miles. One set of tires sufficed for the entire tour. Starting at Dallas, they crossed the southern States to Florida, then north to New York, to the White Mountains, across Canada to the Great Lakes and south again through the Mississippi Valley.

This year their tour was not so pretentious. From Dallas they crossed the Southwest to Los Angeles and return, a matter of 5000 miles.

On both trips they traveled alone, doing all the driving and depending on men only for occasional inspections of the car. The Cadillac used on these journeys traveled a total distance of more than 100,000 miles.

Both women are strong advocates of closed cars for touring. The many conveniences and the protection from inclement weather offer strong inducements to the woman motorist.

Travel of 350,000 miles to date is the record rolled up by a Cadillac which is in bus service on the thirty-five-mile stretch between Watertown, N. Y., and Clayton, N. Y.

This figure is vouched for by Fred I. Dailey, who runs the Cadillac. Mr. Dailey tells how he bought the chassis in April, 1914. It then had a wheelbase of 145 inches and he fitted it out with a sixteen-passenger omnibus body. In this shape, Mr. Dailey says he ran the car 310,000 miles.

Then he lengthened the wheelbase to 155 inches and increased the passenger capacity to twenty-five. Since the car was enlarged it has been run 40,000 miles, making the total of 350,000 miles.

Mr. Dailey says he has used three radiators, having experienced freezing several times in the severe Northern New York winters. So far as the engine is concerned, Mr. Dailey says it is practically the original. He has had three sets of piston rings and two new connecting-rod bearings and is still using the original cylinders and the original pistons. He says the engine works as smoothly and efficiently as it ever did.

REMOVING SPINDLE BUSHING.

When it is found impossible to drive out the spindle bushing of a Ford car, try cutting through the bushing longitudinally with a hack-saw, in two places. When this has been done it will be found easy to drive out the two sections of the bushing.

THREE THOUSAND STARTERS A DAY.

FORD PRODUCTION IN THIS LINE FAR AHEAD OF ANY SINGLE PLANT.

Ten months ago the Ford Motor Company was not manufacturing electric starters; today the output of its starter department is greater than that of any other manufacturer of electric-starting devices in the world. Its nearest competitor makes 1000 a day, whereas the Ford company's output is over the 3000 mark, according to Mr. B. L. Graves, manager of the local branch of the Ford Motor Company.

The Ford starter—and generator, for it is really two separate units—is not the result of a new idea or a sudden decision. More than eight years ago Mr. Henry Ford's vision saw the need, and his electrical engineers were instructed to begin experimenting. After seven years of constant research, which took into consideration the many different climates in which the Ford car is used, together with the factors of size and weight and an adaptability to quantity production, twenty-three trial jobs were built. These were tested in many different ways. Mr. Ford himself used one on his car for a year. Still the engineers continued their experiments and improvements.

Then came the order from the government for 15,000 three-ton tanks, each one of which was equipped with two synchronized Ford motors. A starter was essential, so the one now being installed on Ford cars was evolved. But only one starter and generator was used to turn over the two Ford motors in each tank. January 1, 1919, the Ford Motor Company began equipping inclosed cars with this new starting and lighting system. Ford engineers say that although the entire system—starter and generator—weighs only thirty-one pounds, it produces a higher torque output (constant rotary motion) pound for pound, than any other system on the market.

When the department for building the starting and lighting systems first began production, fifty hours labor was charged to each unit, but now that machinery and equipment have been installed, the time per unit is four hours. Two huge armature impregnating ovens have been installed each with a capacity of 1700 every eight hours. In these ovens the armatures are dried, soaked in varnish and dried again. Eight hours' time is required for this one operation.

The power from the starter to the motor is applied through the well-known Bendix drive, which automatically engages the starter and then, once the motor is started, the starter immediately disengages. It is equipped with oilless bearings and needs practically no attention.

Within another thirty days or six weeks, the Ford company expects to be making enough starters so that every Ford car will be equipped with the electric starting and lighting system.

HAPPY MEDIUM IN DESIGN THROUGHOUT.

EXPRESSES GOOD TASTE RATHER THAN NOISY EFFECTS IN DESIGN.

Unusual enthusiasm has marked the reception here as elsewhere throughout the country of the new Columbia six roadster, according to the sales force of the Leach Biltwell Motor Company, Columbia distributors. M. A. Leach himself regards the Columbia roadster as one of the most handsome models ever developed.

One of the outstanding features of the new model is the standard equipment of five Disteel wheels. The extra wheel is carried at the rear of the car in a counter-sunk space in the deck, which gives the car unbroken lines from front to rear.

Commenting on the tendency toward straight line effects seen in the Columbia, Mr. Leach directed attention to the absence of freakish, sharp lines and angles.

"In the Columbia one readily recognizes a happy medium in body design that gives the buyer a source of satisfaction in that he or she knows that the car is expressive of good taste," he said.

"A car which tends toward a freak design may appear attractive, when it is really nothing more than startling, and the result is the owner soon tires of it. To illustrate what I mean by approved motor car style I have only to direct attention to the fact that the man who is pointed out as a good dresser is never the man who is triving for the noisiest effects. An extreme novelty suit usually goes out of date in a comparatively few weeks, and the same is true of freak in motor car designs."

ECONOMY DEPENDS ON THE MOTORIST.

"To a great extent, economy of operation depends as much upon the owner as upon the car itself," says H. S. Daniels, advertising manager of the Dort Motor Car Company. "If the car owner would study this question of economy and keep it before him all the time, he would find many ways of cutting his operation costs."

The Authoritative Style

Velie

THE keenest contest of all motordom this year was to be the first to bring out the Authoritative Style that everybody knew was coming.

It is the Velie's triumph. In the new 1920 Velie the idea of today is realized ahead of all others. It is a subtle combination of mirror-like planes that seem to flow into each other—a new expression to the old automobile graces. You have to see it to appreciate how perfectly it is done.

New comfort in the longer body—more room—more rest in soft, deep-plaited upholstery. With the style advance goes the new motor—with internally heated vaporizer, 4-bearing crankshaft, bronze backed bearings. Silent, supple, satisfying—on low-grade fuel. More power at less cost.

A Larger and Finer Grant Six

Everyone of the twenty-two hundred people who saw the New Grant Six last week agreed that it was the "Epitome of Smartness.". Those whose appreciation of motor cars is such that they considered only its outward appearances were as enthusiastic over the New Grant Six as those whose knowledge of motor car mechanical construction enabled them to study its design.

Secretly we tried the new car out on hills ourselves. We doubted its ability to perform, as most people are wont to do, but we found it equal to every pull.

In traffic it surged ahead easily and quickly and on the highway, those whose sporting blood runs high will surely meet with the rough arm of the law if an eager foot presses down hard on the throttle.

There is no tiresome sensation about the way it travels—you never feel it needs your nursing—rather are you inclined to keep your right foot on the brake pedal, so easily does the New Grant Six cover the miles.

The long, low, graceful lines—beveled along the body—are distinctively exclusive—they immediately stamp the Grant Six as one in which pride of ownership is combined with satisfaction of performance.

Prompt Deliveries Are Assured.

DOINGS AT FACTORIES.

tion of Motor Truck Sales Managers had a two-day convention of that body Friday and Saturday, in which trade subjects were discussed.

The following papers were read: "Eliminating the Trade-in Evil," by J. W. Allen of New York. "Practical Method of Determining Values of Used Motor Trucks," by H. H. Schuart, secretary of the Detroit Automobile Dealers' Association; "Selling the Farmers and Operators Rural Motor Express Lines," by F. W. Fenn, secretary Motor Truck Committee, National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, New York; "Effect of Pneumatic Tires on Truck Sales," by C. A. Wales of Bridgeport, Ct.; "Prohibitive Licensing or Taxing of Motor Trucks and Motor Truck Legislation, Generally," by Alfred Reeves, general manager National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, New York; "Attitude of Banks Towards Financing Motor Trucks for Dealer and Retail Purchaser," by Charles R. Talbot vice-president National Bank of Commerce, Detroit; "Good Trade Practices," by A. J. Whipple, Chicago; "Vocational Mediums for Motor Truck Advertising," L. D. Dudley, Federal Motor Truck Company, Detroit; "Should Trucks Be Manufactured and Sold Completely Equipped?" by A. E. Schafer, Lima O.

FOREIGN INVASION.

Further evidence of the predicted invasion of the United States by foreign motor-car manufacturers is given by the announcement that the Vauxhall-Pomeroy Company is making arrangements for the formation of an American company which will produce the car on this side of the Atlantic. The capital stock and personnel will be American with only a working agreement between the two concerns. This announcement following on the heels of the statement that an American Rolls-Royce company will manufacture the latter machine, seems to be but the beginning of a decided effort of leading European automobile manufacturers to come over here or to arrange for the production of their cars by American companies. Several French corporations, among them the Panhard, Renault and DeBion-Bouton, are reported ready to follow the lead of the two English companies.

CITRUS FRUIT MEN USE MOTOR TRUCKS.

RAPID TRANSPORTATION NECESSARY IN GETTING FRUIT TO MARKET.

Citrus fruit growers of Southern California have discovered a greatly increased usefulness in the motor truck since the coming of the giant pneumatic cord tire. Ranchers have found that trucks equipped with pneumatics are able to easily negotiate the cultivated ground of the orange and lemon groves where the solid tired truck is unable to go. A good example of the success of a truck with this tire equipment in orchard work is furnished by a two-ton truck which has been used in orchard work for several months by Loyd R. Coffin, of Glendora.

According to Mr. Coffin, the Commerce two-ton truck with pneumatic tires is able to pull decidedly heavier loads of fruit from the orchard than can a two-horse team.

"Seventy-two boxes of oranges, weighing an average of fifty-two pounds per box, is an average for a team of horses," Mr. Coffin last week told Freeman A. McKenzie, Southern California distributor for the Commerce. "That is the size of load we were hauling with a team before we bought the truck. The ranch is something like three miles from the packing-house, and three round trips per day was the best that the team could do.

"The Commerce truck has no difficulty in coming out of the grove with 108 boxes of oranges. Once on the boulevard, I can travel twenty miles an hour with this load. The truck will make eight round trips per day to the packing-house as against three for the team, hauling 864 boxes of fruit per day instead of 216. The pneumatic tires of course insure that there is the least possibility of the fruit becoming bruised on the way to the packing-house."

Don Smith, the general manager for the Herbert Company, says that the interest that the Cleveland car has created is remarkable. Inquiries have come in by letter, long-distance and local telephone calls and even by telegram. Although at this time not one car has been delivered to a private owner and consequently there has been very little word-of-mouth comment, such as always follows when cars get into the hands of users, several hundred persons have called to inspect the car.

"The remarkable reception that has been accorded the Cleveland car undoubtedly is due to the confidence of the public in the personnel of the factory and the dealer representation," says Mr. Smith. "The men who are back of the Cleveland are nationally known for the success they have met in building other automobiles. The public feels they would not be identified with any but a high-class motor product. Already the demand for the car from all parts of the country has been so large that additions are now being made to the factory to permit of an increased output."

BASEBALL RUNS IN THE FAMILY.

Harry by name, who played professional baseball.

Wally Schang, ranked as one of the best backstops in the business until his work was injured by being shifted to other positions, has a younger brother, who this season played with Seattle and Sacramento.

Fred Clarke and Josh Clarke were National League contemporaries.

Bobby Roth belongs to the same family as Frank Roth, former big league pitcher.

Johnny Evers and Heinie Groh both have brothers in the minor leagues.

"Bix Six" monopolized the high-class talent in the Mathewson family, but his brother, Henry, was in the ranks for a time. Roger Bresnahan had a brother who took a fling at the game, as did George Tyler. Harry Camnitz was a fair worker, but hardly in the class with Howard.

Old-timers still talk enthusiastically about the Tebeaus, Pat and George; John and Jim O'Rourke, George and Harry Wright, "Long John" and Buck Ewing and the Whites.

The Delehanty family probably was the most prolific. An even half-dozen athletes emerged from the Delehanty domicile. They ran largely to heavy hitters. Reading from left to right they were, Ed, Jim, Frank, Joe, Tom and Will.

The Donohues were not far behind the Delehantys, numerically speaking. Jiggs started life as a catcher, but later shifted to first base, where he starred in the Cub-White Sox series. Pat Donohue, a catcher, graduated from Portland to the Boston Red Sox, later playing a short engagement with the Athletics. Will and Frank Donohue were lesser lights in the great national pastime.

HAS NO TROUBLE IN DOWN-TOWN TRAFFIC.

GENE HASTY SAYS SHE'LL BE ABLE TO GET ALONG O. K. AND DOES.

Discovered! The motorist who makes no complaint against driving in traffic in Los Angeles. And it is a woman who smiles and says she manages to get along without making a fuss about it. She is Mrs. Ephigene Schweer. For several years she has been driving her own car in New York City and when it was suggested to her that she might be bothered by driving in the down-town district of Los Angeles she merely smiled and said, "O, I guess I'll be able to get along, all right. It can't be any worse out here than it was in New York."

Mrs. Schweer, whose stage name is Gene Hasty, is a recent arrival from the East. She has been identified with the World Film and the Fox Film companies in New York and has come here to engage in motion-picture work. Before leaving New York she decided she would not have much use for an automobile in Los Angeles so she disposed of her car. She had not been here two days, she admits, until she realized she had made a mistake and that a car would be an absolute necessity.

As she had owned and driven two Chandler coupes in the East, her first thought naturally was of another car of that type. She visited the establisment of Earl V. Armstrong, Inc., the Chandler distributers, the very day the first of the new series coupes was received here. She noted its many improvements over previous models and asked if she could get it. The coupe had been promised another purchaser, but after some maneuvering the matter of delivery was adjusted and Mrs. Schweer obtained the car.

Her spare minutes now are devoted to mastering the book of rules on Los Angeles traffic, as stopping behind street cars and not over-running the "pimple," as she calls the button at street intersections, are new regulations to her.

HYDROMETER HOLDER.

The hydrometer, which every careful car owner uses constantly on his battery, is easily broken and it is somewhat of a problem to know where to keep it. The best way is to keep it right in the wooden case in which it comes and to attach metal straps to the wall, into which the case and instrument may be thrust after the car owner has finished his battery test.

FLOOR SCRAPER.

It is possible to make a very useful floor scraper from an old license plate, by attaching the same to the end of a broom handle and placing a cross board to brace the plate. Iron braces from the handle to the cross piece prevent the head of the scraper from bending. This tool is very convenient for cleaning oil and other [illegible] matter from the garage floor.

SIGNS UP STATE MACHIN

All cars operated by the State of California are to be with Horseshoe tires during the next year, a contract having been recently affected, according to Roy R. Meads, and general manager of the Pacific Rubber Company, tributors of Horseshoe tires.

"The contract, which covers every car operated its several departments, was only completed after an vestigation of the merits of Horeshoe tires. We tion with many other makes, and the fact that we in securing this very important contract is naturally to us," said Meads.

EXPANSION EVERYWH

"The expansion in every line of business in 1920 will only be limited by physical ability. There seems to be no limit to the money that is available for investment in business enterprises. There is not a standard line of automobiles and trucks that is not oversold, so I was informed, and it is predicted that this condition will continue indefinitely," declared O. R. Fuller of the White Auto Company, distributor of White trucks and Stephens salient six cars, who returned last Tuesday from an eastern business trip.

"Although there is a certain shortage of material and disturbed labor conditions to contend with, the White and the Stephens factories are working at capacity. If such is the case, you will ask, 'then why isn't there enough to go around?' The answer is that the demand is out of all proportion to the output. Taking a Preliminary Slant at the Famous Ridge Route.

permission was obtained last week to travel over the Ridge and a new Oldsmobile eight was driven over the newly completed pavement. The Oldsmobile party claims that the paved Ridge highway is one of the finest drives in the country.

IDGE ROUTE OPEN SOON.

nning to Throw Highway Open to the Public Next Saturday.

Saturday Los Angeles and Joaquin Valley move twen- miles closer for on that date road opens again, this permanently. Paved from end with concrete twenty feet famous section of the Val- highway between Castaic and Bailey's Ranch will on next Saturday be finally opened for travel, almost exactly seven years after the plan of the Ridge road was first conceived by the State Highway Commission. It was a daring conception, too, and its first announcement raised a bitter political controversy, but today the completed Ridge road stands as perhaps the most valuable single piece of road in the entire State highway system. The value of a road that shortened the distance over the mountain barrier between Southern California and the San Joaquin Valley by twenty-four miles is hard to compute, but a few interesting figures given by State Highway Commisioner N. D. Darlington last week give some conception of what it means to motor travelers up and down the State.

SUPPOSITION.

"Suppose for example, that the Tehachepi route had been chosen instead of the Ridge road and the Tejon Pass," said Darlington last week. "This route would have paralleled the railroad, and would have been fifty-eight miles longer than the Ridge. It would have cost half a million more to build, but it is impossible to compute how much more it would have cost motorists to use it. However, I have no doubt that by next year, not less than a thousand cars per day will travel the Ridge road. Their average operating cost, all told, is probably not less than 10 cents per mile. Fifty-eight added miles would have meant an added toll of almost $6000 daily in the cost of motoring between Los Angeles and San Joaquin Valley points. In a year's time this would be over $2,000,000, enough to almost built the Ridge twice over. And this is not placing any value at all upon time saved. As the great ranches of the San Joaquin are broken up more and more into smaller holdings, travel over the Ridge will vastly increase. It is a road that will mean more and more to the motoring public with each passing year."

It is to the especial credit of the planners of the Ridge road that they had the vision and the courage to abandon the old canyon roads, and seek the ridges for the site of their road. High on the divide between the Piru Creek and Castaic Canyon, the Ridge will always be free from the drainage and flood problems that beset the canyon road. The scenic value of the road on a ridge is not to be forgotten either. But the overshadowing merit of the Ridge road is in the immense saving in distance that it gives. Twenty-four miles shorter than via Boquet Canyon and the Tejon, and fifty-eight miles shorter than Tehachepi, the Ridge is unquestionably the "most direct and practical route" between Los Angeles and Bakersfield.

REMARKABLE.

Any Los Angeles motorist who fails to travel over the Ridge road after it is thrown open for travel next Saturday misses the opportunity to see what is probably the most remarkably engineered and finished mountain road in America. The smooth concrete paving is reinforced with twisted iron bars for half of the entire distance through the mountains. Wherever the paving is over filled ground, the iron bars, laid eighteen inches apart, lend their strength to the concrete. Concrete curbs at all danger points add greatly to the safety of the road "Daylighting" the curves, which means notching away the inner bank so that an approaching car can be seen sooner, greatly lessens the chance for collision. Guard rails have already been erected at many points, and much more of this work remains to be done. It is interesting, too, that of the thirty miles that comprise the Ridge, twenty-six were paved by the State Highway Commission at a saving of almost $100,000 over the best bids submitted by contractors.

COMPLETED ROAD.

Last week Manager L. V. Starr of J. W. Leavitt & Co. secured permission from the State Highway Commission to send an Oldsmobile eight over the road to secure photographs of the completed road. It is impossible to do full justice to the Ridge in pictures, however. The thousands of motorists who traveled it during the period before it was paved will not forget the vast panoramas of range after range of mountains that it reveals and undoubtedly since its paving will often seek it again for its scenic beauty alone.

For the present the concrete of the Ridge will be left unsurfaced. According to Commissioner Darlington, no surfacing material has yet been developed which the commission feels would give complete satisfaction on the Ridge. It is vitally necessary that the surface shall be "nonskidding" in all weathers, and shall not "ripple" under the tractive thrust of thousands of climbing wheels. Vitually all the travel over the Ridge is rubber-shod and the concrete surface will stand up under it until such time as a satisfactory surfacing is developed.

The Ridge road today represents an investment of approximately $1,150,000. Of this sum, $450,000 was spent in grading and the balance of $700,000 in paving. Paving was a difficult job at best because of the long material haul, much of it being hauled forty miles over the desert from Lancaster, and was further complicated by difficulty in securing sufficient water, due to the unusually dry season just experienced. Almost one million cubic feet of earth were moved in grading the Ridge, and one cut, dubbed the "Culebra cut," is 105 feet in depth.

The first surveys on the Ridge road were started in the fall of 1912. Almost eighteen months were consumed in most painstaking surveys to determine the very best route for the road, and determined efforts in behalf of the Tehachepi route delayed construction work for almost six months after the surveys were complete. However, in September, 1914, the first grading contract was let, and in October of 1915 the grading was done, and the Ridge thrown open to travel. It was necessary to give the many fills ample chance to settle, so it was not until February of this year that the Ridge was completely closed to travel and the work of paving rushed in earnest.

There still remains a section of ten miles of road in Tejon Pass between Lebec and Rose Station that paving is not finished on. This section will be provided with by-passes, however, and travel will not be interrupted. Lack of funds prevented the paving of this section while the Ridge was closed, but as soon as funds were available from the July bond issue of this year, work was commenced, and the Highway Commission expects to complete this section by next spring, which will complete the paving of the Valley highway between Los Angeles and San Francisco.

CADILLAC

STANDARD OF THE WORLD

A year ago, immediately after the signing of the armistice, we announced to our friends that we did not believe it would be possible to build in 1919 all the Cadillac cars the world would want.

This prediction has been strikingly fulfilled. Our distributors have been unable to accept many of the orders offered them during the past several months.

Under these circumstances, we feel that we owe it to the public to give the facts concerning the present demand for the Cadillac.

We are convinced that this demand is based not upon current conditions, but upon a widespread and wonderful realization of Cadillac value—intensified by its remarkable record in the service of the American army in France.

We do not believe that the extraordinary eagerness to secure the Cadillac arises from the general shortage of motor cars.

On the contrary, we are convinced that it represents a natural, a normal, and a permanent market which is almost certain to increase as time goes by.

Therefore, it is our sincere conviction that the fullest capacities of the Cadillac plant will continue to be taxed all of next year and indefinitely thereafter.

In the light of these facts, those who wish to own this car—the Cadillac—and no other, any time next year, will almost inevitably be courting disappointment if they delay in placing their orders.

Not in our own behalf, but seriously and earnestly, because we wish to guard our friends against disappointment, we urge them to consult their Cadillac distributor and get from him the facts concerning his earliest ability to book and fill their order.

Surely, the pleasure and the satisfaction that arise from the ownership of a Cadillac are worthy of being safeguarded, even if they involve placing now, an order to be filled months hence.

COAL SHORTAGE IS LAUGHED AT.

TIRE FACTORY O. K. AS LONG AS NIAGARA CONTINUES TO FLOW.

Coal strikes, coal shortages or any other disarrangement of the fuel supply can have no effect upon the output of the Hewitt Rubber Company of Buffalo, N. Y., according to a letter received by J. B. Wood, distributor for Hewitt tires and tubes in Southern California and Arizona. This is decidedly pleasing news to Mr. Wood, who, like all others connected with the motor industry and allied trades, are wondering what effect a fuel shortage would have upon their source of supply.

The reason the Hewitt Rubber Company feels so secure is because the plant is located at Buffalo, N. Y., and as long as the Niagara River continues to flow and there is no interruption to the machinery there will be a continuous source of electric power to drive the equipment in the tire-making plant. The only use made of coal at this big establishment is for heating and vulcanizing purposes.

Having no need for coal to furnish the power the enormous storage bins that are full to the top will not be called upon except for two uses, and Mr. Wood, who recently visited the Hewitt factory, says the supply is more than ample for any needs. This means that the company's plans for a greatly increased output of Hewitt tires and tubes will not be interfered with by the coal situation.

EMERGENCY TIRE.

In cases of emergency where the last spare tire has blown and the car owner is confronted by the necessity of running home on the rim, he can save himself this unpleasant operation by wrapping rope around the rim between the spokes. If the rope is drawn tightly the rim will be completely protected and the passengers will not be subjected to severe jarring.

CURING IMPORTANT.

Curing is one of the most important processes in connection with producing motor tires. If a tire is not cured properly the fact soon will become evident when the tire is put into service. The user may not know what the cause of his difficulties are but an experienced tire man can tell at once that it has been under-cured.

"The method of curing the Carlisle cord tire is almost as surprising as the manner of building the casing," says George H. Grabe, the distributor. "The tire is cured on air during the vulcanizing process. A constant high air pressure is maintained in the tire, pressing it uniformly into the iron mold and definitely holding it there throughout the process of vulcanization. The result is the rubber tread and rope carcass are one homogeneous mass. This accounts for the fact that loose treads and sand blisters are unknown to the Carlisle cord tire."

CAR SHORTAGE THREATENING.

Record-Breaking Crops to be Moved by Trucks.

Rail Transportation Fails to Meet Demands.

Importance of Motor Delivery Fully Recognized.

Fruit and vegetable products of this State will break all records, according to preliminary reports gathered by railroads, truck dealers, civic bodies and other interested persons.

There will be a fruit crop which will bring the growers $35,000,000, a bulletin issued by the Santa Fe Railroad declares, and the vegetable yield gives promise of being an enormous one.

SERIOUS SHORTAGE.

In the face of this production there is a serious shortage of cars of all kinds to take care of these and other crops.

Southern California is short 30,000 cars of the supply it will require for moving fruit and vegetables, Congressman H. Z. Osborne told J. J. Esca, chairman of the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce in a letter appealing for aid for growers of this section, a copy of which is in the files of the California Vegetable Union, with offices in the Union Oil Building.

It is in this emergency the auto truck is proving its value, according to C. A. Williams, vice-president of the Western Motors Company, distributors of Kissel trucks and passenger cars.

DOING THEIR SHARE.

"Our trucks are doing their share in saving the crops of the State, but particularly in Southern California," Mr. Williams says. "The demand for our product is steadily increasing and many men who have invested in trucks are making far more than they could working for wages. This is especially true of those who live in the fruit belt."

The situation is regarded as extremely critical by Rail Director W. D. Hines, who recently issued a bulletin to shippers, urging car conservation to the limit, and the use of trucks wherever possible.

In this bulletin Mr. Hines says:

"An unusually heavy grain and coal movement, deferred repairs and construction of public highways in all sections of the country, and the concentrated requirements of suddenly reviving business, combined with the unusual transportation requirements at this time of year, threaten a serious lack of transportation facilities unless all parties interested co-operate in securing the greatest possible utility from the existing limited transportation facilities."

He quotes President Wilson's recent appeal to shippers of the nation, in which all who are using railroad rolling stock are urged to load all cars to the limit of their carrying capacity, by prompt loading and release to the carrier, by eliminating the use of railroad equipment when tonnage can be handled by motor trucks.

D. J. Hogan, traffic manager of the California Vegetable Union, with headquarters in the Union Oil Building, is in the midst of a desperate struggle by wire, mail and telephone to get cars. He says:

EXTENSIVE USE.

"Members of our organization are using auto trucks extensively to move crops, notably of late, tomatoes. It was necessary recently for us to truck 600 lugs of tomatoes from Fullerton, where they had been unloaded for shipment, across country to Nadeau, where empties were available. And that is merely one of scores of instances."

This organization was allotted eighty cars a day in which to move vegetables, but the full number was not made available until recently.

"This limit should be abrogated," Mr. Hogan says, and urged it in letters and telegrams. "All orders for cars should be filled, for only in that way can waste of an essential food product and high prices to consumers in eastern markets be avoided."

The volume of business that is anticipated by the railroads is indicated in a bulletin just issued by the Santa mate is:

Oranges and lemons	50,000	cars
Peaches	450,000	cars
Apricots	160,000	tons
Prunes	120,000	cars
Pears	110,000	cars
Apples	2,500,000	boxes
Table grapes	20,000	cars
Wine grapes	600,000	tons
Walnuts	20,000	tons
Almonds	6,000	tons
Raisins	200,000	tons
Small fruits, value	$20,000,000
Olives and olive oil, value	10,000,000
Total	$350,000,000

Stringent rules and regulations to keep railroad rolling stock in motion have been issued by the Railroad Administration. These include a charge of $10 per day per car for those not unloaded within five days of the hour free time begins to run.

FALSE ECONOMY IN USE OF OIL.

"The car owner who takes pride in telling how he has covered 1000, 1500 or 2000 miles on a gallon of motor oil is practicing false economy," says Mr. Leo McDowell, salesman for the Panama Lubricants Company, distributors for the Pennzoil line of Pennsylvania paraffine base oils and greases. "The great mileage he boasts of to the gallon of oil may sound impressive, but while such a one is saving the price of several quarts of oil, he is setting up a wear in the working parts of the motor which will eventually cost more to replace than any amount of oil that would have been used.

"Motor oil, no matter how good, loses its lubricating qualities after being in the motor a certain length of time, especially in hot weather. It disintegrates, leaving only a remnant of what was once good motor oil, and it has little value as far as lubrication is concerned.

"The wise owner will drain all the oil from the crank case of his car every 1000 miles of service, regardless of how much oil is still there at the time. He will then replace with good, fresh, clean oil. In doing this regularly, he will prolong the life of his car indefinitely."

John B. Morehouse and Family,

Who claim the muddiest transcontinental trip on record. They left their old home at Barre, Vt., in the rainy season and said that rain stayed with them until they reached Southern California. The motor of their Saxon Six had plenty of "authority" to pull it through the 2500 miles of mud and to snag out a dozen other cars that were hopelessly mired. "A perfectly good record for a three-year-old car," is the boast of Mr. Morehouse.

WANTS AGENCY AFTER TRIP OVER CONTINENT

CAR STANDS EVERY TEST PUT TO IT ON LONG, HARD JAUNT.

When a man makes a transcontinental trip in an automobile, encountering every and all sorts of roads and meeting every sort of motoring condition possible and seeing how other cars have acted along the stretch of troublesome miles, and is so favorably impressed with the performance of his car that he immediately goes to the distributors seeking territory to sell them, he must be pretty well pleased with the quality of the car.

And this is exactly what happened here recently when Mr. C. J. Kerr, after completing a long and hard trip from Springfield, Ill., drove up to headquarters of Spencer, Morris and Mang on North Los Angeles street, distributors for the Case car, and asked them what territory they had open, saying that he knew he could sell Case cars, as he was more enthusiastic over its performance, he believed, than any man ever was over any car and he thought he was able to impart some of his enthusiasm to others.

"We informed Mr. Kerr that Orange county was still open for a good live man," said Mr. Earl Spencer, "and he informed us that he was 'it,' and he immediately left for Santa Ana to hunt up a location, telling us to hold for him a couple of the first cars that arrived, for Orange county was soon going to know all about a really wonderful car.

"This enthusiasm on the part of Mr. Kerr is only a sample of what we have been getting from Case owners since our announcement that we had taken over the Case line," Mr. Spencer continued, "for a number of people have taken the trouble to come in and tell us about the performance of their Case cars in making some long, hard, difficult trip, especially where they have seen other motorists in trouble and where they have had to lend a helping hand in pulling some out who were stuck or in towing some one to help, whose car had broken down."

CLOSE LEASE FOR LARGE BUILDING.

FINEST SERVICE STATION IN UNITED STATES IS THE PLAN.

As a result of the tremendous increase in business which has been coming in during the past year, the Stewart products service station announce that they have just closed a lease for a new building to be located at 1364-66 South Figueroa street, where construction work will be started just as soon as the plans for the new building are finally completed.

"Along with the other new homes which have been erected to house different branches of the automobile industry, we are going to make this the finest Stewart products service station in the United States," says Mr. Harry Ungar, the local manager.

"We have found that our business here has doubled right along over the months of last year, and we have realized for some time that we must seek larger quarters, but just where to go was a problem, and we spent a great deal of time studying locations, traffic and the like, and finally selected the Figueroa-street property as the most ideal because Figueroa is truly a through thoroughfare.

"Our new home will give us over 10,000 square feet of floor space, and in front we will have a beautiful showroom, displaying our many products, and in the back, in addition to over 1500 square feet of stockroom space, we will have a big room for repairs and space enough to take care of thirty cars at the same time, and leading into this a wide driveway. When it is completed, we will be in a position to give better service to our customers."

ANTI-FREEZE SOLUTIONS.

This is the time of year to think about anti-freeze solutions and the following formula will prove helpful:

Safe at 15 deg. above zero—Water, 4 gallons; alcohol, ½ gallon; glycerine, ½ gallon.

Safe at 10 deg. below zero—Water, 3 gallons, 1 pint; alcohol, 1 gallon, 1 pint; glycerine, 2 quarts, 1 pint.

Safe at 20 deg. below zero—Water, 1 gallon, 1 pint; alcohol, 2 gallons, 2 quarts; glycerine, 1 gallon, 1 pint.

Also let us advise readers to put a corked bottle of the solution used in the car outside his bedroom window. When this solution freezes or gives signs of doing so, it is the signal to look out for trouble in the cooling system of the car. Further alcohol evaporates rapidly and should be renewed as tests made with the hydrometer indicate that the alcohol content of the solution has grown less.

TO HEAD NEW BRANCH.

E. W. Johnson, who for two years has been sales manager of the Los Angeles factory branch of Apperson Brothers Automobile Company, has resigned to go into business upon his own resources. Mr. Johnson will not be divorced from the Apperson line, however, as he has taken the agency for this make of cars in Pasadena. He has opened a sales and service establishment at 85 West Colorado street and is fortunate enough to have obtained a 1920 sportster model for display purposes. He will receive an anniversary touring model in a few days.

Mr. Johnson is very enthusiastic over the prospects in Pasadena for the Apperson line. The car was represented there in a very successful manner until recently. "For the first time in the twenty-six years they have been building automobiles Apperson Bros. will in 1920 build and market a complete line of open and inclosed models," said Mr. Johnson. "There will be seven models of the 1920 series and in addition the anniversary model, which was brought out to celebrate twenty-five years of motor-car building by Apperson Bros. will be continued. Pasadena motorists always appreciate high-grade motor equipages and I feel the Apperson line will make a special appeal to them."

Harris M. Hanshue, manager of the Los Angeles branch, was at Phoenix last week to see the finish of the El Paso-Phoenix road race and attend the automobile show and other motoring events. The Apperson car was on display at the show.

NICKEL STEEL IS BEST FOR STRENGTH.

EXTENSIVE USE OF THIS STEEL IN NEWEST MEMBER OF TRUCK ROW.

That there is always a very important consideration in selecting motor trucks other than merely the consideration of price, and that is quality of material and design, is the statement of D. F. Poyer of D. F. Poyer and Son, distributors of Transport trucks.

Nickel steel, according to Poyer, which is admitted to be the peer of all unbreakable materials, is used in every part of the Transport truck, where it will tend to strengthen, lighten and benefit. The per cent. of nickel steel varies from 1 to 4½ per cent., depending upon strain and stress thrown upon the parts. Three and one-half per cent. of nickel, according to the Transport factory engineers, will give steel six times the life and stamina of ordinary steel.

"In the Transport," said Poyer, "nickel steel is incorporated in front axle spindles, rear axle spindles, transmission shafts, drive shafts, jack shafts, transmission gears, differential gears, internal pinions spring bolts and in practically all

RETREADING TIRES PROVES A SCIENCE.

GOOD OR BAD RESULTS OBTAINED ACCORDING TO PROCESS ADOPTED.

"There is just as much difference in the retreading of automobile tires as far as good or bad results are concerned as there is in the resoling of shoes," says Mr. Howard Reed, successor to the retail business of the Wade Tire and Rubber Company, "and nearly all of us know where to go for a good job of shoe half-soling that will prove to be a good investment.

"Good results are predetermined by a desire on the part of the workman to do good work as measured by the quality of workmanship which he puts in the job and by the quality of materials used—by a knowledge of determining whether a tire can be retreaded and how to rebuild it—and if a man is interested in building up a reputation he will take all of these things into consideration and then be willing to stand back of his work.

"Many motorists have come to the conclusion that it does not pay to have a tire rebuilt because of the experience he has had and unless a workman is capable of determining in the first place whether or not a tire is worth retreading he is quite apt to retread one that will quickly proceed to blow out.

"Thus it is knowledge combined with a desire to please that determines whether it pays or not as we have proven time and again and our sincerity in guaranteeing the work on a mileage basis and then keeping a public record of all complaints, has brought us a tremendous volume of repair work, causing us to put on a larger force of expert mechanics."

DISPLAY ROOMS AT ATLANTIC CITY.

On account of the growing popularity of Atlantic City as one of the most famous resorts in the country, the Pennsylvania Rubber Company, manufacturers of vacuum cup tires and "ton tested" tubes, has recently completed arrangements for a large display and salesroom on the Garden Pier.

They have leased five rooms on the northeastern end of the pier and are planning to make this display one that will interest the thousands of visitors from all parts of the country.

GOODYEAR COMPANY OWNS RUBBER PLANT.

Several years ago the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company sent representatives to investigate rubber plantations in Sumatra, with the idea of protecting its rubber supply back to the tree, through the establishment of her own plantations.

The company now owns a concession of 20,000 acres near the city of Medan, Sumatra, where the problems of growing rubber for her multitudinous needs are being worked out. A portion of the plantation is already planted and producing when purchased. About 5000 acres are now furnishing rubber, which is constantly coming to the factory at Akron.

The plantation is divided into six parts, each aprpoximating 3000 acres and having its own manager. Except the small portion that had already been planted, clearing off the thicket was necessary before anything else could be done. Thirteen hundred coolies were put to work felling the heavy growth of thicket. The first step was to clear out the vines and undergrowth, then to fell the trees. In this work the Chinese coolies are used for the heavy work and the natives for the tasks that do not demand quite so much muscle.

MOTOR TRUCK SOLVES PROBLEMS.

The immense problem of supplying the world with gasoline for use in automotive vehicles is best illustrated by the fact that there are over 6,000,000 motor vehicles in the United States today, and the demand is far outreaching the supply. The Allied countries of Europe have 350,000 motor vehicles. In 1917, in the United States alone there was one motor vehicle to every eighteen persons. These figures, compiled recently by the research department of the Federal Motor Truck Company of Detroit, Mich., give a fair estimate of the immensity of the distribution problem in the oil and gasoline industry.

A ROTARY GARAGE.

In cases where the garage is so placed that installation of a turntable is impossible, it is possible to place the entire building on a big turntable and give it two doors, front and back, so that after the car has been driven in, the garage is swung around and the vehicle may be driven out in forward instead of being backed out.

CAR SHOWS ROUGH TRIP.

LANDS, Nov. 8.—With the bottom of the crank case of full of dents made by big boulders that smashed up it, but with traces of the paper covering on the running showing that it was a new car, Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Mundy into Redlands this week after completing a trip from Carthage, to Redlands.

"The roads were terrible," he said. "This was a new car and for a time, but in the 2800 miles we traveled it unlimbered to great extent. We camped on the road and went as far as we each day. One stretch of forty-five miles over rocks and was so bad that it took us nine hours to make it. That the place that almost ruined the crank case."

INSTALLS NEW EQUIPMENT.

In its efforts to bring the latest model passenger car up to the exacting and fastidious demands of the automobile buying public, the manufacturers of the Velie six recently found themselves confronted with the problem of installing specially made machinery and equipment for the manufacture of the fenders for the 1920 Velie six.

The engineering department of the company evolved a design which seemed to be the acme of style and symmetry. This had been carried to such a fine point that a certain bevel was required on the edge of the fenders to make it harmonize completely with the rest of the body design.

When, however, this design came to be put into execution, it was discovered that no machine or equipment had ever been made which would turn out the fenders called for in the design and specifications of the new Velie six.

The manufacturers, therefore, set themselves to meet this problem, and the outcome of it was the construction of special equipment to turn out the newly designed fenders. This involved the expenditure of many thousands of dollars for manufacture and installation, but the company adopted the policy that no trouble or expense should be spared to make the new Velie car the most beautiful and distinctive in design of any of the 1920 models.

Judging from the laudatory comments heard from all who have seen the new Velie six on display at the show rooms of the Lord Motor Car Company, Eleventh and Olive streets, the exhaustive efforts and the unlimited expense to which the manufacturers went to produce a car par excellence are being rewarded by the appreciation of the public.

DOUG FAIRBANKS GETS FIRST TIRES.

With Douglas Fairbanks anything that emanates from California is unreservedly O.K. and this prejudice needs no justification, for in the Golden State he has found ideal conditions for shooting movies.

Doug, moreover, knows good automobile tires and wants them to come up smiling after a world of punishment. So the most genial and athletic of our film stars has ordered the first set of Goodyear cord tires to be built in the California plant of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company.

A JACK KINK.

Very often a truss rod is in such a position as to prevent the effective use of the jack. It would be impossible to lift the weight on the rod and the best way to get around the difficulty is to place a piece of U-shaped metal on top of the jack in such a way that the truss rod passes through it, while the upper ends of the U rests on the axle housing.

IMMINENT RAISE IN TIRE PRICES.

SCARCITY OF MATERIAL AND LABOR TROUBLES BLAMED FOR BOOST.

An imminent raise in tire prices of which dealers generally have heard much in the way of rumor now seems a certainty, judged by advices telegraphed back from the East by Reeve Gartzmann, manager of Hawley, King & Co.

Gartzmann, who is now at the factory of the Globe Rubber Tire Manufacturing Company at Trenton, N. J., wired H. H. Anderson, manager of the tire department of Hawley, King & Co., that an increase in tire prices is inevitable.

"Mounting labor costs and growing scarcity of materials make higher prices certain in the very near future," Gartzmann's telegram read.

"Guess that means it is up to us to stock up so that our dealers will profit for as long a time as possible on Globes at present prices," Anderson commented to A. T. Smith, Coast representatives of the Globe factory.

"You put in your order right away," Smith advised Anderson, "and I'll get out among the trade in the north and pass the word along. You do the same around Los Angeles and Southern California. With snappy teamwork between the factory, ourselves and the dealers the motoring public still has time to equip for the winter at the prevailing prices."

FRESH EGGS FOR CLIFFDWELLERS.

Fresh eggs for breakfast from Long Island farms direct to the so-called "cliff dwellers" of New York have provided a vast field for successful motor trucking for the Long Island Rural Motor Express Company. J. Kent Worden, president of this company, says that the success of his venture with a huge fleet of Bethlehem trucks is indication that the possibilities in the motor-truck field have not been scratched as yet. The company now has a fleet of ten trucks operating and is making arrangements to increase the number. Calls are made at 132 towns and villages on Long Island every day in gathering the produce for quick delivery to New York households.

SPEED UP ROAD WORK.

"Let's speed up good road building," declares Vice-President H. A. Conlon of the Acason Motor Truck Company, Detroit. "We will need good roads in case of emergencies in this country, where the motor truck will be called upon to capacity work. If the public will take care of the roads, highway transportation will lesson many worries for it in time of emergencies."

A PHOENIX DUPLICATE.

Complete plans for the Phoenix, Ariz., counterpart of the Los Angeles sales and show rooms of Davidson, House and Meyer were carried in person to the Arizona capital last week by Francis C. Davidson. Work on the Phoenix branch, which when completed will be used as a distributing headquarters for The Cole Aero eight motor car in Arizona.

Assurance of an ample supply of the Aero eight in all models, open and inclosed, was given Davidson, House and Meyer early last week by J. E. Roberts, general sales manager of the Cole Motor Car Company of Indianapolis.

"Mr. Roberts had heard so much about the handsome new Cole quarters here that he visited the Coast especially to inspect Davidson, House and Meyer's new building," H. L. Perkins, sales manager of the Cole distributors, said.

"He expressed himself as more than pleased with everything he saw. In fact, he was so strongly impressed that before he left he yielded to our request for increased shipments of Coles. He was here when John P. Davidson opened the Pasadena Cole branch and he went over the prospects for a big winter trade in the Crown City with the new dealer there.

"We wanted Mr. Roberts to visit Phoenix and look over the site selected by E. M. House and myself for the distributing branch, but he expressed himself as confident that the selection we had made was one which could meet with his approval."

PNEUMATIC TIRES BEST ON TRUCKS.

"A chance remark by a disinterested person concerning the record of a car or a tire has all the force of truth not exaggerated for publication," was a statement made the other day by a "fact and figures" expert of Philadelphia. "For example," he continued, "in a conversation with Mr. P. J. Merrick, service manager of Stern Bros., New York, I casually learned that one of their White delivery trucks which runs daily between New York and Long Branch had been equipped on Memorial Day in May of this year with Michelin cord tires, which to date are still giving good service.

"The distance between New York and Long Branch is forty-seven miles. The present record of those tires, therefore, is 9500 miles."

BATTERY CONNECTOR.

A very convenient battery connector may be made from a piece of heavy steel coil spring. The spring wire at each end is fashioned into a hook and these are slipped into the battery posts, the tension of the spring insuring perfect contact.

THE FRANKLIN SEDAN

There is one fine enclosed car whose satisfactory performance does not depend on the addition of accessories, even when touring from three to four hundred miles a day.

The Franklin Sedan doesn't need shock absorbers because it is built to ride comfortably without them.

It does not carry spare tires, unless its tires be run well over 10,000 miles, because it doesn't pound tires out or make its owner tire conscious.

It uses no thermometers because it carries no water to boil in summer.

Non-freezing mixtures are noticeably absent in winter because of no water to freeze.

Franklin Light Weight and Flexible construction, the basic principles of riding comfort, safe, easy driving, tire economy, and low fuel consumption, require no assistance from accessories.

Franklin Direct Air Cooling (no water to boil or freeze), by eliminating the factor of temperature from motoring, the doctoring of fifty pounds of water, and the trouble of 177 unrequired water cooling parts—cuts out annoyance and expense, and permits all year motoring.

That the Franklin Sedan is exceptional in every way is conclusively proved by its nation-wide delivery to its owners of:

20 miles to the gallon of gasoline
12,500 miles to the set of tires
50% slower yearly depreciation

To its unequaled performance it adds these exclusive features of sedan design: Wide Observation Windows giving unobstructed outlook; two Wide Doors extending this view and making access easy; the V-shaped Slanting Windshield, allowing broad driving vision and perfect ventilation.

Before coming to investigate Franklin performance make a note of the things you would like to eliminate from your list of motoring troubles and limitations, and then see if the Franklin car meets your requirements.

Cantu Strong for Good Roads.

The Governor of Lower California has started a progressive road-building campaign and has already started work on three highways. A new Peerless Eight was sent into this country last week by Smith Bros., local distributors of Peerless cars, and some unusually attractive country was discovered. According to the Peerless party, this country will attract thousands of motorists as soon as the roads are put in shape.

IN LOWER CALIFORNIA.

Peerless Party Makes a Survey of New Roads in Cantu's Country.

When Gov. Esteban Cantu of Lower California has completed his highways to Ensenada and when suitable accommodations in that country have been made available, it is predicted that that part of the world will attract motorists by the thousands in search of new scenes and who delight in exploring virgin country.

Cantu's progressive road-building programme, which has been underway for almost three years and which has been pushed as far as the country's finances have permitted, according to report, has as its object the linking up of Mexicali, Tecate and Tia Juana, situated on the border, with Ensenada, the only port located on the peninsula's Pacific Coast and south of the United States about eighty miles.

In reality, he is building three highways: one from Mexicali to Tia Juana; another from Mexicali to Ensenada and a third from Tia Juana to Ensenada. In all probability the one now under construction between Tia Juana and Ensenada will be the most favored, because of the almost unsurpassed marine view that it will afford. This stretch of road from a distance about fifteen miles below the line until Ensenada is reached, will closely follow the shore line. From bluffs that for many miles overlook the Pacific magnificent views of mountains and sea unfold themselves.

Last week a Peerless eight, distributed by Smith Bros., carried a party across the line and for a distance of about fifty miles along the Tia Juana-Ensenada road. For the benefit of those who may consider entering Baja California at this time, it should be known that the restrictions on the Mexican side are very strict. While one may enter Tia Juana, as hundreds and sometimes thousands do daily, particularly on Sundays, it is another matter to leave the town and go into the country. Written permission to do this must be obtained. And as for carrying arms, an order from Gov. Cantu's secretary is necessary. Owing to the threatened revolution there several weeks ago, the Governor is taking no chances.

If one is vouched for to the Governor, permission to shoot game can be secured, it is understood. At this time the quail are so plentiful that sometimes they rise up in coveys of fifty and even more. To secure a hundred in a short time is no trick at all.

After securing the necessary authority, the Peerless party proceeded southward from Tia Juana over the proposed highway. Preliminary grading work, done by Mexicans, has been done on about one-third of the stretch. The old road, but infrequently used, has many bad grades, which are being eliminated on the highway now building.

Work by small crews is carried on at different points as finances and local conditions permit. At certain periods of the year feed for teams is available in one section while it is scarce in another. The crews change locations to meet these conditions. Employment preference is given to Mexico ranchers, whose meager pickings at times, makes government aid almost a necessity. The pay to laborers is $2.50 per day in good old American coin.

Small mules are generally used on the plows and the scrapers and the condition of the stock, harness and implements is very good. The light loam which is easily worked is covered with a surface of gravel. The Mexican foremen seem competent judging by the character of the work done. Rock work where necessary is very substantial and the culverts well made and solid.

The several crews at work now are said to be light in numbers, owing to restricted finances, it is said. With about 13,000,000 pounds of cotton to be shortly sent into the United States to be ginned at Calexico, additional funds will be available to push the road work further toward completion.

South of the border about twenty miles, where the new highway for miles skirts the edge of high bluffs near the ocean, there is a stretch of beach that probably rivals anything in the land. For a distance of about thirteen miles, when the tide is out, one may race an automobile on the hard sand. One may wade at high tide, it is said, for a distance of several hundred yards into the ocean, so gradual is the incline. Some day those bluffs overlooking this stretch of beach will be dotted with fine bungalows, for the location is ideal. With the Coronado Islands in the offing, the view of the shore line unobstructed almost as far as the eye can see, and a tumbling mass of mountains creasing the peninsula to the east, a more perfect site for an all-year resort would be hard to find. And as for the climate, it is fully up to the standard that San Diego claims for herself—which is going some.

Returning to Tia Juana, the Peerless was put over the old road, where grades are plenty and many of them excessive. One that must have been at least 25 per cent. was made on intermediate. What made this feat stand out prominently was the heavy road, which was deep with soft dirt. On the paved highways between Los Angeles and San Diego, the Peerless averaged 17.7 miles to the gallon of gasoline. In Lower California, where there was plenty of hard going, the average was a trifle better than thirteen to the gallon.

SKILEED WORKERS ON SERVICE FORCE.

BELIEVES THAT FACTORY-TRAINED MEN ARE BEST FITTED FOR WORK.

Since taking over the distribution of Gates half-sole tires in this territory and the operation of the only authorized service station for Gates products in the city, Mr. H. D. Warfield of the Warfield Tire Service Company has made a host of friends among the old as well as the new users of the half-sole tire.

Believing that factory-trained men were best fitted for the work of applying the half sole, Mr. Warfield brought with him a corps of skilled workers, who have spent a long time in the tire business and it is to their knowledge and work that he attributes the unusual success which motorists locally have met with lately with these tires.

If a person does not know tires—know how they are made and all about them—he may half sole a tire which is past saving, and it was to overcome this and other discrepancies that the men who know were brought here so that they can tell very quickly whether or not a tire is ready for a half sole.

It is the same in every line of business, too, for to do a thing right and to do it well a man must understand thoroughly just what he is up to, otherwise he may fall lowly by the wayside.

WIRE EAST FOR MORE MOTOR CARS.

SMART APPEARANCE OF MACHINE ATTRACTS PROSPECTIVE OWNERS.

"Just like a custom-built car," that's the way Mrs. James Hogan described the new Victory model Moon, which made its appearance at the salesrooms of the Southern California Motor Company last week—and after a few more remarks of similar nature she made out a check, signed the dotted line, and drove away, a proud owner.

Mrs. Hogan has a host of friends among the motion-picture people, her husband being a co-director with Allan Dwan at the Brunton studios and she prophecies that the new Moon will be fashion's choice for the coming year.

"It is a delightful car to operate," said Mrs. Hogan, after a trip that took her out into the country and back through the traffic of the city. "Easy to handle in the traffic, with lots of power for the open roads, a fast getaway and, oh, so easy riding!"

And that a number of other motorists here feel the same way about the Moon is evidenced by the increasing demand for this car reported this week by Roscoe M. Breeden, president of the Southern California Motor Company, Moon distributors. "We have wired for a larger allotment of cars and the shipment that arrived this week will only temporarily take care of the demand. The distinctive lines and smart appearance of the car makes it popular with particular motorists."

EASY STARTING IS EXPLAINED.

Petroleum Ether Best for Priming Engine.

Low-Grade Gasoline Used Now Causes Trouble.

Give Motor All Assistance Possible in Winter.

Difficulty in starting is an inherent fault in the modern internal combustion engine. This is not altogether the fault of the engine, because the inferior grades of fuel that are now offered are in large degree to blame for this condition. However that may be, the basic fact remains that difficulty in starting is an almost universal trouble, and particularly is this so in winter. It is possible by taking due precautions to eliminate much of this starting difficulty, as we shall attempt to explain in the course of this article.

The most effective way of getting the motor to start on a cold winter morning is to prime it with some fuel that is lighter and more volatile than the grade of gasoline that is now commonly sold. The old-fashioned way of accomplishing this priming was to open each pet-cock in turn and pour in a little of the lighter fuel. Obviously this is a bothersome task and the manufacturers, ever watchful for possible improvements, have given us priming equipment that eliminates all this trouble.

At the present time it is possible for the car owner to take his seat in the car and by a simple movement of his hand, prime the engine with a highly volatile fuel that will start a fire at the first shot. This equipment consists of a small tank which contains a pint or so of the lighter fuel. This tank is connected with the various cylinders by means of pipes or leads. A small plunger pump is placed on the dash, by manipulating which the driver sends a spray of lighter fuel into the cylinders, where it is fired by the spark and starts the engine, after which the ordinary fuel is able to take care of continued operation.

Now a word as to the best fluids to use for priming purposes, as this is most important if satisfactory results are to be obtained. The common priming medium is probably what is known as 76 deg. gasoline. This is simply the lighter gasoline that we used to obtain all the time, but which is now a rare article. Within recent years some of the oil companies have been putting out what is known as petroleum ether. This is simply a lighter distillate derived from the crude oil. With a tank of this fuel it is possible to get a first-time start even in zero weather. Some owners have made a practice of using ether for winter starting, but this has obvious disadvantages, either the light gas or petroleum ether being the best starting medium.

Of course, it is always possible to prime the engine with ordinary gasoline. The assumption in this case is that enough of the lighter portions of the ordinary gasoline will get into the cylinders to allow the spark to fire the charge. If the lighter forms of priming fluids are not available, ordinary gasoline should certainly be tried.

Almost all car owners know that by applying heat to ordinary gasoline vaporization is completed or greatly accelerated, so that the fuel is easily fired. This was the reason behind the old fashioned custom of filling the cooling system with boiling water on cold mornings. The heat this imparted to the engine served to vaporize the fuel and insure an easy start. This method is too inconvenient to suit modern motorists, however, and there are devices now on the market to secure heated fuel in a less bothersome way. The equipment to which we refer embodies an electric heater, so placed that as the fuel is pumped into the manifold it is passed over a heated coil and thereby vaporized so that easy starting is almost certain.

This question of starting is rather uncertain at best. Some car owners seem never to have any trouble. They pull up the float in the carburetor, apply the choker and get a start the first time. The choker is left on for a couple of minutes and is opened as the engine warms up. To these fortunate individuals, a scant minority, our advice is not directed, but for the vast majority a little help will prove welcome.

When the car is equipped with electrical starting appartus, it is vitally important that this shall be maintained at maximum efficiency during the winter months. This is obviously true; since the fuel is heavy and sluggish with the cold, a good, hot spark is needed to fire it and this can only be obtained from a battery in perfect working order. It is vital that the battery be kept fully charged, or nearly so and that the cells be filled with distilled water, an operation that must be attended to once every two weeks. The spark-plug gaps must be carefully watched and kept properly spaced.

And even after the start is obtained it is still important in cold weather to give the engine as much heat as possible. The carburetor should be heated and should get hot air to make sure of well vaporized fuel. The hood and radiator should be covered when the car is left standing. Give the engine all the assistance you can in cold weather, for it will need it with the heavy indigestible fuel it is compelled to handle in these days.

IF YOU NEED A TRUCK, BUY IT!

TRYING TO GET ALONG WITHOUT IT IS LOSING GAME, SAYS DEALER.

Any man who needs a truck and does not buy it, pays for it anyway, and the price that he pays is out of all reason, is the belief of D. F. Poyer of D. F. Poyer & Son, distributors of the Transport truck in Southern California, Nevada and Arizona.

"The man who can profitably use a truck in his business and who still clings to the horse-drawn vehicle, is really paying for a truck and the longer he clings to the antiquated method of hauling, the greater in proportion is the sum that he pays. Without the truck his radius of operation is cramped and his earnings correspondingly decreased," he said.

"Transport trucks are not alone a manufacturer's idea of a motor truck, but originated in the minds of hundreds of motor-truck distributors with whom M. A. Holmes, president of the Transport company, was daily in contact with for several years. Some of the ablest minds in the motor-truck manufacturing field have made the Transport what we believe to be the very best combination of units."

Many of the one and one-half and two and one-half-ton Transports are equipped with giant pneumatics, which in the opinion of Poyer, shows that the company is a firm believer in the future of this type of tire for trucks. The Poyer concern has made several immediate deliveries of Transports and the sales force is busy demonstrating to prospects. D. F. Poyer went to Phoenix last week to arrange for representation there.

FORD FENDERS TIGHTENED.

Rattles in the fenders of the Ford car may be obviated by taking them off, threading the end of the fender iron and putting on a nut after the fender is back in place. This nut draws the fender up tight and prevents it working out of the fender iron.

COTTON GAME GETS A BOOST.

Hood River Apple Growers Tell of Truck Value.

Further instances of the success and enterprise of certain sections of the United States being dependent upon the operation of motor trucks are being revealed frequently. W. O. Gates, of the Gates-Kelley Automotive Co., distributors for Jumbo trucks, recently called attention to the development of the cotton-raising industry in the Salt River Valley country of Arizona. The possibility of getting the cotton to the gin by motor truck has multiplied the value of the land devoted to cotton raising by eight.

Having read about the experience of growers of cotton in Arizona with motor trucks, James L. Godfrey, a resident of Oregon who is visiting in Los Angeles, called at the headquarters of Jumbo trucks a few days ago to tell Mr. Gates about the work of motor trucks in connection with the apple production in the Hood River country of Oregon.

It is estimated that of the 2,000,000 boxes of apples that were hauled from the packing-houses to the shipping stations this season not more than 100,000 boxes traveled by horse-drawn vehicle. All the rest were transported by motor truck. Motor truck operation not only is the quickest and most convenient way for moving the crop, but orchardists declare it is the safest as the fruit arrives in better condition. It used to be that when contracting for hauling from orchard to packing-house the apple growers would stipulate the sort of springs that wagons must be equipped with, but since the general use of trucks for hauling the paragraph in the contract about springs, has been dropped out as obsolete.

TECHNICAL SCHOOLS ASK FOR BLUEPRINTS.

LOCAL CARBURETOR CONCERN SETS UP SPECIAL DEPARTMENT.

So many requests have come from technical schools with automotive departments and from schools of automotive engineering as well as from polytechnical institutions for section models and blue prints of the Miller carburetors, that the Harry A. Miller Manufacturing Company has found it necessary to form a department to handle this class of work.

"We have furnished scores and scores of schools with the material they have asked for but still the requests come in from one end of the country to the other. It is evident that instructors are preparing pupils to deal with the problems of the trade after leaving school and to do this it is necessary that the schools be equipped with standard parts. Many of the schools we are furnishing with Miller models and literature are either aided by the State or the Federal government, or sometimes both," said Milton H. B. Miller.

In spite of many strikes in the East, orders for Miller carburetors show no falling off from that quarter—rather, they are increasing, according to Miller. "We are working at capacity all the time now and we have enough orders ahead to keep us going at that rate for several months," he added.

TECHNICAL FIGURES ARE NO REAL PROOF.

ACTUAL PERFORMANCE OF OIL IN MOTOR IS THE BEST TEST.

A great many motorists have been misled by having technical specifications, which are used only by a refiner in the process of refining, cited to them as a reason for buying lubricating oil for their car. As a matter of fact, the average owner knows nothing about them, and does not know why he asks for paraffine base or asphalt base except what he has heard somebody say. The leading mechanical engineers, when making exhaustive tests on motor lubricants, give very little consideration to those specifications, but they have far more severe tests, which show the oil under actual working conditions. Judge your oil by actual performance in your motor. Leading repair men say the repairs they have to make on account of lubrication are not due to an oil being a paraffine base or an asphalt base, but are due to a lack of oil.

Use plenty of oil, drain your crankcase often and refill with fresh oil, as all oils are more or less burned when used in a motor, there being no oil made that will stand the heat of the gas at explosion, which is approximately 2700 degrees.

Lubro motor oil, manufactured by the Turner Oil Company, a scientific blend of selected California and Pennsylvania oils, was given severe tests in trucks and pleasure cars for several years before being placed on the market, and is being sold solely on its actual lubricating qualities in motors only, and not on specifications and price alone.

HEAVY TRAFFIC ON ARROWHEAD TRAIL.

ALL-YEAR ROUTE IS DECIDEDLY ROUGH IN MANY SPOTS.

The Arrowhead Trail is carrying a heavy traffic of southbound cars of residents of Utah, Idaho and Wyoming, who are heading for Southern California for the winter season, according to S. B. Wood of Salt Lake City, who reached Los Angeles last week, after a trip from the Utah capital. Mr. Wood made the trip over the Arrowhead Trail in his Haynes touring car in four days, and at the headquarters of Walter H. Fisher, Southern California Haynes distributor, he declared last week that the famous all-year route between the two cities is decidedly rough in spots.

"There is nothing, perhaps, that is bad enough to make serious trouble for a careful driver with a good car, but there is plenty of road that it is impossible to make any sort of time over. Most of the distance between Salt Lake City and St. George is good, but between the latter city and Las Vegas there is plenty of rough going. It is still necessary to be towed across the Rio Virgin at Bunkerville, though they told us that a bridge would be built at that point in the very near future.

"The cars headed north were very few and far between, but there were plenty headed for Los Angeles as we were. The Arrowhead Trail is the ideal route for most residents of Utah, Idaho and Wyoming to reach Southern California, and I hope it will be possible to improve the route for its entire length before many more years."

Mr. Wood was accompanied on his trip by his two sons and daughter, and expects to spend several months in Southern California before returning.

PRODUCTION GOES BACK TO NORMAL.

LACK OF MATERIAL AND LABOR SHORTAGE HAS LITTLE REAL EFFECT.

Although there are discouraging conditions due to a certain lack of material and labor troubles, production at the Chalmers factory is steadily returning to normal, and because of this it is now possible for the Greer-Robbins Company, State distributor of Chalmers cars, to promise earlier deliveries than has been the case for many months. Because they can assure buyers of Chalmers of more prompt deliveries, the retail Chalmers sales force is highly elated.

"Many a Chalmers owner takes particular delight in his car on crimpy mornings, because when he steps on the starter button he is on his way immediately. There is no straining of the battery and lost time and in a few moments his engine is running at high efficiency. The Chalmer's hot spot and ram's horn manifold "predigest" the gas and by hurrying it to the cylinders the engine is warmed up in a jiffy," said R. O. Gould, sales manager of the retail Chalmers department.

"The present grade of gas because it is harder to vaporize requires more heat to crack it, and it is just there that the ram's horn manifold gets in its fine work. The hot exhaust gases in the manifold turn the trick. Increased shipments of Chalmers have made it possible for us to speed up deliveries to a point that is very satisfactory to buyers, considering the shortage in cars which is general everywhere."

DUST IS FATAL TO BODY FINISH.

"When you make such a trip as that to Bear Valley by the desert route, you should be particular to see that you do not allow the dust accumulated by your trip to remain on your car a moment longer than necessary upon your return," says Frank Webster of the International Sales Company, manufacturers and distributors for Duro-lac polish.

"There is more or less alkali in the desert dust, particularly from such stretches as those of the dry lake bed east of Victorville. Alkali is a peculiarly destructive agent towards a fine varnished finish on a motor car. It is important from the standpoint of the looks of your car to remove it as soon as possible. This can be easily accomplished with the use of such a polish as Duro-lac, and done far more satisfactorily and with better results for the finish of the car than by washing with water."

REBUILDING CAPTURED CAR

Word has just been received by Lynn C. Buxton, distributor for the Stearns sleeve-valve car, that an automobile built especially by Krupps for the Kaiser and used by him behind the German lines in the big drives of the spring of 1918 is now in this country and is being restored to its original condition for the present owner, George E. Crater, a retired American capitalist, who has a home near Yaphank, L. I.

The car, which was equipped with a Mercedes-Knight motor similar to the Stearns sleeve-valve motor, was abandoned by the Kaiser during the German retreat, and its top, fittings and upholstering ruined by a bomb dropped near it by an aviator. The Kaiser's chauffeur, according to the history of the car, using the freedom of motion which the Kaisers' arms on the car and his credentials gave him, drove to a point on the Swiss border. Here the machine was acquired after the armistice by Mr. Crater and sent to this country in an Italian tramp steamship.

Photographs of the car and original plans obtained from the Krupps are being used to restore the car to its condition when the Kaiser used it. Each part of the machinery bears the stamp "Krupp, Essen." The car had a minute kitchen under the driver's seat equipped with a small blue-flame stove, cooking utensils and plate. It is equipped with porcelain, enamel and silver plumbing, running water, a drinking fountain and a reading lamp.

A strip of plate-glass eighteen inches wide runs around the whole car level with the eyes of the passengers so that their view in every direction is unobstructed.

NOTED VISITOR HERE.

Los Angeles is at the present time entertaining one of the really big automobile dealers of the country in the person of Mr. George R. Bird of the Bird-Sykes Company of Chicago, Northern Illinois distributors for the Paige passenger cars and trucks, and one of the oldest, as well as one of the largest, dealers of automobiles in the country.

Just seventeen years ago the Bird-Sykes Company made its formal bow to the motoring public of the Windy City, and have handled the Paige car ever since it was first brought out, selling during all this time automobiles that it would be hard to count or even estimate in number, for they have always been one of the most aggressive firms in the business.

This company is devoting its entire attention and energy to the sale of the one make of car—the Paige—and that it has paid them and does pay them to handle this car exclusively is shown in the fact that last year they disposed of 2500 cars, and have arranged with the Paige factory for an allotment of 3000 cars for the coming year, to be sold in a territory that is thickly populated, but nowhere near as large as Southern California, and, in fact, much smaller than some of our counties.

Mr. Bird arrived in town last week, driving overland in a Paige seven-passenger Essex model over the old Santa Fe Trail, which he reports to be in none too good a condition, but made the trip without any trouble, and expects to be with us until after the holidays with the exception of a short visit back to the factory on December 1, where he is to head a meeting of his associated dealers.

Known throughout the country for the service it gives on motor cars, the Bird-Sykes Company also has the reputation for being the only automobile dealer, outside of one small but popular car, to successfully organize and maintain associate neighborhood dealers, and that they have done this successfully in Chicago is shown in the fact that every section of the city has a live Paige dealer, with complete sales and service station, who looks after the wants and needs of the owners in his particular neighborhood.

"I am glad to see so many Paige cars on the streets and boulevards of Southern California," says Mr. Bird, "and I want to compliment the A. E. Evans Company on the wonderful showing it is making with the Paige car, and also on its beautiful new home; and I can also truthfully say that the automobile dealers in this city are certainly away ahead of other sections of the country in the beautiful showrooms and homes they erect here for their cars."

GLASS TO BE USED WHEREVER POSSIBLE.

Glass will make up 85 per cent. of the wall area and most of the roof of the new mechanical building of the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company, at Akron, O., for which ground was recently broken. The building, which will cost $400,000 will take care of the activities of 500 of the company's 17,000 employees. Among the features to be provided for their comfort are cafeteria and shower baths. A ventilating system will keep the air in circulation at all times.

MAGNETO IGNITION TO BE OPTIONAL.

Inside information leaked out recently that "optional ignition" will be the strong talking point at the New York motor show in January, and many dealers are now demanding that it be provided for on the advance orders they have already placed with the manufacturers. Many a purchaser of a 1920 car will undoubtedly request the magneto as optional equipment.

It is well to know that aside from the switch wire and the one cable leading from the magneto to each plug, a high-tension magneto has no external wiring.

The complications, and the possibilities of trouble, resulting from the numerous connecting wires used with battery systems, are entirely absent where a magneto is employed. Thus, not only is the possibility of trouble reduced to a minimum, but in the event of any irregularity in the running of the engine, the diagnosis is simpler.

VICE-PRESIDENTS FOR ALL STATES.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 7.—A National Automobile Dealers' Association vice-president will be appointed in every State as a result of the decision of the board of directors to put into force a provision of the articles of incorporation which had been held in abeyance during the war period.

Selection of these vice-presidents will be announced at the Chicago members' meeting of the association held during the week of the Chicago show

SEASONS AHEAD IN CAR DESIGN.

The policy of the Cole Motor Car Company is to produce cars that are seasons ahead in design, with mechanical improvements exclusively their own that are new to the motor industry. For example, the Cole Motor Car Company was one of the first two companies in America to build an eight-cylinder motor car. And the first Cole eights, built back in 1915, carried features just being incorporated generally in other eight-cylinder cars of today.

SALE DELAYED BY SLOW SHIPMENTS.

On account of delay in shipments, many persons were disappointed in not being able to take advantage of the great tire bargains at the Pacific Tire and Rubber Company's store on South Broadway. On this account the special sale will be continued for one more week.

KEYWAY REPAIR.

When a keyway becomes worn the first thought of the owner is to file the channel larger and fit a larger key. To do this often weakens the metal seriously and it may be found that a preferable way is to weld new metal into the old slot and then cut a new keyway to fit the old key.

TAKING DOWN ENGINE.

In disassembling the engine the car owner will find that he saves a great deal of time if he segregates the parts as he performs the operation of taking down. The best way to do this is to place all parts pertaining to one unit or system in a box. For instance, have a box each for carburetor, magneto, valve system, etc., while big units, such as manifolds, connecting rods, etc., may be placed under the work bench in a large box. The value of this arrangement appears when the task of assembling begins.

TO CAMP AT FACTORY.

To obtain cars or know the reason why, Mr. G. R. Keith of the Standard Steel Automotive Corporation left this city last week for a visit to the Standard eight factory at Pittsburgh, and how long he will be gone will be determined by his success in getting sufficient cars moving this way to suit him, and, as his patience in waiting had not dampened his spirits at all, but rather, raised a large bump of indignation, it is felt that his stay will not be an extended one.

"We have been promised cars," said Mr. Keith, "but we have been waiting so long now that I want a lot of them, and a few won't do because every day sees our order list grow larger; and, while people are willing to wait in order to get the Standard eight, still, we don't want them to wait, and we are going to try to get cars rolling so that we can let a man drive his car from the floor when he buys it if he so desires.

"Our old quota is not going to stand, for that was made before we realized what a demand there would be for this car, and therefore, I am going to camp at the factory and see that when carloads of cars are shipped out they are marked for Los Angeles if I have to do a little marking myself."

REMOVING SPRINGS.

This is the time of year for giving the springs a dose of graphite or other lubricant, and here is an easy method of removing the springs. Place a flat bar of steel under the frame just back of the spring horns and then place a jack under the bar, when the front end may be lifted, relieving the springs of weight. A wooden horse may now be placed under the iron bar to support the front of the car and the springs may be removed without fear of the structure's collapsing.

A Hot Spot Chalmers Starts Quickly on a Raw Day

Many an owner of a Hot Spot Chalmers takes a fresh delight in his car on a raw day.

When he steps on the starter button he gets quick results. His engine gets under way quickly, and in a few moments it is running at high efficiency.

His battery is not "strained," his time is not lost, and he doesn't lose his temper.

Hot Spot and Ram's-horn are great friends on such a day. For they "crack up" the gas, "predigest" it, and hurry it to the cylinders for instant use.

As a result the engine "warms up" in a hurry.

If you've ever had trouble in starting a car in raw weather try a Hot Spot Chalmers. On the rawest day you can find, you'll be agreeably impressed.

PAIGE
The Most Beautiful Car in America

Very shortly a new Paige plant will be in operation and our production schedule will be doubled. For the first time, then, we shall be in position to keep step with the demand for our cars.

The American public has dictated this expansion. Their wholehearted endorsement of the Paige—the product and the policy of its makers—is the cause of this extraordinary growth. It is the result of their acceptance of the Paige as a "preferred investment."

300,000 Maxwell Owners Will O.K. This Car

FOR this Post-War Maxwell contains all those fine traits of its 300,000 predecessors.

And in addition the great developments in engine, axle and chassis which the war brought.

But these 300,000 will vouch for its ability, for they have seen their own cars pile up endless mileage, outrun a guarantee on a tire, shy at the repair shop, and go where most other cars wouldn't follow.

They know, too, how thrifty it will prove on gas, how it will please both Son and Grandma in performance and comfort.

To say that they will O. K. this car is wasting words, for it is of the very same chassis model as the 300,000 others.

It's worth an hour of any man's time to look over the Post-War features, note what fine engineering has accomplished, and observe what big improvements have been made in appearance.

The price, however, is still $1195.00 at Los Angeles. The extra values are yours.

LOST GREASE CUPS.

It is remarkable what vibration will do in the way of loosening up grease cups that have gone in stiffly and apparently been absolutely secure. Every lost grease cup means that some part of the mechanism is in danger. The safest remedy for this trouble is to employ a set of cups with locked caps.

AIR LEAKS AND MISFIRING.

Air leaks are a common cause of misfiring, though they are often overlooked. A worn valve guide allows enough air to be sucked into the cylinders to cause misfiring and it also permits oil to leak out. If oil is discovered leaking out, it is fair to assume that excess air is being injected into the fuel charges.

COLD WEATHER STARTING.

During cold weather the battery falls off in efficiency, and the car owner can help his battery considerably by turning over the engine a few times with the starting crank before throwing the starting motor into operation. The cranking by hand serves to break solidified oil around the pistons.

FOES OF TRUCK TAKE OLD ROLE.

Every Advancement Got Vigorous Opposition.

First Railroads are Opposed by Medical Authorities.

Ship-by-Truck Movement Spreads Despite Knocks.

Another old story repeating itself. This is the way ship-by-truck advocates characterize the opposition developing in some quarters to the use of the highways by the motor truck.

This opposition cloaks itself most often, they say, in an assertion that heavy traffic of trucks will break up roads which have been laid at great expense. Replying to this contention, the ship-by-truck advocates point out that the manufacturing engineers have seen to it, for the sake of road protection, that the size of a truck tire and its road surface contact shall increase with the capacity of the truck. No injury is done the roads, they assert, so long as the truck is not overloaded.

They point out that every great advancement or improvement which history discloses has had to buck up against vigorous opposition, but that inevitably progress wins.

They bring forward the fact that when the first important English railroad was being considered by the Parliament of that country, strenuous objections were made against the granting of the charter. It was alleged that the introduction of the railroad would destroy the value of landed estates, that it would disturb game, that the smoke of the locomotive would blight vegetation, that hens would cease to lay, that the value of real estate in the vicinity of railway stations would be depressed, that it would be extremely dangerous to ride at the terrific rate of thirty miles an hour, and that in general it would be much better for the people if they would be content to ride in stage coaches and canal boats.

FIRST ONE.

"When the first German railroad was being considered, so much opposition developed that the question of the influence of travel on it was submitted to a distinguished medical authority," writes F. A. Cannon, executive secretary of the Good Roads Association of Wisconsin. "This gentleman, after due consideration, submitted a report in which he expressed it as his opinion that the probable effect of railway travel would be extremely deleterious to the health of those who would look on as well as ride in moving trains.

"The disease which he believed the introduction of the railroad would spread he designated by the term 'delirium furiosum.' He thought that if people would be foolhardy enough to ride in cars they might be deserving of little pity if they should contract this terrible disease, but in his judgment it was the duty of the state to protect the onlookers, and with a view to affording this protection he recommended the construction of a high and closely-fitting fence on both sides of the track.

"The illustration is particularly pertinent as showing how this means of transportation, the railroad, which is today absolutely necessary to human life, one might say, was in the beginning opposed. But how the march of progress has changed events.

OPPOSITION.

"Applied to the opposition to the motor truck, this illustration of the changing attitude of mind invites the prophecy that throughout the country this vehicle, at an early date, will be the common means of transportation for the short haul.

"Necessity is the mother of invention, and the inability of the railroads to care for traffic, and their unwieldiness and the fixity of their range, have made inevitable the development of this new means of transportation.

"The range of transportation of the railroad is fixed by steel rails. The range of transportation of the motor truck follows the highways, and the highways interlace the whole country.

The case of Wisconsin is an illustration. The railroad mileage in this State is 12,000 miles. The public highway mileage is 77,000 miles. The gaps between the producers on these 77,000 miles and the stations on the 12,000 miles must be filled up, and the motor truck is the means of filling these gaps."

E. Farr, chief of the Firestone ship-by-truck bureau at Akron, O., declares that already the motor truck is beginning to revolutionize transportation methods.

"Objection to it on the assumption that it breaks up the improved road can hardly be taken seriously," he writes, "since its heels have air-cushion or solid rubber road protectors that make it no more liable to damage the highways than is the heavy passenger car.

"Even if utilization of the highways by the motor truck should result in increased road maintenance charges, the community served by the motor truck could afford to pay extra for keeping up its roads. Those who pay these charges will benefit a hundred-fold in added contentment and prosperity through the service the trucks afford."

The Los Angeles branch of the Firestone bureau, at 1165 South Figueroa street, reports that the ship-by-truck idea is fast spreading in this territory. Where formerly one could scarcely find a truck doing intercity hauling, scores are now operating.

TO FACTORY AFTER MORE GLOBE TIRES.

HEAVY SHIPMENTS FAIL TO STAND UP AGAINST THE DEMANDS.

Emulating the example of leading automobile dealers of the Pacific Coast who have gone to factory headquarters in the East to seek satisfaction in the matter of deliveries, Reeve Gartzmann, manager of Hawley, King & Co., left Los Angeles last week for Trenton, N. J., for a heart-to-heart talk with the higher-ups of the Globe Rubber Tire Manufacturing Company.

"We are known as distributors of Globe tires," Gartzmann commented before his departure, "but we are not distributing like we want to, because somehow or other, we cannot keep up with orders. It is no fault, however, of the factory's, as the business we are doing here has eclipsed all expectations.

"The factory management recently cheered us up by advising us that production had been doubled, and that we would receive increased shipments. They made good to the letter, but even the increased shipments have failed to keep pace with the demand for Globes."

FIRST WITH MANY NEW IMPROVEMENTS.

PREDICT THAT HIGH, SQUARE RADIATOR WILL BE ADOPTED UNIVERSALLY.

The Moon Company was one of the earliest makers of automobiles, and too much credit cannot be given to them along with a few other pioneers of the industry who risked their money and reputations in the early days in bringing the automobile up to where it is today.

Away back in 1901 the Moon car brought out the left hand drive, the first American car to build such a drive, and this has since become universal in its adoption.

The Moon was one of the first cars to go from a four to a six-cylinder motor on light cars, and also they adopted the first full-floating axle on any car. Strangely enough it was this first car that won a big race in Boston on the track there, known as the Moon 6-7 model.

The Moon Company was perhaps the first car in America to put the front axle out under the radiator, in those days the radiator stuck away out in front.

They were one of the first advocates of using the same size of tires all around, upsetting the practice of putting smaller tires on the front wheels.

The Moon people have always been pioneers in high-grade body construction and credit is given them everywhere as being the first to use the four doors on the body of the car, as many of the first automobiles had no doors at all.

Real leather in upholstering is one of the first principles that the Moon people stood for. In the early days there was a mixed opinion as to the use of imitation leather, cloth or various substitutes. But the Moon has had always the best high-grade hand-buffed leather, and in this way has made the upholstering a feature of the car.

The Moon factory was turned over to war work and no cars were made for a while, but their designers perfected the new Victory model which is the last word in design and style.

The Southern California Motor Co. reports a very active interest in their new designs, and claim that the high square silvered radiator will be the advance styles for next year.

GREAT EXPANSION IN EVERY LINE.

HARDLY ANY LIMIT TO EXPECTATIONS FOR THE COMING YEAR.

Industry of almost every sort is counting upon a tremendous expansion next year is the word that C. J. Cadwell, carburetor expert of the Harry A. Miller Manufacturing Company, brings back to Los Angeles after an extended business trip in the East.

"There seems to be hardly any limit to the expectations for the coming year in the East. Plans are being made for an expansion that will be out of all comparison with the year coming to a close. This condition obtains particularly in the automotive industry. To care for our business that is steadily increasing in volume in the East, it will be necessary for us to greatly increase our output of Miller carburetors. There is no doubt that the great record that Millers made in racing events in all sections of the country in the past season has much to do with the popularity of the carburetor," he said.

SOLID TIRES GIVE YEARS OF SERVICE.

Nearly three years of service with 18,770 miles covered in the report made by James Lammers, a teamster of Cincinnati, on a set of four United States solid tires.

"I consider this record highly satisfactory on trucks operated in and about Cincinnati, hauling heavy materials such as plumbers' supplies and building materials," is Mr. Lammers' comment.

"These tires have not been spared in any way as the truck has been on daily duty for almost three years. The only expense I have had outside of gasoline and oil was $55 to repair the damage caused by an accident."

DANGERS OF SPEEDING

"Experiments just concluded at the Goodrich factory in Akron show that the speeder sows more seeds besides those of possible disaster when he 'lets her out,'" said M. D. Bixby, Los Angeles branch manager of the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Company. "He is also speeding up his tire expenditures, for fast driving is destructive to any casing.

"If the speed mania is so strongly intrenched that the victim cannot desist from the dangerous sport, he should obey two rules if he would avoid the prodigal purchase of tires.

"Number one is to drive slowly over rough roads and take turns cautiously. Number 2 is to increase the pressure in his tires from two to eight pounds above normal.

SPECIAL TIRES.

"Specially built tires such as used by racing drivers are required for speeding. The reason for this is obvious to those acquainted with scientific matters. The faster a tire is driven, the more heat it generates internally. Normal speed will not raise the temperature of rubber to a dangerous point.

"Excessive speed will, however, increase the heat so greatly that additional vulcanization takes place. This dries out not only the friction gum between the plies of fabric, but the very fabric itself, depriving the tire of considerable elasticity, resiliency and life. The excessive heat, drying out the adhesive friction gum between the plies of fabric, naturally separates them one from another. This results in the fabric chafing and weakening the carcass to a point where it can no longer maintain the air pressure. The result is a blowout.

"Some motorists," continued Mr. Bixby, "drive at the same speed on a rough road as they do over a boulevard, and then wonder why it is that their tires wear away so rapidly.

"Watch the speeder negotiate a rough road just about as fast as his car can travel and notice the rear wheels as they strike an obstacle.

"The shock comes so abruptly and forcibly that they are usually raised off the ground. Perhaps only an inch or so, but during of a second when the ground, the on the engine and the much faster.

"Consequently, strike the road, must do some brake has an action on like that of a over its surface. happen to be a or other obstacle the tires land from tary ascent, the nasty cut around wink of an eye deep, serious injury extending a few half-way around the

"This fact should be impressed that a speed than twenty-five gets the most average new tire."

BY TOM MARSHALL

[This is the fourth of a series of articles dealing with trap-shooting, hunting and fishing by Capt. Tom Marshall, who is a noted authority on the great out-of-doors.]

specializing on water plants,
rice, celery and wapato, all of which impart a most delicious flavor to their flesh, are delicacies in the duck culinary department. "Cans" are about twenty-one inches long, head a dark chestnut red, slanting from bill to top of cranium, a la heads of our habitual cabaret dancers. The back of a canvas-back is a grayish silver white, which gives the silver carpet effect, when they are aggregated on the surface of a lake.

Usually classed as a sea duck the "can" is a strictly American product, may be found from the Atlantic to Pacific. Exclusive in their habits, they are blessed with woman's curiosity, but very wary of prospective danger. They decoy readily, especially in time of storm, when decoys are set near their feeding grounds. They feed from the bottom in deep water. Wise widgeons usually daily about, awaiting the reappearance of the canvas, with a delicate morsel, which is immediately commandeered and devoured.

When large bodies of birds are "jumped" or flushed, don't shoot, set your decoys and await their return. They will come singly, in pairs and small flocks. Their velocity flight is from sixty to ninety-five miles per hour, unless coming down wind, when it is much more rapid. To "cut out a double" guarantees honorable mention among sportsmen. Of recent years, due to the activity of carp in the destruction of wapato, wild rice and celery, divers of the duck family are compelled to subsist upon mollusks and small fish, consequently, canvas-back have not been considered such a table delicacy. Duck clubs, preserves and sportsmen, have all declared war on German carp.

With Rolla O. Heikes, "the grand old man of St. Clair flats," the writer enjoyed a most successful canvas-back shoot. It was late in the fall, a light mantle of snow covered the reeds, tules and marshes, shores were skirted with a border of thin ice. The weather was "snappy," purified ozone floating in unlimited quantity. Leaving "Harmony Cottage" in the motor boat, "The Cub," which was loaded with decoys and towing two modern duck boats, we chugged down the North channel of St. Clair River, into Baltimore Bay, opposite New Baltimore, Mich. The sun, peeking above the reeds and tules, looked like a product of the tropics, an immense red ball obscured by a hazy atmospheric mist. Conditions were ideal.

The bay was carpeted with the silver, gray-back plumage of canvas-back ducks, taking wing upon our approach, leaving a trail of grass roots, sections of celery and straws of rice, which were indicative of their feeding grounds. We immediately set our decoys, launch was anchored at a distance, our duck boats hauled into the reeds on a projecting point about thirty yards distant from the decoys. Our boats were covered with reeds, ice and tullies, collapsible gunnels raised, as the water was getting a little choppy. Good for incoming birds, but a shade nasty when running down one's back. "Pop" Heikes then tuned up his "Jimmy Pipe" and we were ready for action.

The exhaust of a gas engine, which sounded like the tearing of a strong rag, advised us of the coming of a boat up bay. "Mark Wets," was Pop's gutteral announcement, immediately followed by snug cuddling into the bottom of our boats. A bunch of "cans" came tearing up the bay, passed us about 200 yards, then turned dashing back to our decoys against the wind. They looked like Canadian honkers as they stuck their feet down, slanted the wings and dropped their tail rudders, prepared to light. Oh, you hunters. Did you ever experience the delightful sensation of knowing a big flock of "cans" were hovering over your decoys and you were just ready to commence work on them.

It is a grand and glorious feeling. We levied a liberal toll from the flock. Pop, with his repeater, saved all cripples, and we were correspondingly happy. When they came into our decoys, headed down wind and splitting the atmosphere, was the time when our post-graduate course in duck shooting was demonstrated to advantage. Successful guessing on down-wind leads is a duck shot's one best asset. When a canvas-back was stopped en route he would strike the water, skipping as a kid would a thrown pebble. "We did the lot," or killed our limit, returning for the noonday meal. Every bird was a "can." We repeated on the following day.

MOON

SEVENTEEN and a half miles per gallon of gasoline is the average fuel mileage which owners of the Moon Victory Model receive.

That is because the Moon has the new Red Seal Continental motor, the last word in modern motor construction, produced by the greatest motor builders in the world.

Moon appearance is just as striking as Moon economy. The beautiful square lines of the Victory Model will be the prevailing style abroad as well as in America next season.

EXPERIMENT WITH TREES.

The streets of Dallas will be lined with Oriental sycamore, the species of tree which beautifies most of the Parisian boulevards, if City Forester Alfred MacDonald is able to carry out his plans. Mr. MacDonald believes this tree will thrive in Texas and is planning to carry on some experiments with it in the fall. It is of European origin and is used extensively in France as a street tree.

The native sycamore is naturally a bottom tree and thrives best in places with abundant moisture. The European tree originally grew in high, dry places, Mr. MacDonald says. For this reason he believes it will prove an excellent tree in this climate.

The foreign species is very resistant to insects and also not subject to fungus growth, both of which attack native sycamores, Mr. MacDonald said.—[Dallas News.

a—This is given in the books as a loss, but considerable play has appeared in this column lately showing the draw—also the pitfalls for White should they get a little careless.
b—This was the move given to correct Barker's 10-15, which loses for Black.
c—16-11 forms a "Will-o'-the-Wisp," colors reversed.
d—This should lose. The best play is 10-11 8-15, 21 17, 14-21, 20-16, 1-5*, 26-23, 10-14, 19-10, 14 17, etc.

8-11	22 26	30-23	14 18	B. wins

f—11-16 would lose by 19-15.
g—Now that the Black man on 13 has been advanced to 22, this gives White a fighting chance. Blacks are very strong for several moves but I have failed to locate a win since note "e." Black can nearly win on several lines, but something seems to always "bob up" at the wrong time.
h—An oversight that lost a hard-fought game. Can any of the critics show a Black win after 25-29 at note "e?"

ATTRACTING INTEREST.

Because of the number of unusual features it contains, the new building of the Albertson Motor Company that is nearing completion at Sixteenth and Figueroa streets has attracted not a little interest among Los Angeles motor-car dealers. The automobile business is so comparatively new, and the requirements of a building to meet its needs are so vastly different from those of any other business structure that the task of designing a building to house the business of an automobile distributor is by no means an easy one. The new Albertson building was planned after thorough investigation of many of the big buildings recently erected by large eastern distributors, and in addition contains features originated by F. S. Albertson as a result of his long experience in the automobile business.

Though only two stories in height, the Albertson building is with perhaps one exception, the largest single automobile structure in Los Angeles, containing as it does over 55,000 square feet of floor surface. Two big salesrooms, one for new cars, and one for second-hand machines, front on Figueroa street. The new car salesroom will have a frontage of 100 feet, and a depth of forty-five feet, with mezzanine offices at the rear. A mezzanine floor in the used car salesroom will be devoted to a motion-picture room. The use of motion pictures has become so well recognized in automobile sales work that Albertson has made special provision for their showing.

One feature that is decidedly different in the new Albertson building is the provision for the stockroom. The average stockroom is dark, and tucked away in some inaccessible corner, but in the new building for the Dodge distributor will occupy a mezzanine floor along the Sixteenth-street side of the building, with a direct entrance from Sixteenth street, a wide counter to accommodate customers, and windows along the entire 110 feet of its length.

Instead of permitting his architects to arrange the pillars in the garage in the rear downstairs in the symmetrical manner they wished, Albertson had them placed with regard to the needs of handling cars. A twenty-four-foot central aisle is flanked with sixteen-foot aisles for the accommodation of the cars. Minor repairs will be handled in the extreme rear of the building downstairs while the shop will occupy the huge upstairs floor. The latter is made accessible by a single straight ramp of easy grade.

An outstanding feature of the building is the provision that has been made for light and air. The shop upstairs is completely surrounded with huge windows on every side, with four big lights in the center of the roof.

RECIPROCITY IN MOTORING TAGS.

House to Pass on Bill for Universal Auto Plates.

Americans in Europe Need International Registration.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—Unlimited automobile reciprocity among the several States and the District of Columbia soon will receive the attention of Congress, as several bills on the subject have been introduced in both branches and have found place on the dockets of the Interstate Commerce Committees.

In the House its committee passes upon both interstate and foreign commerce, and because of this fact the reciprocity measure just introduced by Representative Burton E. Sweet of Iowa best meets the general needs of the situation. This bill has the indorsement of the American Automobile Association, which for a period of years has been seeking from Congress the "open door" in registration reciprocity.

Not only does Mr. Sweet's draft provide for unlimited recognition of registration numbers throughout the United States, but it also authorizes the Secretary of State to arrange with foreign nations so that any American going abroad can be equipped with a registration tag on which "U.S." will be substituted for the name of his State and in consequence be acceptable in all European countries which are signatories in the use of the so-called "international plate of identity." This arrangement has been in existence in Europe for a period of years, somewhat interrupted by the war, but now to be resumed again, undoubtedly with a subsequent accompaniment in the form of an "international triptych," which will relate to customs duties.

Americans traveling abroad have been obliged to accept the courtesy of Great Britain or France in arranging for the international plate, which has been somewhat awkward and more or less a reflection on our inability to provide this great help.

Another excellent provision in Mr. Sweet's bill is that it definitely provides that the resident of any State temporarily located in the District of Columbia, either as a member of Congress or in any other governmental capacity, shall have the right to display on his motor vehicle a home State registration number which will be acceptable in lieu of any other registration in the District of Columbia.

In the Senate the Interstate Commerce Committee confines its activities to domestic matters, and this may mean that the question of international reciprocity cannot be taken care of by amending the bill of Senator Key Pittman of Nevada, which is a duplicate of the original Adamson draft. A separate measure may have to be passed upon by the Foreign Relations Committee, of which Senator Lodge of Massachusetts is the chairman. Having in mind the many Americans who will go abroad next year, the convenience of this arrangement is plainly apparent.

CHASSIS BEARINGS NEED CLEAN GREASE.

ALEMITE SYSTEM SOLVES PROBLEMS THAT HAVE LONG PERPLEXED ENGINEERS.

Keeping clean grease in the chassis bearings of a motor car has long been a problem that has given motor car engineers much concern. After grease has become filled with particles of dust and grit, it actually does harm to a bearing instead of protecting it and tends to quickly cut away its surface. The importance of keeping clean grease in many parts of the chassis is vital to the longevity and good performance of the machine.

"Such points as the steering connections, the spring bolts, and many other places on the chassis are constantly exposed to dust and dirt, and the grease which they contain quickly becomes anything but a good lubricant," declares C. A. Roesch of the Alemite Lubricator Company. "The question of how to get the dirty grease out of the bearing and clean grease in its place remained unsolved until the invention of the Alemite system. Because of the huge pressure of 500 pounds under which the Alemite system forces grease into the bearing, the old grease is carried out by the pressure of the incoming supply. Consequently, it is an easy matter to keep any bearing on an Alemite-equipped car supplied with clean lubricant at all times."

SALT AS ANTI-FREEZE.

In an emergency common table salt may be used as an anti-freeze medium. A saturated solution of water and salt freezes at about zero. After the emergency is passed, the cooling system should be thoroughly flushed out and be refilled with a recognized anti-freeze.

FORD BATTERY CHARGING.

The Ford magneto can be used to charge a battery provided a rectifier is placed in the line. The current from the Ford magneto is alternating, and only direct current can be used in charging the battery, hence the need for the rectifier.

INSTALLING FORD BUSHING.

To insert a bushing in the starting crank assembly of the Ford car, push the bushing in as far as it will go by hand and then pushing a bolt through from the front end, with a washer to catch the front of the crankcase front bearing. A nut and washer being placed on the other end, it is now possible to draw the bushing into place by screwing down on the nut.

Than this new Marmon creation which was recently delivered to Mrs. Savage by the Al G. Faulkner Company. It is one of the handsomest affairs ever put out by the local house.

MRS. SAVAGE GETS HANDSOME MARMON.

EASE WITH WHICH CAR IS CONTROLLED IS REASON FOR ITS SELECTION.

One of the handsomest Marmon roadsters that has been sold through the Los Angeles organization of the Al G. Faulkner Company was recently delivered to Mrs. Arthur W. Savage of San Diego as a gift from her husband, Arthur W. Savage, founder of the Savage Arms Company, and president of the Savage Munitions Company of San Diego.

Mr. Savage has been an ardent motorist for years, and is familiar with all types of motor cars of both American and foreign make. His selection of a Marmon as a gift for Mrs. Savage was largely governed by the ease with which the car is controlled, and in a recent letter to Mr. Faulkner he expressed his decided gratification with the car. "Mrs. Savage finds that she can operate the Marmon with ease in any sort of traffic," Savage wrote to Faulkner. "The car has given perfect satisfaction in every way and has delighted us with its ease of riding.

"As you know, I have owned many types of high-grade cars, but wish to tell you that the Marmon is in every way more satisfactory than any other car that I have been familiar with."

DRIVER GIVES BOOST TO ATTERBURY TRUCK.

PUTS SIX TONS ON TWO-TON TRUCK AND HASN'T REACHED THE LIMIT YET.

"Ask the man who drives one," is a pretty safe invitation to prospective auto-truck purchasers when it applies to an Atterbury, according to A. Foulkes, a draying contractor of Los Angeles, who is both owner and driver of an Atterbury "two-ton."

"And if they ask me," Mr. Foulkes remarked to a group of salesmen at the Frank O. Renstrom Company, distributors of the Atterbury trucks, "I'll sure be able to tell them a plenty about Atterbury performance."

The motor drayman grow reminiscent while recalling his experience with Atterburys, one of which he drove for the Heidt Fruit Company of this city for twenty-two months. At the end of the last two months he was with that concern the entire repair bill footed up to exactly $11.85.

"That's why I bought an Atterbury when I went into business for myself," he declared. "And I certainly have had no occasion to regret my choice. For the last three weeks I have been trucking walnuts and on a trip from Ventura to the Walnut Growers' Exchange here, I pulled a load of 12,735 pounds and a trailer loaded with four tons over the Santa Susana Pass.

"I am hauling a six-and-a-half-ton load of sacked walnuts almost every day from Los Angeles to Fullerton now on my two-ton Atterbury, and I don't figure I have reached the load limit."

TRAVELS EAST FOR ACCESSORY SHOW.

WANTS TO KEEP POSTER RIGHT DOWN TO THE MINUTE ON THINGS ELECTRICAL.

A determination to keep posted right down to the minute on things electrical was responsible for the departure last week of C. H. Kay of Kay & Burbank Company for Chicago, where he will attend the National Automobile Accessory Show.

He was accompanied East by J. M. Carpenter, recently appointed manager of the enlarged electrical accessory department of Kay & Burbank Company. They plan to be away from the city for about three weeks.

From Chicago Messrs. Kay and Carpenter will go to Philadelphia to visit the factory of the Electrical Storage Battery Company, manufacturers of Exide batteries, for which Kay & Burbank Company are distributors.

Mr. Kay's departure occasioned one regret on his part, that being that his absence would make it impossible for him to attend the monthly get-together meeting of the K-B organization, the first that he has ever missed, which was held Friday night. E. S. Harwood, secretary of the company, presided in Mr. Kay's place.

BENT KNUCKLE.

A bent steering knuckle should be so straightened that a line run from the tie bar hole in the end of the part and the center of the kingpin will strike the center of the rear axle. Unless this is carefully carried out, the front wheels will not be so aligned as to run properly.

BOOST SPRING PRODUCTION

South American, Mexican and foreign orders received during the past few months by the Cambria Spring Company have made necessary the enlargement of the local plant, according to R. W. Shelton, vice-president, who made an announcement to this effect yesterday.

"Our Los Angeles plant is now carrying the largest stock in its history," said Mr. Shelton, "and we are making immediate enlargements which will enable us practically to double our capacity. Our officials have been amazed at the industrial activity in the Latin countries and abroad, as indicated by the demand for our springs, and it behooves us to do everything in our power to keep abreast of the market.

"Most of our orders, from Mexico particularly, are for carload lots and for immediate or short-time delivery, so that it was absolutely necessary for us to adjust our production facilities in accordance. We will incorporate every facility for production on a standard of high quality and efficient service."

DISTRICT MANAGER ON EASTERN JAUNT.

WILL PRESENT REMARKABLE REPORT OF LOCAL BUSINESS TO THE FACTORY.

J. O. Ward, the district manager of the Miller Rubber Company, has left for his annual visit to the factories at Akron, O. While Mr. Ward has always had the pleasure of personally presenting a very interesting report to his factory as to the general conditions and the continued increase of business, this year, however, has shown a net gain of over 150 per cent. over last year, notwithstanding the fact that the demand has so far exceeded the supply that the local branch has been out of many of the popular sizes of cords for five months, only having been able to obtain a small percentage of the orders actually filed, and then only getting the tires by express. There were many weeks this summer, Mr. Ward says, when factory express shipments to the branch averaged many tons a week. The enormous growth of the Los Angeles branch is evidenced by the new two-story building in the course of construction on Hope street, between Twelfth and Pico, made necessary by their having outgrown the quarters they are now occupying.

After visiting the factory Mr. Ward will go on to New York City to visit his folks, and on his return will go up through the Northwest, stopping to inspect the branches of the Miller Rubber Company at Seattle, Portland and San Francisco, and then back to Los Angeles. He anticipates being gone at least a month.

CLOSE INSPECTION OF MAIN FACTORY.

"Remarkable progress," is the way John N. Willys, president of the Willys-Overland Company, expresses his satisfaction after a week's visit in Toledo spent in intimate study of conditions today at the big Overland plant.

In conferences with executives, Mr. Willys, during the week, approved the plans for a huge production programme scheduled for the two news models the company will market this year. These new cars are Overland 4, which is now in quantity production, and the new Willys-Knight model.

DEALERS HEEDING FREIGHT SHORTAGE.

Despite the fact that there is a marked increase in the demand for light and heavy trucks for freight transportation purposes, owing to the shortage of freight cars, motor car manufacturers are showing no disposition to relent in their vigorous campaign against unnecessary delays in loading and unloading freight cars. Every effort is being made to facilitate the quick return of "empties" to the manufacturing centers and to hurry the repair work on the thousands of cars not in service.

That the campaign is already proving effective is indicated by the unusual abundance of cars available in Detroit within the last week.

HOME-MADE THERMOSTAT.

An ingenious motorist recently contrived a thermostat by removing the rubber hose between the top of the cylinders and the radiator and the replacing it with a metal one, embodying a shut-off valve of the butterfly type, such as are used on carburetors. A rod from this valve extends through the dash, so that the driver can regulate the amount of water flow through the cooling system. In effect this is a manually controlled thermostat.

ASSEMBLY IMPORTANT.

"When a truck is criticized as being 'merely assembled,' does it mean that the assembly process is unimportant?" asks H. W. Acason, president of the Acason Motor Truck Company, Detroit, Mich. "The assembly department of all motor truck and car plants is the most important to the buyer," he further declared.

STEERING KNUCKLE PLAY.

Play in the steering knuckles due to a worn kingpin or knuckle yoke may be taken up by reboring the yoke and fitting bushings. Much front wheel wabbling is caused by looseness in this joint.

COMMUTATOR BRUSHES.

When the commutator brushes of the generator become slightly worn, arcing is likely to result. This may be prevented by filing the brushes so that they make a good contact with the commutator. A small magneto file may be used for this purpose. It is a mistake to adjust the brushes so that the springs are stretched too much, as this causes the brushes to heat up rapidly, due to excessive friction.

N TIRELY NEW GRANT ON VIEW.

Latest Model Creating Unusual Interest on Row.

Fans at Studio Try to Purchase First Demonstrator.

Driving, Riding Qualities of Car Above Expectations.

"Nothing less than a triumph!"

This was the tribute, and only one of many almost equally as complimentary, paid by the motoring trade and fraternity the past week to the "entirely new" Grant six, which made its debut in Los Angeles.

Its initial appearance was made simultaneously in the salesrooms of the distributors, the Frank O. Renstrom Company, and in the sporting goods section of the B. H. Dyas Company, both of which were crowded all week with those anxious for a close inspection of the new light six.

The cars were the first shown "entirely new" Grants shown in California, having been rushed here to satisfy the flood of inquiries which poured in upon Manager Earl V. Abbott of the Renstrom company, following the launching of a national advertising campaign by the Grant Motor Car Corporation of Cleveland.

"People simply refused to believe until they saw for themselves that a car could incorporate so many unapproachable features at the price at which the Grant has been brought out," Manager Abbott declared.

"Now that they have seen the new Grant and checked up the car's appearance, its specifications and its easy driving and riding qualities, their skepticism has yielded to wonder at how the manufacturer could turn out such a car at such a price."

It would be hard to find a happier and more delighted man than J. C. Planck, sales manager of the Frank O. Renstrom Company. "The car is more than I ever dreamed it could be," he declared, "and the more I examine it the better I like it, and the surer I am that it will be a real hit with owners." To illustrate the instant popularity into which the car has sprung, Sales Manager Planck related how, responding to repeated and insistent requests from Hollywood to have a Grant placed on display there, one was taken for a day last week on a tour which included the studios.

At the Famous Players-Lasky studio two young women in the cast supporting Robert Warwick in the new production, "Jack Straws," wanted to pay spot cash and take delivery on the car the minute they spied it.

"Let me drive it around the block," Miss Helene Sullivan asked, and when this was agreed to, she piloted the car with Miss Frances Parks at her side. "We'll take it right now, if you'll let us have it," Miss Sullivan said, declaring that she and Miss Parks had decided to go fifty-fifty on the purchase price. Failing to induce the Renstrom salesman to part with the new Grant, they did the next best thing they could do, paid down a deposit on a Grant for future delivery.

DECISION TO IMPROVE ROAD.

Harbor Boulevard for Use of Motor Trucks.

Need for Highway has been Felt for Years.

Upkeep will be Eliminated by Heavy Construction.

The decision to improve permanently a harbor boulevard for the especial use of motor trucks is being hailed with delight by every truck owner and operator in Los Angeles. It is the consensus of opinion that no public improvement that has been ordered within recent years will have as much bearing upon the future of the ship-by-truck movement as the construction of this road. Such a road has been needed for years, but it seems that heretofore there has been no way to bring it about until the recent decision by the Supervisors.

"Before work starts on building this road, and even before the specifications are drawn up, it will be a good thing for those in charge to bear in mind the use to which such a boulevard will be put," said W. R. Stoner, manager of the International-Mack Corporation, distributors for Mack trucks. "Roads that are built upon the same specifications as those already laid in Los Angeles county will not prove equal to the task imposed upon them when devoted exclusively to heavy hauling.

"A road that will support heavy truck hauling year in and year out and not require an enormous upkeep expense should be constructed more substantially than is necessary when they are subjected to other uses. Los Angeles county has built most of its improved highways since the motor truck came into general use. They were very good roads several years ago, and in the main are good roads yet, but they are beginning to show wear wherever trucks are operated over them continuously under capacity loads.

"Trucks are built today to haul capacity loads. They can be operated as cheaply under full loads as when carrying only part capacity. A harbor boulevard built to withstand the kind of use it will be subjected to will be a wonderful thing for motor-truck shipping. The entire city will benefit from it in a number of ways. Eventually it will be one of the busiest roads in the entire United States, and naturally, unless of more than ordinary strength, it will deteriorate rapidly. But, if built right in the first place, as there is reason to believe it will be, there will be no need for excessive wear to arise, and this will mean a minimum of maintenance costs. The right kind of a truck boulevard will put this county in the foreground as a motor-truck shipping center."

FARM-TO-TABLE WEEK ON DECK.

Motorists to Take Advantage of Unusual Campaign.

Automobile Solution to Demands for Cheaper Food.

"Motor to the country and fill your market baskets."

This is the slogan of "Farm-to-Table-Week" November 15-22, which has been designated as the time for nation-wide demonstration of the automobile and the country roadside market as a means of combatting the high cost of living. The movement has the active support of hundreds of automobile clubs and scores of manufacturers of motor cars and their dealers, as well as State and national granges.

Through the combined efforts of the various agencies of the automobile industry every farming community in the United States will be asked to be prepared for the cavalcades of city motorists who are expected to take advantage of "Farm-to-Table Week." They will be asked to post bulletin boards along the roadside announcing the fact that they have to offer—butter, eggs, turkeys, chickens, potatoes, apples squash, cabbage, carrots, etc., and to have ample supplies of their wares on sale at roadside markets. Likewise every available medium will be employed to apprise the motorist of the unusual opportunities offered him during the week.

The week of November 15-22 was selected because of its close proximity to Thanksgiving Day, when farm produce is in greater demand than ordinarily. The season is ideal also because of the abundance of farm and dairy products during late November.

Thousands of farmers have found roadside markets generously patronized by city motorists and have been a source of considerable profit to them. Foodstuffs and produce that ordinarily rotted for lack of time and transportation facilities have been turned into cash. But, roadside markets have been the exception rather than the rule. This tremendous field of distribution has been barely scratched. Tons and tons of foodstuffs are now in the hands of American farmers that will perish unless the city man with a motor car comes to the rescue. "Farm-to-Table Week" is confidently expected by its promoters to move thousands of tons of food. Furthermore, it will point out to both farmer and city man the economy of the roadside market and suggest to him that this medium be employed from early spring until late fall. The campaign is expected to have a decided educational value.

The cry in the city and in industrial centers is for more and cheaper food. The automobile is the solution. It makes next-door neighbors of the farmer and the city man. Every community should be awake to the advantage of this quick means of communication and transportation between city and farm. There is need for extensive education to both the producer and the consumer.

The possibilities of bringing down soaring food prices by the truck-patch-to-consumer route are enormous. Bigger demands of the farmer are certain to result in greater production, and ample supply will mean a drop in prices.

To Raymond Beck, who served the government as engineer in the Federal Highway Commission's office during the war and now occupying his former position as chief of the national touring bureau of the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Company, goes the credit for conceiving the idea of the "Farm-to-Table Week."

LOW PRESSURE IS ROUGH ON MOTORS.

PROPERLY INFLATED TIRE GIVES BEST RESULTS ALL THE WAY AROUND.

There has been a great deal said and written about the care of tires leading to economy from a standpoint of long service from the tires, but there is one feature in connection with this that seems to have been overlooked and to which attention is drawn by M. M. Robertson of the C. Fred Thompson Tire Company, local distributors of the well-known Mason tire.

It has been said time and again that if automobile tires are not kept properly inflated they will wear away quickly and this, of course, is true, says Mr. Robertson, but there is another side to this, also, which has an important bearing on the economical operation of the car.

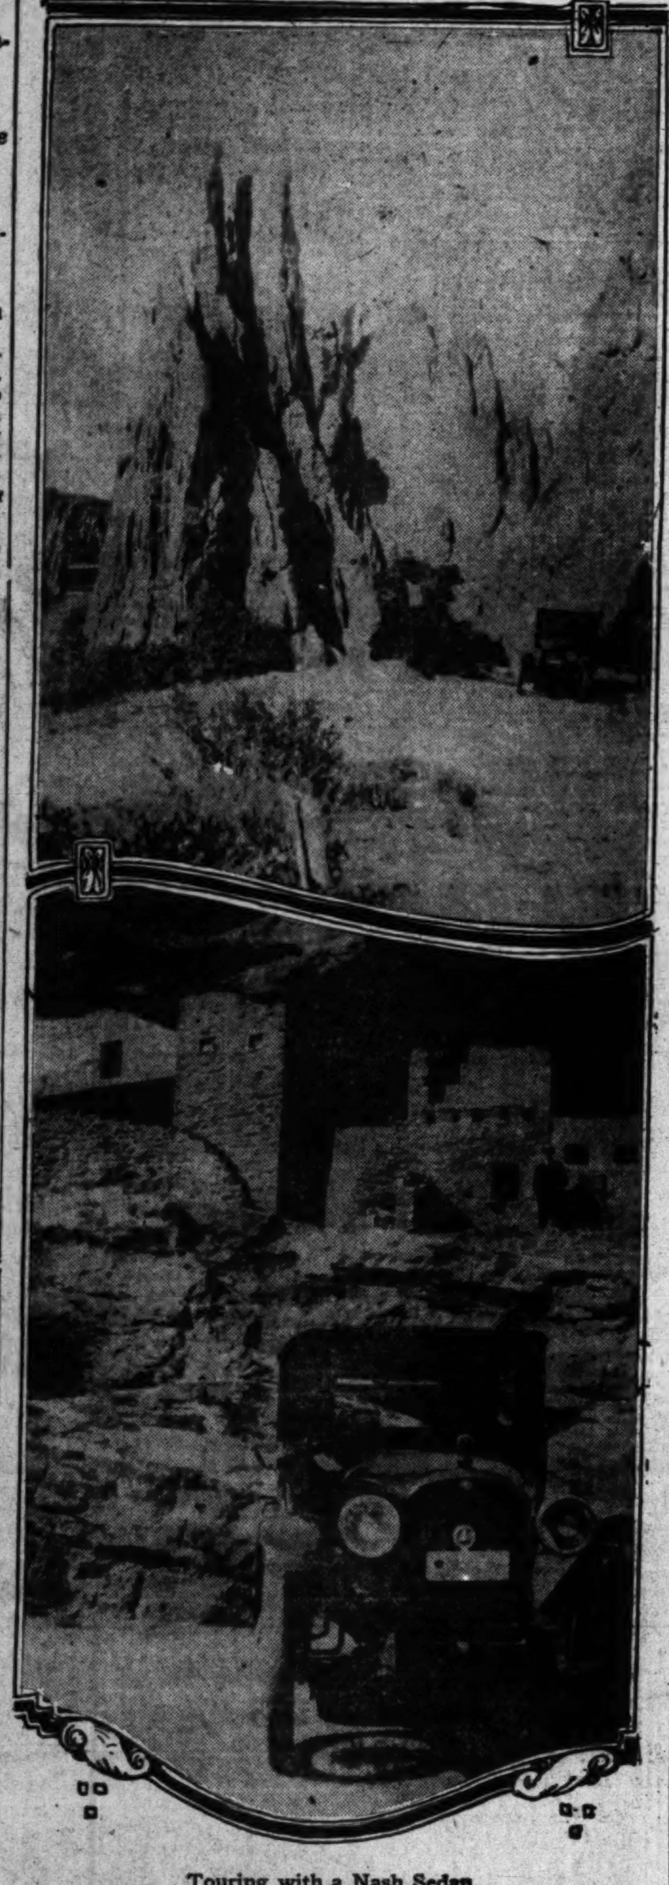
When a tire is blown up hard there is very little of it which comes in touch with the road and the softer the tire the more surface there is which comes in contact with the road and, consequently there is more of a drag to the car, necessitating hard work for the motor and a constant tax on the gasoline supply.

In a day's run this will make a big difference in the amount of gasoline consumed, more than one would think, and is the answer in many cases in the difference of mileage which one car of the make gets over another, so that from every standpoint it behooves the motorist to keep his tires blown up hard all the time.

LUCKY HELMET IS ON JOB FOR HIM.

When Otto Walker, two-wheeler speed king, grabbed the two-mile championship from numerous contenders at the recent Sheepshead Bay speedway races, he was wearing what he terms his lucky helmet, captured by him from a German aviator in the Toul Sector. The former Hun scrapper rode a Firestone-shod Harley Davidson, as did E. H. Farrell, who captured the ten-mile metropolitan championship. In the long grinds, Albert Burns, winner of the 100-mile contest and the twenty-mile contest and the twenty-mile stock championship, had Firestone Non-Skids on the rear wheels of his Harley Davidson to insure a safe grip on the road at thrilling moments.

PREFERS INCLOSED CAR.



Touring with a Nash Sedan

Is the only way to tour, according to Mr. and Mrs. John D. Clark, who recently completed a trip through the Yellowstone National Park. The photographs were taken in the Yellowstone region. Mr. Clark was high in praise of the Nash Sedan and claimed that even the thought of trouble with the car didn't enter their minds on the whole jaunt.

A motor trip of unusual interest was completed recently, through the Yellowstone country. Mr. and Mrs. John D. Clark and son, Harry, left Los Angeles in a Nash sedan and traveled via Independence, Goldfield and Ely to Salt Lake City. More than 900 miles were covered in this stage of the trip in five days.

"After a week spent in seeing the many points of interest," said Mr. Clark, "we took the Pikes Peak trail via Leadville, Canyon City, Colorado Springs and Cripple Creek to Denver. Here we passed another week. We discarded our fabric tires and equipped with cords all the way around. From then on our tire troubles were at an end.

"We then took the highway to Laramie, camping and fishing along the road. We passed through Casper, the big oil center, and Cody to Yellowstone. Here we spent several days, taking in the various scenic points and enjoying the outdoor life.

"Soon after leaving the Yellowstone, we passed through a forest fire burning on both sides of the road. It was very dangerous as well as disagreeable, but the Nash carried us through without trouble. From the Flathead Indian Reservation we went to Thompson Falls, Sand Point and Spokane, thence north to Davenport, Soap Lake and across the Columbia River to Ellensburg on the Yakima River. From there the road lay to Seattle and Tacoma.

"We took in Paradise Valley and Mt. Rainier, where the roads were very narrow and controls are necessary. They have the expression here, 'All cars are steamers when they go up this grade,' but our Nash kept up its record of never boiling. A gentlemanly driver came up and offered us a bucket of water, and when he found that the radiator didn't need any he said he would have to take off his hat to that motor.

"When we reached Paradise Inn it as snowing, and the snow was piled up two to three feet deep on the porches. We drained our radiator for fear of freezing.

"We joined a fishing party at Mt. St. Helens, and had sixty-seven trout in camp the first night. The roads in this region were fierce, of the old corduroy type, and it took us four hours to make thirty miles. We didn't regret this part of the trip, however.

"After making many detours on account of road construction, we reached Portland, and spent a week enjoying the many pretty spots along the Columbia River. From there we went to Crater Lake, Klamath Falls, and on to San Francisco. The fine pavement on the way to Los Angeles was a real treat.

"We made 7450 miles on our trip, averaged 15.5 miles to the gallon of gasoline, never had to use all the power of the motor, even on grades up to 24 per cent.

"At one time the thermometer was 20 deg. above zero, but our closed Nash sedan made traveling very comfortable. The closed car is the ideal type for traveling across country."

MONTHS BEHIND IN CAR DELIVERIES.

FOUND NECESSARY TO INCREASE PRODUCTION TO CARE FOR NEW OWNERS.

Mr. H. V. Shank of the Wright Motor Car Company has just returned from the Roamer factory where he went to learn why the orders from the local dealers were not being filled faster than they were, as the demand here had become insistent and they were anxious for quicker deliveries.

"I found the production schedule of the factory just about six months behind and that they were filling orders in October which had been received as far back as April 1, 1919," says Mr. Shank, "and all this in view of the fact that they are building twice as many cars as they ever had built before.

"The Roamer, of course, is a strictly custom-built job and the factory has never gone in for quantity production, but the demand has become so great and orders have piled in so fast that arrangements had to be made to enlarge the factory to produce more cars.

"With this increased production, we will be taken care of and after December 1, we will be in a position to make immediate deliveries which will remind us again of the good old days of the past."

CLEANING CHASSIS PARTS.

In cleaning small parts of the chassis, such as the oil holes on brake cross shafts, brake connections, spark and throttle connection, etc., use an oil can filled with kerosene and a stiff brush. In this way the kerosene in just the proper amounts can be directed just where it is needed. This method is particularly useful in cleaning out oil holes which have become partly [illegible] with dirt.

MANY CHANGES COMING.

The real evolution of the motor car is just beginning, according to Harry A. Lord of the Lord Motor Car Company, and the law of progress will see to it that motor cars of future years are better in design, construction and in performance than anything we now have. In fact, it is Lord's opinion that the next five years will see improvements greater than any previous ten-year period, and he points to the many and important improvements already being shown in the 1920 models as an index of what may be expected.

"We had thought the Velie of the last three years represented about the last word in automobile body design, and that any improvements would be along the lines of betterment of the original design, when along came this 1920 Velie, with a body design entirely different and new and bearing not the least resemblance to former styles.

"Then we had thought the former power plants bearing the Continental red seal were about all one could reasonably expect in the matter of performance, when here came this new Velie-Continental engine, with a dozen betterments, putting the new car far ahead of any former Velie in actual road performance, and marking a new high-water-mark in motor construction for the whole field.

"The war wakened motor-car manufacturers out of a sort of lethargy, and forced them (not against their will however,) to produce more effective vehicles and better power plants. Necessity was indeed the mother of invention—with the result that here we have an automobile which ten years ago could not have been dreamed of, five years ago would have been thought impossible so long as gasoline was used as fuel, and two years ago was believed to be hidden far under the veil of the future.

"Yet, after all, anyone who looks over the progress made in motor-car manufacture sees clearly that the general trend of betterments is toward greater simplicity, fewer working parts, cleaner lines and less work for the repair shop.

"Body design, thought by many to have reached the utmost in beauty a few years ago, may take a turn toward the reproduction of period designs, and a Los Angeles connoisseur last week stated that certain of the lines of the new Velie are based upon the William & Mary period, with a touch of American Colonial and Chippendale added here and there. It is certain that a very great amount of study was put on the design of this new car, and it is only reasonable to suppose that the recognized masters of design were considered. The body is composed of a series of correctly-proportioned symmetrical planes, with the clean-cut edges that give the car the look of a thoroughbred. It is so far ahead of the cars of a year or two ago that few persons recognize it as a Velie until the new nameplate is inspected.

The Nordyke and Marmon Company's new plant, consisting of a five-story body shop 600 feet long, a one-story final assembly building 900 feet long, a power plant and other buildings, is being rapidly rushed to completion, according to word received here by Al G. Faulkner, State Marmon distributor.

The new Marmon plant, which practically duplicates in floor space the machine shop built during the war for the production of government aviation motors, will make the plant one of the largest manufacturing establishments of fine cars in the United States.

"This is especially important to Californians, because it means that with greater manufacturing facilities there will be an increased output and consequently a larger allotment of cars for the Coast," asserts Faulkner.

Tested 250,000 Miles Three-Point Cantilever Springs Greatest Improvement Since Pneumatic Tires

OVERLAND 4 has been put through the most thorough and severe test possible.

250,000 miles of mountain trails, desert sand, heat, cold, mud and dust, demonstrated the quality of every part of the car long before we began manufacturing.

This remarkable test showed conclusively that Three-Point Cantilever Springs, exclusive with Overland, are the greatest improvement in riding comfort since the introduction of pneumatic tires.

They protect the car from road shocks and prolong the life of every part.

They enable the wheels to hold better to the road. They give greater comfort under all road conditions.

They do away almost entirely with side sway and rebound which twist and rack the car.

Diagonal attachment of the Three-Point Springs at both ends of a 130-inch Spring-base gives the steadiness and smooth riding of the heavy car of long wheelbase.

Equipment is complete from Auto-Lite Starting and Lighting System to Marshall Divan Spring Upholstery.

CURRY'S BEST SEASON.

Although more people from Southern California visited Yosemite this year than during any previous season, statistics tabulated at the close of this season show that the greatest increase was from Northern and Central California. Practically 50 per cent. more people from these divisions visited the valley than ever before.

These tabulations were made public by Mrs. D. A. Curry, president of the Curry Camping Company, shortly before her recent departure for Washington, D. C., where, together with her son, Foster Curry, who is associated with her in the management of Camp Curry, she will take up with the Department of the Interior proposed improvements in the Yosemite tourist accommodations. According to the Camp Curry figures, 3396 individuals from Los Angeles and other Southern California cities registered; 4735 came from the bay cities of San Francisco, Oakland, Berkeley and Alameda; 4290 came from other parts of Northern and Central California.

From other States than California, 3220 guests were entertained—double the previous record. Illinois led with 378 representatives; Pennsylvania came next with 286, with Ohio taking third place with 212. New Hampshire only sent two.

Two hundred and twenty-one foreigners visited the Yosemite and Camp Curry, England leading with thirty-seven arrivals, Canada coming second with thirty-two and Australia a close third with thirty-one. There was an exceptional increase in foreign registrants this year, especially in those from Holland and the Dutch possessions in the Pacific.

Among other countries from which travelers journeyed to see the glories of the Yosemite were: Burma, China, Czecho-Slovakia, Cuba, Denmark, Danish East Indies, France, India, Japan, Mexico, Malay states, New Zealand, Norway, Russia, Siam, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Scotland, South Africa and Turkey.

Japanese Humor.

Said an inkeeper's wife to her husband:

"The guest who came this evening carries a package that seems to contain things of great value. I wish he would leave it behind."

"I have a good idea," said the husband. "I will give him a great deal of myoga."

The innkeeper carried out his plan and gave myoga, a spicy vegetable supposed to produce forgetfulness, in abundance to the guest with soup and with vegetables, and soon after the guest had departed he hopefully inspected the room. There was no trace of the coveted baggage.

The landlady began to scoff at the inefficacy of myoga as an oblivion producer, but her husband admonished her not to lose faith so easily.

"The myoga has had its effect," he declared.

"What do you mean?" demanded the woman.

"Why, he forgot to pay his bill," replied the husband.—[Aisaku Waseda in the Tourist.

IMMEDIATE DELIVERY ON MITCHELL SIX

That we might assure every future Mitchell owner the opportunity to secure a "Victory Six," George W. Franklin, the manager of this company, spent six weeks at the Mitchell factory urging that California motorists be given first consideration—and he was successful.

The Mitchell Victory Six sprang into instant popularity because of its remarkable records of performance, and the demand has exceeded the supply. But now carloads of these wonderful cars are coming Westward regularly and immediate deliveries can be made.

MOTOR CAR IN LEADING ROLE.

Immigration Inspector Puts Auto to Severe Tests.

Live in Machine on Cross-Country Journey.

Wild Weather and Rough Roads Can't Stop 'Em.

This is the story of how a man, a woman, the man's wife and an automobile from Los Angeles rendered notable service to the Federal government upon special assignment at a point representing the almost opposite extreme of the United States from Los Angeles. The start, some of the transactions between and the finish all have to do with this city. The automobile furnished the transportation.

Richard H. Taylor is a special inspector in the immigration service in charge of the criminal department. That means he belongs to the world-famous secret service of Uncle Sam. In several of his exploits, and the one involved in this tale in particular, Mrs. Taylor has acted as first aide.

HERE'S THE REASON.

But why this story in the automobile section? That's because if it had not been for the automobile the success of the venture might not have been brought about. The automobile was an air-cooled Franklin touring car of 1916 production in which the Taylors have traveled many thousands of miles.

Several weeks ago, Mr. Taylor was notified that there was reason for the immigration service to suspect that Chinese were being smuggled into this country at some point along the coast of Maine. He was instructed to proceed from Los Angeles to New York for further orders. He and Mrs. Taylor left at once for the eastern metropolis, but not until after making arrangements for the Franklin car to be shipped to them. It was a tried and true friend and when embarking upon a strange mission that is the only kind to trust, the Taylors believe.

In New York, Mr. Taylor was given a few more details and he and Mrs. Taylor set out in the Franklin for the scene of their adventure. They drove to Eastport, Me. If you have forgotten where Eastport is, get out the family atlas and it will be found jutting out into the Atlantic Ocean at the farthermost eastern point of the United States.

Camp was pitched on the shore of the Bay of Fundy and operations began. Day after day was passed in waiting and night after night the Taylors searched about in the remote recesses of the rugged coast. The headlights of the Franklin car were used to search out places it was not safe to drive in and at other times, upon a suspicious sound being heard, they were extinguished and progress had to be made in stygian darkness.

Then came the tip that a boat was making its way close to shore and as it was the suspected smuggling vessel other operatives in charge of Mr. Taylor and a force from the town's officers were called to the asistance. On the night of the capture, Mrs. Taylor drove the Franklin to a strategic point and remained in charge of the car with instructions to rush to her husband's aid should she hear him whistle. The men scattered out through the brush and lay in hiding.

COMPLICATIONS.

The boat came to shore and another automobile appeared as if from nowhere. This car was to rush the Chinese inland after they landed. The entire gang made its way up the shore, got into the automobile and then waited. Something had been forgotten and two of the smugglers went back to the boat. Upon their return and just as everything was in readiness for the getaway, the man from Los Angeles and his force swooped down from the bank and up out of the brush and the entire party was put under arrest. The smugglers, eight Chinese and $20,000 worth of opium were captured.

Their little enterprise having succeeded the far east held no more interest for the Taylors and the Franklin was driven back to New York, where a few days' delay was necessary for making reports and then the start was made for Los Angeles.

The Franklin car was equipped with all the comforts of home even down to a collapsible bathtub. The 5300-mile run was made from Maine to Los Angeles via the Delaware Mountain Gap, Cleveland, Chicago, Hannibal, Mo., and Albuquerque. A detour was made to include the Grand Canyon on the route.

Mr. Taylor reports that fully one-half the road between Albuquerque and Los Angeles has been washed out by recent floods. At one place, he says, the services of eighteen men were required to get one automobile out of a hole in the road it had run into.

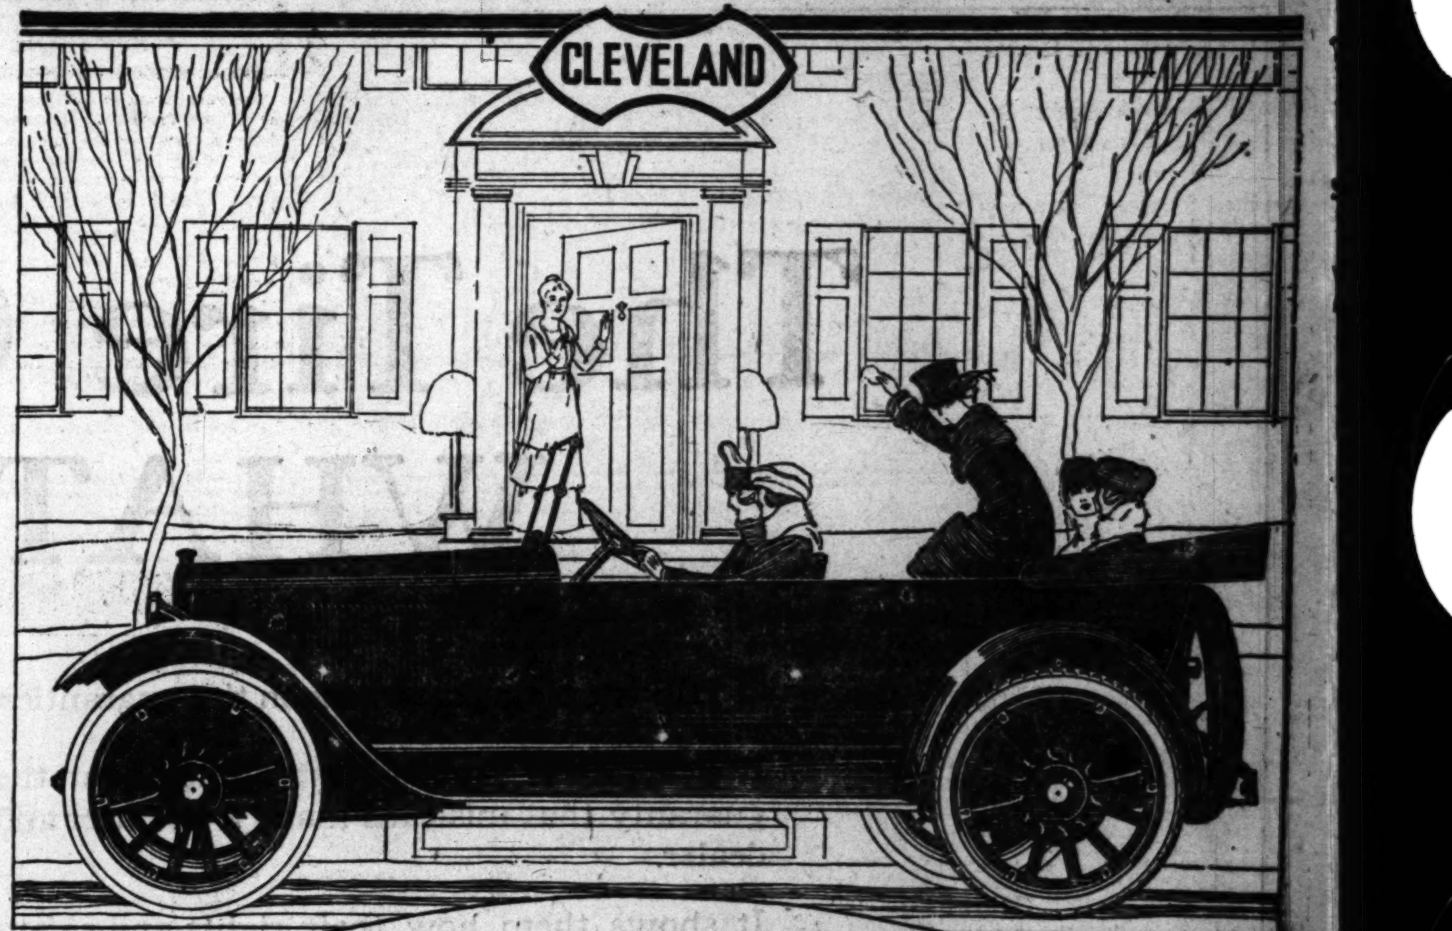
The road through Nelson Canyon, near Needles, has been almost obliterated by a cloudburst. For fifteen miles it was necessary to drive over what was left of the road and this consisted almost entirely of huge boulders and loose sand.

While the Taylors were en route between Buffalo and Albuquerque it rained nearly every alternate day. They drove their Franklin for many miles through mud hub deep. Many cars were passed that had been abandoned in the road. At one point in New Mexico a bridge had been washed out and the Franklin was the only car that managed to get across there. Other cars were being driven upstream for miles before attempting to make the crossing.

NO KICKS ON WEATHER.

With the exception of one week, the Taylors slept in their car every night for more than two months and in all sorts of weather conditions. The seats in the car are cut so they form a bed. Rain fell nearly the entire distance from Maine to Los Angeles yet so thoroughly do they enjoy the outdoor life and so certain are they of the Franklin's ability to get them through any place that Mr. Taylor says they would go right back over the same roads under similar conditions.

Mr. Taylor says that along the New England coast motorists are the prey of profiteers every place. The entire populace seems to be out with a hook for automobile owners. Fruit is sold at the gates to magnificent country mansions. In the small towns a motorist pays 80 cents for a pound of lamb chops that a native buys for 20 cents.



Crowds are Enthusiastic about the Cleveland Six

The crowds which have filled our store from day to day to see the new Cleveland Six have admired it beyond measure. They have proclaimed it the great car of the year, the car which will surely dominate the whole light car field. Those who have ridden in it, or driven it through hard tests say, "It's a regular automobile."

The Cleveland is an extraordinary car of power, pickup, speed and comfort, compact in its design and construction, yet roomy, and unusually economical in cost of operation.

The men who build the Cleveland Six are men of broad and successful experience in the finest of motor car manufacture, and into their car they have built their skill and integrity. For three years before they announced this car to the public they put it through all conceivable tests in shop and laboratory and on the road. And when they did announce it, it was Ready.

WHY ELECTRICS RIDE EASIEST.

Special Springs Built for Lower Speeds.

Gasoline Cars Must be Designed for Heavy Shocks.

High Proportion of Weight Above the Springs.

Most motorists of experience are familiar with the fact that electric automobiles ride much easier than the average gas car, but not many are aware of the mechanical reasons which give the electric this distinct advantage from the comfort standpoint. According to J. W. Gaffney of the Gaffney Motor Sales Company, distributors for the Milburn light electric, there are two reasons for the superiority of the electric in this regard.

"The fact that the speed of the electric vehicle does not exceed thirty miles an hour is one of the reasons why it can be made much more easy riding," said Mr. Gaffney last week. "Though the ordinary gasoline vehicle is usually driven at speeds not in excess of this mark yet its designers must build into it springs capable of resisting the heavy road shocks that are liable to be imposed at speeds of from fifty to sixty miles an hour.

"As a consequence of this, the Milburn engineers have been able to build into their electric springs which have oscillations of eighty-two to eighty-three per minute. This type of spring has been proven to possess the best riding qualities at speeds that the electric uses, but is impractical for extreme high speed.

"The other factor in producing ease of riding in the electric is the high proportion of weight above the springs to that below the springs. In the Milburn, only 12 per cent. of the total weight of the car is below the springs, while in the ordinary gasoline car the "unsprung" weight is from 20 to 25 per cent.

"As a result of these two distinct advantages of construction the electric car achieves a degree of riding comfort that it is impossible for the gasoline car to equal."

SOCKET WRENCH AIDS.

A valuable addition to the socket wrench set is an elbow extension to be used in horizontal work on the bench when only one hand is free. Another similar aid is a bench holder with a flattened end, drilled so that it may be screwed to the edge of the bench or be held in the vise as necessity dictates.

COLD WEATHER A TEST.

It takes cold weather and engines that sometimes act as if they were snow-bound to bring out the relative merits of motor fuel, according to George Zeeman, manager of the Western Oil Company.

"When the thermometer registers summer heat and engines do not get a chance to cool out thoroughly even when left standing over night, those who are not experts are not sure that they are not getting the utmost in gasoline value for their money," said Zeeman. "But after one has tried to start a cold motor with a poor grade of gas in the carburetor a few times, one quickly learns the difference.

"That is why," continued Zeeman, "that we have lately been compelled to inaugurate a twenty-four-hour-a-day running schedule at our refining plant, and one of the reasons why Purity gasoline is being sold exclusively at more than forty conveniently-located filling stations throughout the city and vicinity.

"Low gravity gasoline gets cold just like water, and betrays its poor quality in cold weather if at no other time. It neither has the power of a good product, but this is not always noticeable to the ordinary motorist. It does not take an expert, however, to tell when the gasoline he is using fails to start his engine, and it is then he discovers he has been getting bilked. Pure, properly-refined motor fuel is not affected by cold weather and always has a high explosive and powerful punch waiting to respond to the spark."

BUILDING BATTERY POSTS.

It is possible to build up battery posts that have worn down by slipping a section of cast iron pipe, cut to the proper length over the old post and then melting new post metal in by means of an acetylene torch. The piece [illegible] as a cup to hold the new metal as it is melted.

The Tire Guaranty!

WHAT IS IT?

THIS is a plain, frank talk on tire guaranties.

It clears up the misunderstanding about the guaranty that misleads many a tire user and dealer.

It shows them how their rights and safety are best secured in the sale of a tire. It means more protection to the user, and a stabler business to the dealer.

Why does a user buy a certain tire? Nine times out of ten because he has been led to expect a certain mileage from it.

Therefore, it is vital that the user understands clearly what service he has a right to expect from a tire.

DOES the tire guaranty make this clear between him and the dealer? What does it guarantee? Where does it begin, and end? Read and see.

All the leading tire manufacturers, The B. F. Goodrich Rubber Company the same as the rest, guarantee tires with these identical words:

> "We guarantee all Pneumatic Automobile Tires bearing our name and serial number, to be free from imperfection of material and workmanship. . . . .
> . . . . Pneumatic Automobile Tires are not guaranteed to give any definite number of miles."

This guaranty means that if "in the judgment" of the manufacturer usage reveals an imperfection of material or workmanship, the manufacturer will "repair or replace it at his option," adjusting it according to his own judgment; and it means nothing more.

"BUT how," the tire user very properly demands, "is the adjustment of an imperfect tire made? Where does the adjustment begin?"

To such questions, the guaranty against imperfection makes no specific answer whatever

But to all these questions, the Goodrich Adjustment makes a specific answer, open handed as Justice. It takes up a tire where the guaranty stops, and leaves no room for misunderstanding, or controversy, between user and dealer.

It says that a Goodrich Fabric Tire, with proper usage, will deliver at least 6,000 miles; and a Silvertown Cord at least 8,000 miles.

AN imperfect Goodrich Tire is so rare that an adjustment is an immaterial thing to The B. F. Goodrich Rubber Company; but a single imperfect tire to the individual user who gets it is too material a thing to be ignored.

Yet without an adjustment basis, clearly and definitely stated, a tire user with a claim against a tire, goes into a court where there is no law. But the Goodrich Adjustment lays down the law, fair to user and dealer—clear to both.

Thus Goodrich first insures the user against an imperfect tire with the guaranty; then specifies clearly the amount of his insurance with the Goodrich Adjustment basis—6000 miles for Fabrics—8000 miles for Silvertown Cords.

That takes the risk out of the sale of a Goodrich Tire, both for dealer and user. It takes the guess out of its service.

Demand Goodrich Tires of your dealer.

Little secrets on which Good Looks depend

SO many, many women could be twice as attractive if they only knew how! Just a bit more understanding of the definite things that should be done to bring about certain specific results makes all the difference between looking dull and looking expuisite.

HOW TO PROTECT THE SKIN FROM COLD, WIND AND DUST

Every "hike," every motor trip you take, your skin pays for. The cold dries it. The wind robs it of all natural oil. The dust flies into the pores and coarsens them. Then the next day your complexion is florid, harsh, rough—altogether unlovely!

You can protect your poor skin from this punishment. Before going out, rub a little Pond's Vanishing Cream into your face, neck and hands. At once it disappears. It can never come out again in a wretched shine, for it is absolutely greasless. Now the wind and cold cannot dry or chap your skin; the dust cannot work into the pores. Do this every time you go out. Your skin will stay soft, smooth, lovely all winter.

HOW TO CLEANSE THE PORES AND KEEP THE SKIN CLEAR

For cleansing, your skin needs an entirely different cream—a cream with an oil base. Before going to bed or whenever your face has been especially exposed to dust, rub some Pond's Cold Cream into the pores of your skin and wipe it off with a soft cloth. It is amazing how much dirt comes out. You will get a new idea of how important this cold-cream cleansing is. The formula for Pond's Cold Cream was especially worked out to supply just the amount of oil required to give it the highest possible cleansing power.

HOW TO FRESHEN THE COMPLEXION AND MAKE THE POWDER STAY ON

There are times when you would give all you own to look your very best. Whenever you like, it can be done! Before you powder, take a little bit of Pond's Vanishing Cream on your finger tips. Smooth it lightly over your face. At once the cool, fragrant cream disappears. You can feel the tenseness around eyes and mouth relax. Your skin is smoother, fresher. Now powder your face as usual. The powder will stay on two or three times as long. Do this always before powdering. It makes the powder look more natural. It gives your skin a new transparent loveliness, an exquisite softness that makes you look your very best. And it will never embarrass you by coming out in a wretched shine.

HOW TO KEEP THE FACE SMOOTH AND UNLINED

Once a week, massage your face and neck with Pond's Cold Cream. It has the exact smoothness and body required to make it work well into the skin. Always work from the center of the face outwards and upwards.

WHY YOUR SKIN NEEDS TWO CREAMS

One without any oil, for day-time and evening needs—Pond's Vanishing Cream. It will not reappear in a shine.
One with an oil base for cleansing and massage—Pond's Cold Cream. It has just the amount of oil that the skin needs.

Neither of these creams will encourage the growth of hair on the face.
Get a jar or tube of each cream today at any drug or department store. You will realize for the first time how lovely your skin can be.

The hours women spend on their complexions

Endlessly groping—but there is a way to make your skin clear and flawless

WHAT infinite care, what trouble, what risks, even, a woman will take to possess a beautiful skin!

Not the smallest defect that goes unnoticed in the daily scrutiny she gives herself before her mirror; not the slightest imperfection she will not make tireless efforts to correct.

Yet thousands of girls and women fail to achieve the lovely skin they long for because they never really study their skin and learn its individual needs.

In trying to improve their complexions, they experiment first with one thing, then another—each time hoping for a miracle to happen! Then, disappointed, they relax their efforts until some newer remedy presents itself.

Only one miracle can happen to your skin—and that happens every day.

Each day your skin renews itself—the old skin dies, and new skin takes its place. By taking advantage of this constant change in the skin cells—by giving the new skin, as it forms, the simple, regular, hygienic care suited to its individual needs—you can make it whatever you wish to have it.

Learn to study your own skin. Look at it every day in a full light before your hand mirror. Is it fresh, soft, brilliant with lovely color? Under the strongest light does it show clear, flawless?

Or, when you come to examine it closely, do you find conspicuous nose pores? Do embarrassing little blemishes mar its delicate smoothness? If so, you may be sure that you are not giving your skin the kind of care it needs.

The famous treatment for conspicuous nose pores

Often a skin that is otherwise almost flawless will be spoiled, made unattractive, by conspicuous nose pores.

The pores of the face are not as fine as on other parts of the body. On the nose especially there are more fat glands than elsewhere and there is more activity of the pores.

These pores, if not properly stimulated and kept free from dirt, clog up and become enlarged.

You can overcome this trouble by using every night this special treatment.

Wring a soft cloth from very hot water, lather it with Woodbury's Facial Soap, then hold it to your face. When the heat has expanded the pores, rub in very gently a fresh lather of Woodbury's. Repeat this hot water and lather application several times, stopping at once if your nose feels sensitive. Then finish by rubbing the nose for thirty seconds with a piece of ice. Always dry your skin carefully.

Before long you will find that this treatment reduces the enlarged pores until they become inconspicuous. The treatment must, however, be used persistently and regularly—for you must not expect to change in a few days, or even a week, a condition resulting from months of exposure and neglect.

The cause of skin blemishes

A frequent cause of worry and embarrassment to women are the unsightly little blemishes that sometimes mar the smoothness of an otherwise lovely skin. Authorities on the skin now agree that these are commonly caused by bacteria and parasites which are carried into the pores from outside, through dust and fine particles in the air. By the right kind of treatment you can entirely free your skin from these disfiguring blemishes—and as the new skin forms each day, you can make it as clear and smooth as you would like to have it.

Just before retiring, wash in your usual way with warm water and Woodbury's Facial Soap, finishing with a dash of cold water. Then dip your fingers in warm water and rub them on a cake of Woolbury's until they are covered with a heavy creamlike lather. Cover each blemish with a thick coat of this, and leave it on for ten minutes. Then rinse very carefully, first with clear hot water, then with cold.

Use this treatment every night, and the blemishes will gradually disappear. The regular use of Woodbury's in cleansing your skin will discourage the tendency for new blemishes to form.

Learn the treatment for your type of skin

You will find treatments that exactly meet the need of each individual type of skin in the little booklet that is wrapped round every cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap. Each one of these treatments has been worked out according to fundamental rules of skin hygiene. As you read them, you will wonder at their simplicity and common sense. But don't forget that the success of the treatments depends on the regularity and persistence with which you use them. You cannot change the habits of your skin in a day or even a week.

You will find Woodbury's Facial Soap on sale at any drug store or toilet goods counter in the United States. Get a cake today and begin using it tonight. A 25-cent cake lasts a month or six weeks.

Let us send you a trial size cake

For 6 cents we will send you a trial size cake (enough for a week of any Woodbury facial treatment) together with the booklet of treatments. Or for 15 cents we will send you the treatment booklet and samples of Woodbury's Facial Soap, Facial Powder, Facial Cream and Cold cream. The Garden Beautiful in Southern California.

INFORMATION BOTH PRACTICAL AND SCIENTIFIC. BY ERNEST BRAUNTON.

ARTICLES on avocado culture appearing in this department have evoked considerable discussion, and out of the several late letters received the writer believes one at least is particularly worthy of publication. It comes from one of the most reliable nurserymen in California, a personal friend of the Garden Beautiful man and yet we do not altogether agree. A brief comment will follow the letter:

"As has been our custom for a long while, we usually look at the page of the Farm and Tractor Section, headed 'The Garden Beautiful in Southern California, about the first thing when we get our Sunday Times. A week ago last Sunday, October 5, we pursued our usual custom and read with much interest your article on the growing of avocado trees, warning your readers to look out for cork screw roots; all of which is very good. But there has been a misunderstanding among the members of the Avocado Association to the extent that some have warned planters against buying trees grown in boxes, and advise altogether that purchasers buy trees grown in the field.

"The facts are, if the seeds are planted in pots and allowed to remain for any length of time, especially in earthen pots, the roots are more than likely to form in corkscrew shape, but planters should differentiate between the shallow earthen pots and paper pots. It has been our custom to grow the seeds in deep paper pots, giving the seedling sufficient time to make a root to the bottom of the pot. Then we transfer the seedling to a wooden box, 6x6x8 inches deep and as soon as it is large enough it is budded.

"This method has resulted in producing a splendid fibrous root system, without danger or corkscrew root and it is our opinion from experience, and from the experience of planters to whom we have sold trees, that these trees will transplant more safely and will grow as well at least as the ordinary tree, balled from the field. As you are aware, in handling balled trees, there is always danger in getting the ball broken, with consequent loss of the tree. In addition to this, the mere fact that the tree is field grown does not eliminate the corkscrew root if the seedling is not properly grown before it is transplanted to the field.

"Would like very much to have you come out and see us. In addition to avocado trees, we have other things that you would be interested in, and we would like to show you just how we grow our avocado trees so that you may see the other side of the question. We are not writing this for publication, but merely to give you our view, and also to explain our way of propagating avocados, which we think is to the advantage of the grower. Don't fail to come out and see us when you have time."

At least one statement above is worthy of repetition: "The mere fact that the tree is field grown does not eliminate the corkscrew root if the seedling is not properly grown before it is transplanted to the field." This is now the chief objection against such field grown trees as the editor has seen; they were spoiled before planting out. But we still hold to our former opinion that plants should be put in the field in same manner as young orange trees, when of like size and budded and treated the same in every way.

Yucca Aloefolia.

Yucca aloefolia is known to more people than any other species, for it is very easily grown and is hardy in the British Isles and South Europe. It is native to the West Indies and the United States from Virginia southward and around the Gulf of Mexico. The type, a green-leaved plant, is not popular in gardens here, but the variegated forms are much admired and all those known to the writer are of the variety tricolor.

The Dasylirions.

Dasylirions are related to yuccas, nolinas and inhabit the same territory. While we have no species native to California, they run up into Texas from Mexico, but all species are found in the latter country. Of all this class of plants none is more attractive than Dasylirion serratifolium which we illustrate. This, placed in Singleton Court by the writer when a tiny pot plant nearly twenty years ago, flowered a few years ago, with a shaft ten feet high.

The Nolinas.

Nolinas are variously named in horticulture. Beaucarnea and Pincenittitia are two in common use. We have one species in California, native to the desert regions, N. Parryi. There is one or more species in Lower California and many in Mexico. In [illegible] those we illustrate are Mexican and not uncommon in local gardens. They are considered curiosities because of the swollen base of the trunks.

When All Was Land.

When one studies plant life broadly he is led to wonder if the world at one time was not all land or at least having little water. We know that fossil remains of animals found here furnish conclusive proof that they came to North America from Asia by land over the northern route. A magnolia found in China is identical with one of ours. Several species of araucaria are found in Australia and adjacent islands and nowhere else except two species, very distinct, one on the Pacific Coast of South America and the other on the opposite side of the continent, or in Chile and Brazil, respectively. In Hawaii there is an acacia (A. Koa) that is identical with A. Heterophylla of the Mascarene group thousands of miles away, and almost identical with the Australian blackwood (A. Melanoxylon) so common in California. Years ago a large tree of the Hawaiian species stood in Elysian and no one could distinguish it from the blackwood. Was Hawaii at one time connected with Mauritius, Bourbon and Australia. Doubtless so, and at a time when some present lands were the floor of the ocean. New Zealand, so close to Australia, the land of acacias, has not a single native species, but all the Australian species thrive there when planted. Why are there no oaks except in a temperate belt far north of the equator, though they extend around the globe? None are in the torrid zone or in the southern hemisphere.

Nutmegs in California.

Now comes a lurid tale from Kelseyville, formerly a country of hold-ups and "stage" events, to the effect that a local farmer has a grove of tropical nutmeg trees, plants far more tropical in their needs than bananas or cocoanut palms. In the West Indies, particularly in Jamaica, a few are grown, but the commercial supply comes mainly from India and adjacent tropical lands. The Kelseyville trees are said to have been ripe for the production of nutmegs but were damaged by fire. The trees are of two sexes, and if all happen to be of one sex, no nutmegs would be borne. For best results all but one should be female. In the tropics, under the stimulus of tropical rains and heat the sex cannot be determined before the seventh year. Our friend in the north probably has California nutmegs, on a par value with those from Connecticut.

The Horseradish Tree.

There is sparingly grown in Southern California a tree by the name of Moringa oleifera, sometimes called the horseradish tree from its edible root having a pungent taste akin to that of the horseradish. The young fruit is also edible and the seeds yield an oil of commercial value. The pods are nine-ribbed or corrugated and range from one foot to nearly two feet in length. The tree is native to tropical parts of Africa and Asia, though enduring light frosts, but they are small trees with deciduous foliage, so have not proven popular with local plant fanciers.

In Hula-hula Land.

In Hawaii are several species of kokia, trees that are closely related to the cotton plant. But then that family is the one to which all mallows belong and we grow some trees of that group in California. From a photograph these Hawaiian trees appear very closely related to the shrub mallow, Lavatera assurgentiflora, that grows along our beaches, especially at upper Santa Monica. Our common hibiscus also belong to the mallow family.

The Chinese Litchi.

Every year a few inquiries come in about the tree which bears the litchi nut, Nephelium litchi. Trees are offered for sale by a few dealers but it is folly to invest in them for they will never prove a success in California. They have likewise proved a failure in all parts of Florida. One horticultural authority who has traveled much says it is the only plant he knows that cannot be successfully grown outside its native country. Nowhere else in the world has it thriven. Other closely allied plants belonging to the same Natural Order, Sapindaceae, have been sold for litchi, notably the longan. Litchi would not fruit in California until at least a dozen years of age.

A Plea for Profitable Prices for Birds.

SUPPLY AND DEMAND. BY HENRY W. KRUCKEBERG.

WITH the advent of the fall State, district and county fairs, and the approach of the midwinter poultry shows, breeders have suddenly learned that there is a demand for good birds and a comparatively light supply. This condition has been brought about by (1) a shortage during the past year much below average production; (2) by the elimination of man power on many farms due to the war; (3) by the high cost of food and supplies; and (4) by the destruction of poultry farming in the war-stricken countries of Europe. With the return of normal conditions, coupled with the industrial changes wrought by the war, the producers of orchard and field crops, the growers of live stock and poultry, have all felt the advent of better prices and stronger markets. The result is that their purchasing power has been immeasurably increased; hence there is a marked development in all lines of rural industry. This is not only true of improvements on the land in the way of houses and equipment; but it is also strikingly true as to the betterment of all lines of pure-blooded live stock. Farmers who a few years ago shied at paying a good round price for birds, now come through with the money without the wink of an eyelash or the quiver of a lip. Realizing that they have received advanced prices for what they had to sell, they can well afford to recognize a remunerative price to a fellow-farmer or breeder possessing an article of quality that will enhance, under intelligent care, their own prosperity.

As has already been intimated, even a casual glance over the poultry industry convinces one that the available supply of good breeding stock in all the popular varieties is inadequate to meet the demand. Not only is this true of prevailing conditions on this Coast, but it applies to the country as a whole. It is quite pronounced of the American and Mediterranean breeds, but if one class is more in evidence than another it is the Mediterraneans, all varieties and breeds of which are recognized as producers of good crops of hen fruit. In these California (by reason of climatic conditions) is destined to be a chief source of supply. In the way of certain breeds she has already won her spurs in the big competitive classes of the leading eastern exhibitions, and in others, some of her strains of Leghorns will be heard from in the near future. The Farm and Tractor Section knows of flocks good enough to grace the palace gardens of a king, or any coop in any show alley in the United States or Canada. Now possessing economic and exhibition qualities, and facing a market that will "take" all we have to offer, there is no occasion to sell at pre-war prices; indeed, it is the pivotal moment for the poultry breeder to realize a price that will yield a remunerative return on his labor and investment. Faint heart ne'er won fair lady, neither will it get business at a profit-making figure. If stock has quality, demand what it is worth. That's business. Have no fear for buyers—there are plenty of them and good salesmanship will find out where they are.

It is one thing to grow good stuff, but quite another thing to cash it in at a good margin of profit. Somehow or other the two faculties do not always travel together. There are many poultrymen who produce excellent birds, but who are not rated high in the commercial reports nor have a good banking credit. In many instances this is deplorable, because they are worthy and aiming always to observe the square deal in all transactions. The weakness of these people is the want of faith in their own stock—an attitude that is inimical to asking a good price. In this connection there are instances where experienced poultrymen have "picked up" good birds from responsible breeders at what they supposed a good price, only to "turn them over" for four times as much money. Exhibition, foundation, breeding and so-called "utility" stock possess a present value that every breeder should recognize and take advantage of just at this time. Obviously there will come a time when the destroyed poultry industry of the war-stricken areas of Europe will be rehabilitated; when the supply in this country and in Canada will again assume normal proportions; when this happens prices will govern accordingly. This will not, however, happen for some time to come; hence the admonition to maintain good prices for stock and bend all effort in improving methods of salesmanship and the exploitation of the poultry business along lines that stand for prosperity, the outdoor life and a comfortable living.

Cooping and Shipping Birds.

[illegible] plaint on the part of breeders regarding express service. For one cause or another breeding and exhibition stock does not always reach points of destination on schedule time; this causes complaint on the part of buyers and is often injurious to the birds. It is advisable to consult the express service when about to make shipments and learn conditions over the route to be used. In this way, delays can often be avoided. But trouble does not always rest with the transportation companies; condition of the birds at time of shipment, cooping and feeding instructions are also matters that must be properly provided for. In the first place only robust specimens should be transported; in the second place the coops should be well constructed of light material, affording good ventilation and be of sufficient size to allow the bird free action without brushing and bruising its feathers; and third, care while en route to its destination.

The usual mistake of the novice consists in using coops and boxes of insufficient size, and also too heavy in construction. Show-room specimens and choice breeding birds are mostly shipped in light wooden coops, closed all around except at the top, which is slatted. Some are built on a wooden frame covered with canvas all around, with wooden bottoms and slatted tops and sides. Coops of either pattern can often be secured at the supply-houses in "knockdown" form, which in most cases is economical. They should be of sufficient size to allow the bird or birds to stand up freely and to pass each other with convenience. Old hands at the show game send their best specimens one to a coop. If the birds are to be shipped only a short distance, this is about all that is necessary, with the precaution to notify the consignee about the time they are to arrive; but if the journey is to consume the better portion of a day, nail a tin cup in one corner for water with a little grain food in the bottom calculated to cover the journey. If, however, the birds are to travel for several days, tie to the crate or coop a small bag of mixed grain with a tag attached asking the express messenger to feed each day, and to see that the supply of fresh water does not fail. In this way birds are shipped with safety. Chopped hay or straw, or even wood shavings, can be used in the bottoms of coops. Before shipping consult the express companies as to rates and classifications, as new rulings are constantly being made. If coops are to be returned by the purchaser, he should be so informed. When expressing to shows it is best to pay the rates covering the going of the birds as well as their return.

Exhibiting Disqualified Birds.

Of the three reasons for a ghoul name given by a certain ancient philosopher, there is but one that appeals in discussing disqualifications, viz., the person who does that which does him no good. In the division of poultry at the late Live Stock Show [illegible] ing he discards the unfit from consideration, thus lessening his labors in making the final awards. The disqualified specimen may possess merit; the blemish may be slight and subject to removal; or it may be permanent but unnoticed by the exhibitor—all of which, as the lawyers say, is irrelevant to the case at bar. The fact remains that the exhibitor has literally thrown away the entry fee and diminished the prestige of his stock and negatived its selling possibilities. For this sort of thing there is no excuse in high heaven, nor on the earth below, nor in the depth of the sea.

With the advent of the larger midwinter poultry shows, the entry fee this season will be from $2 to $5 per single bird; in the leading fixtures in California it will average $2. Viewing the matter from a monetary and professional point of view, it is the height of damphoolishness to spend this money on disqualified specimens. Better "blow it in" on a "Jim Crow picture show," or buy a copy of a thriller like "Crack Skull Bob, the Cock Bird of the Desert; or the Mystery of the Seven Decapitated Hens." Not that this charming and idyllic piece of "English as she is writ" will entitle you to membership in the Academy of Feathered Savants, the Gallinaceous Society of Chicken Immortals, nor the Association of Philosophic Roosters that Can't Crow; but it may prove more entertaining than a careful perusal of the Standard of Perfection. Besides it costs only 10 cents, thereby leaving a neat little balance of $1.90 on the entry fee, which might be invested in a box of Dr. Jung's Fowl's pink pills to make barren pullets lay.

Just Listen to This.

Boston, and for that matter New England generally, has always been partial to the larger breeds of poultry, and to brown-shelled eggs. There the Plymouth Rocks and Wyandottes, the Light Brahmas and Rhode Island Reds are favorite breeds. Allowing for this, it is fair to assume that if we are to have a race of super-hens, it is fitting that the New England breeders should present them, and that her market poultrymen should blaze the way for their advent to the farms of America and into the atmosphere of the market place. In a late address by Alton H. Briggs of Boston, president of the National Poultry, Egg and Butter Association, at the thirteenth national convention of that organization, said a new type of super-hen is being bred, and in the near future would reach the public, thus doing much to lower the cost of living. The claim is made for the new breed that it produces much larger eggs than those of our present sorts of domesticated fowl, and that the size of the breed is also rather giant in character. The assertion that they will cost no more to maintain, however, must be taken with [illegible]

112 HENS 1800 EGGS

Mrs. Harper Writes: "I Wouldn't Be Without "TWO for ONE" for the World; My 112 Hens Layed 1800 Eggs in 1 Month."

Poultry raisers who have not given some thought to increasing their egg production this fall and winter are making a big mistake. Present indications are, the price of eggs will be sky high, and if the owners of laying hens do not make every effort to profit by these conditions they will regret it later, particularly when they hear of the large profits being made by their next-door neighbor. If there ever was a time when a little extra attention should be given to the poultry yard, now is the time. Do not delay. A few pennies spent wisely today will bring you back dollars tomorrow.

World's Greatest Egg Producer

"TWO for ONE" is the marvel of all egg tonics. It is the most remarkable producer of eggs ever known to the poultry world. "TWO for ONE" is making records every day in egg production that were never before believed possible. Flock owners all over the country are amazed at the results. The most experienced poultry experts say they have never seen the like of it.

"TWO for ONE" is not a mere food. It is an egg tonic in the truest sense of the term—a scientific preparation in concentrated tablet form—the result of scientific research and experiment. Every factor entering into the matter of egg production was scientifically studied.

As a result you have in "TWO for ONE" a tonic that conditions the hen for the utmost in laying capacity—that builds muscle [illegible] that stimulates active functioning of the hen's reproductive organs that [illegible] 100 per cent. hatchings—that makes the laggard lay and increases the production of active layers. A tonic that gets more eggs for you, winter and summer, than you ever thought possible.

KEEP DISEASE FROM THE POULTRY FLOCK.

Disease is difficult to control among flocks of poultry because fowls are housed together in relatively large numbers and when disease develops the comparatively low value of each bird does not justify special care and attention for each individual hen. Hence, it is essential to protect the flock against the entrance of disease. Unless maintained in a healthy condition chicks will not grow properly while mature fowls will rapidly lose their vigor and vitality and become unproductive and unprofitable. Prevention against disease is simple; attempt to cure a bird after it becomes sick is difficult.

Gapes, roup, chicken pox, and scaly leg are listed as the "big four" among poultry diseases by United States Department of Agriculture experts, who also offer advice as to how to deal with them. Annually these pestilences invade flocks and effect heavy mortality Gapes is the "ker-choo" or sneeze diseases of chickens, which always may be recognized by the fact that it incites the fowls to continuous coughing and generally affects young chicks and young turkeys in the first few weeks of their lives. Gapes is caused by a little worm which attaches itself to the inside of the windpipe, where it multiplies and ultimately obstructs the passage so that breathing is made difficult and ultimately prohibited to the extent that the bird chokes and dies. The female worm, while residing in the windpipe of the fowl, produces many eggs which are distributed widely as the chicks sneeze, or are swallowed and scattered about through the intestinal tract. The young worms which hatch from these eggs live in the earth for a long time and ultimately are picked up and swallowed by young chicks, thereby completing the cycle of the disease.

Of course, the best control is to keep the chicks on fresh clean soil at all times. If they develop the disease, move them immediately to fresh pasture where the grass is plentiful. Spread lime heavily over infested areas and plow expeditiously in order to destroy any worms present. Expert "lariat work," a reminder of the western range variety, is necessary to rid the chicks' gullet of these worms. This is accomplished by taking a long hair from a horse's tail, twisting the two ends together to form a loop and inserting it down the chick's windpipe about one inch, giving it two or three turns and then withdrawing it with the struggling worms which it encircles. This should be repeated until all the invaders are captured and destroyed by scalding or burning.

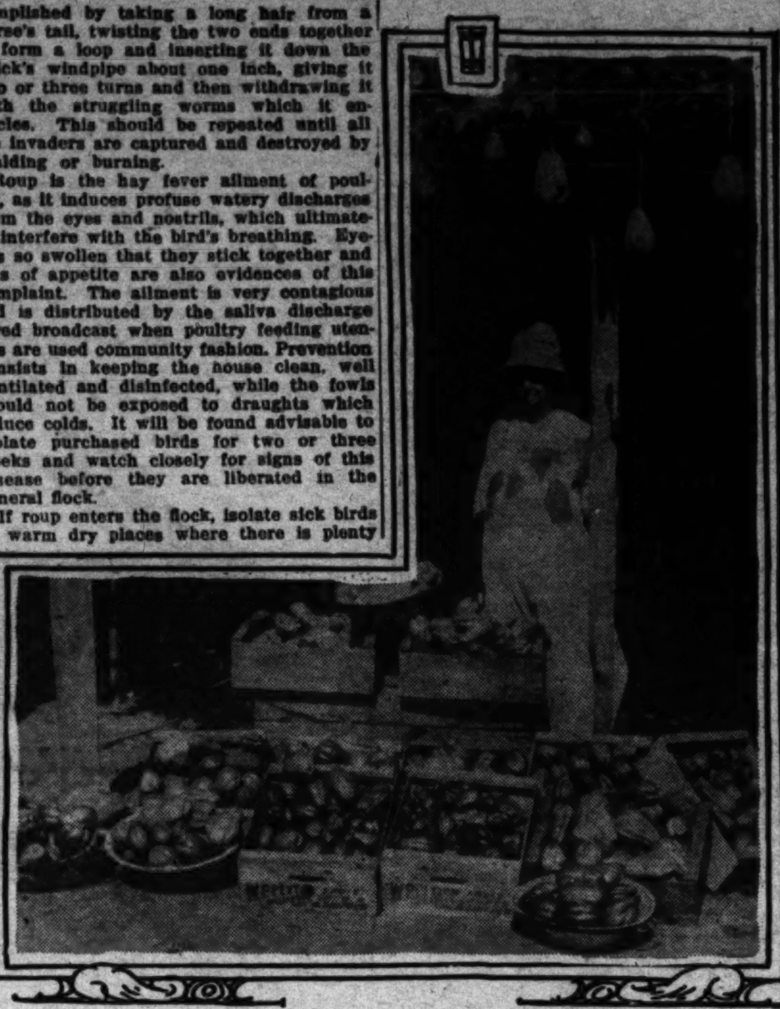
Roup is the hay fever ailment of poultry, as it induces profuse watery discharges from the eyes and nostrils, which ultimately interfere with the bird's breathing. Eyelids so swollen that they stick together and loss of appetite are also evidences of this complaint. The ailment is very contagious and is distributed by the saliva discharge tered broadcast when poultry feeding utensils are used community fashion. Prevention consists in keeping the house clean, well ventilated and disinfected, while the fowls should not be exposed to draughts which induce colds. It will be found advisable to isolate purchased birds for two or three weeks and watch closely for signs of this disease before they are liberated in the general flock.

If roup enters the flock, isolate sick birds in warm dry places where there is plenty of fresh air and no draughts. Wash the eyes and mouth of each bird with warm salt water and massage the nostrils and the eyelids in order to lessen the watery discharge accumulated there. Then wash or dip the bird's head in a solution composed of two heaping teaspoons of boracic acid or a half teaspoon of permanganate of potash in one pint of water, repeating this treatment two or three times daily. A tablespoon of peroxide of hydrogen, mixed with two tablespoons of water, and injected into the bird's nostrils with a small oil can or medicine dropper, is very beneficial. Thereafter, grease the fowl's head with camphorated oil or carbolated vaseline. Keep a small quantity of permanganate of potash in the drinking water so as to prevent spread of roup. In severe cases it is best to kill the birds at once, as seldom, if ever, can the disease be fully and permanently cured.

Chicken pox or "sore head," another contagious poultry disease, is characteristerized by white festers which develop into brown spots or crusts on the comb, eyelids and upon the beak and nostrils. In severe cases, these sores increase to the extent that the bird occasionally is unable to open its eyes and beak, and, if neglected, will die. Keep all roosting quarters clean, dry and thoroughly disinfected. During the summer, when chicken pox is most common, mix three pounds of powdered sulphur with each 100 pounds of dry mash, giving it freely to the birds.

Treatment for sick birds consists of applying a liberal quantity of carbolated vaseline, which causes the patches or crusts to drop off, whereupon the sores underneath should be painted with tincture of iodine or a 5 per cent. solution of carbolic acid. Five pounds of fine powdered sulphur mixed with each 100 pounds of dry mash is also efficient in effecting a cure. When the disease develops in any flock, immediately spray the houses and coops thoroughly with some wood preservative or coal-tar disinfectant and scald the drinking fountains and feeding dishes with boiling water, repeating these control measures every third day thereafter until the sickness is dissipated.

Scaly leg, caused by a mite which burrows beneath the scales and forms a yellowish, powdery substance, which inflates the scales, is another contagious disease. It spreads slowly. To prevent its entrance to the flock, the roosting and dropping boards and all cracks and crevices should be sprayed thoroughly at regular intervals to keep them free from mites. Examine the birds' shanks occasionally, and if any signs of scaly legs appear, wash the birds' legs with soap and warm water to remove the loose scales, and then rub thoroughly with a half-and-half mixture of kerosene and linseed oil, or fill a can with a mixture, and after the birds have gone to roost at night dip each birds' legs into the solution for about a minute. Repeat the treatment every three or four days until the scales are removed. Oil of caraway, used in the same manner, is also very effective.



A Day's Harvest of Chayotes in a Los Angeles Back Yard.

HOW MILK IS USED.

Estimates made by the United States Department of Agriculture show how the 87,905,000,000 pounds of milk produced in the United States annually are utilized. Forty-four and one-half per cent. is used as fresh milk for human food purposes, while 36 per cent. of the gross supply is converted into butter, and 4.5 per cent. is made into cheese; another 4.5 per cent. is transformed into canned milk, 4 per cent. is used in ice cream making, 4 per cent. is used in feeding calves and hogs on the farms of origin, and 2.5 per cent. is lost in shrinkage and other waste of the dairying industry.

Mealy bugs have been discovered on celery plants in Los Angeles county, and steps have been taken to eradicate them.

CHAYOTE PRODUCTION GREATLY INCREASING.

One plant immigrant which has not disappointed those who have pinned their faith in it is the chayote, probably the heaviest producing vine yet introduced into California. The chayote is also called the mirliton, vegetable pear, and Mexican summer squash. But it tastes fully as good under one name as another. Hundreds of boxes of chayotes are now appearing in the markets of Southern California each day, as the harvest from backyard vines is at its height.

A leading seedsman says that the vine in its first year will produce more than a hundred fruits and in its second year, with a spread of over fifty feet under favorable conditions, will produce more than a thousand chayotes. Think of this, and worry less about the elevated charge for subsistence, he advises.

The vegetables are wholesome, nutritious and do not pall on one as do some other of the Mexican importations. The culture of the chayote has been encouraged in the British East Indies, where so many of the natives are afflicted with that tired feeling, due to hook worm or other diseases. The vine responds so readily to a little care and irrigation that it will produce enough vegetable matter to keep the native without much exertion on his part.

Those who want to raise chayotes should go to the market and buy a few. Save the largest and place in the potato bin until it sprouts from the large end. Then plant where you want it to grow, up against a fence or trellis, or shed. Place it only two-thirds in the ground, leaving the small end exposed. If it is killed by frost a new shoot will soon appear. In the spring the vine will take hold with vigor and proceed to cover the fence with verdure, and in September the small white flower appears. Harvest from October to March.

Chayotes may be prepared in a number of ways, peeled and boiled, like summer squash; fried like potatoes, made into soup baked in cream, eaten a la Lyonnaise, and made into excellent salad.

HOG IS GREAT LABOR SAVER ON THE FARM.

The hog takes care of more waste and does more work on the farm in proportion to the return for his carcass than any other animal, provided he is given the chance. When it comes to working up odds and ends about the farm the hog is supreme.

Hogs cut their own hay, gather their own grain, dig the roots that they require, and turn a portion of the feed refused by other animals into pork. They convert the table-waste and make spare ribs and lard of it. Hogs make more gain in weight on a given quantity of grain than any other meat-producing animal, and dress out a larger percentage of useful food products than any other. The hog is the farmers' best friend, a collector of waste and a dependable source of income when income is most needed.

FARM AND TRACTOR SECTION

SUNDAY MORNING, NOVEMBER 9, 1919.

FARM AND TRACTOR SECTION.

Devoted to the multiform agricultural interests of the great Southwest and issued every week with the world's biggest Sunday newspaper.

EDITED BY HAROLD M. FINLEY.

Communications from practical farmers, ranchers, stock raisers, poultrymen, gardeners and others engaged either in a large or small way in the vital work of food production are gladly received.

Good clear photographs of interesting farm and garden activities are always welcomed. The Los Angeles Times Farm and Tractor Section is the only farm journal in the west printing illustrations in the incomparable rotogravure process.

Let the Farmer Do It.

RIGHT now, while the capitalist and the workman in the cities are engaged in a warm debate over whether the work day shall be of eight hours or six hours duration, the farmer is insistently called upon to increase production in order that the cost of living may be forced down and these city workmen may not have to strike.

In other words, the farmer is asked to increase his efficiency from around 100 incrtase his efficiency from around 100 per cent. to that and something more, and get his wife and children back into the field while the union laborite in the city idles on strike to decrease his working hours, and cut down his efficiency from 50 to 40 per cent.

The American farmer is not as big a fool as some of his city brothers believe he is. Just pay for long hours of toil is the farmer's due. While farm laborers are demanding more and more wages for a still shorter workday; insisting on working in the shade during the day and being entertained by a cabaret at night, while the boss tries to make up the loss of work hours by toiling ovxertime, the six-hours-a-day advocate in the city is crying out against the high cost of foods!

The way to lower food costs as well as costs of all commodities lies in increased production. But not until an increased number of city dwellers go out into the open fields to work with a will as they did years ago, with less regard for the clock when the sun begins to slant, and not until the price of what the farmer uses goes down as the result of greater production in the industrial centers, leading to general price declines, is the cost of foods likely to be lowered.

The farmer is expected to not only maintain his war production, but increase it. He worked and sacrificed to help win the war but is given poor encouragement for a continuance of this strain by the spectacle of men quitting eight hours of work at unprecedented pay to demand still more pay and less work.

Those Red Apples.

BENEFIT to both producer and consumer in Southern California would result if the producers of some of our popular crops would seek the local market and satisfy it while reaching out for the trade of far Eastern centers. Especially is this true in the case of staples which are being brought a thousand miles or more to supply the local demand, but which are grown right in the territory of Los Angeles.

There has always been a brisk demand for apples in Southern California, with the local supply not a fraction of the fruit required. Now that the extensive apple orchards in the Yucaipa district are bearing, it is discovered that the greater part of the fruit is shipped out of the southern part of the State, while cars of apples from the northwest continue to roll into Los Angeles. The Yucaipa apple is the peer of any, and it should be diverted first to the Los Angeles market, where, if it were properly introduced and pushed, it would assuredly be in great demand.

Perhaps the men interested in building up freight-rate sheets are responsible for this state of affairs. It is a wasteful system, whatever its origin. Yucaipa Valley is within the truck hauling radius of Los Angeles, whereas the market for which the producers of the red apples are reaching is a truck haul plus a transcontinental [illegible] away. If the whole Southland had had a chance at this fine fruit from its "York State" valley, it would be time to go after the Eastern trade, but the Yucaipa producers have a big roomy market to develop right at their door.

Let's have a taste here at home!

Count on the Farmer.

THE government of the United States can count on the farmers in the fight against radicals seeking to undermine the political and economic security of the nation. This was assured unanimously by members of the thirty-ninth Farmers' National Congress, meeting at Hagerstown, Md. The farmers pledged their steadfast support of the government in the strict enforcement of law and order and the combatting of elements that would vitiate the fundamental principles of our government.

As agriculture constitutes the backbone of America, so the farmers of the United States make up the bulwark of its institutions. Conservatism rules among those who feed this and other nations. No one holds the flag more dear than the farmer, and no one would as quickly punish its desecration. In the present crisis wherein certain branches of organized labor, under the sway of imported radicalism, seek to dominate all classes and conditions of men in this country, the farmer may be depended upon to adhere to the principles of right and justice to all. And he would be the first to decree expulsion from this country of all but unadulterated Americans.

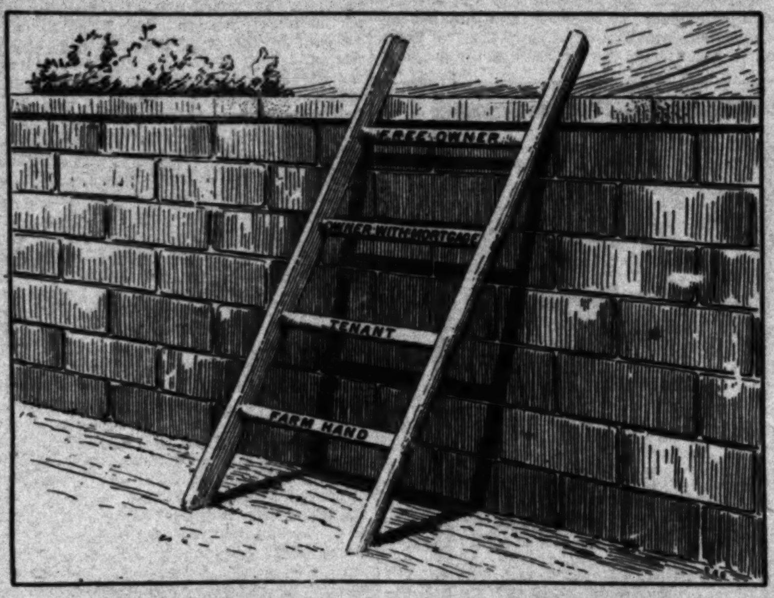
WAR-TIME DAIRY EXPORTS.

During 1914 the United States exported only 700,000,000 pounds of milk in the form of butter and cheese and no condensed milk. The war worked wonders, however, in developing our foreign trade because of the curtailment in domestic supplies of the Allies and importations from prewar sources. During 1919 the United States shipped abroad 620,000,000 pounds of milk in the form of butter, 160,000,000 pounds of milk in the form of cheese, and 1,770,000,000 pounds of milk as condensed milk, a total of 2,550,000,000 pounds of milk as dairy products used for foreign shipment. For comparison's sake these amounts have all been reduced to pounds of milk. Previously such exports were generally expressed in pounds of butter or cheese and cans of condensed milk. Indicative of the fact that the United States did not supply foreign countries with all the dairy products it produced during the war, the factory production of butter during 1918 amounted to 793,289,301 pounds, while the output of cheese was 352,631,615 pounds, and the condensed milk total amounted to 1,675,477,360, enough of these dairy products being kept in the United States to provide for the domestic [illegible]

CENSUS MEN TO QUESTION THE FARMERS ON MANY SUBJECTS.

WHEN the great nose-counting of the 1920 Federal census gets in full swing the people of the United States will be surprised by the number of questions other than those relating to family statistics that will be asked them. Uncle Sam proposes to assemble a lot of information he never dreamed of getting before when he starts the census machinery in motion this time. And the farmers in particular are likely to be astonished at the number and kinds of questions put to them by the enumerators.

Government officials say frankly that they anticipate some misunderstanding upon the part of agriculturists as to their purposes and rights in making some of the inquiries that will be made in the rural sections. For this reason and in order to create a better opportunity for acquainting the farmers with the real idea back of the forthcoming census, the country enumeration throughout the country will be taken in January instead of in April as originally planned. This was decided upon at the instance of the Department of Agriculture, which believed that the farmers would be less busy and have more time to listen and to talk in January than in the Spring.



Many Farmers Climb All the Rounds of the Ladder.

Uncle Sam's census enumerators will attempt in January to assemble facts and figures which the United States Department of Agriculture can use to advantage in its efforts to encourage and promote farm ownership. They want to know, among other things, just what proportion of agriculturists have started at the bottom and by what steps they have achieved success.

As to the questions that will be asked, there is no doubt that they will yield a mass of statistical and general information that will be new and of value. Every new point covered, say the census officials, will provide the Department of Agriculture with facts and figures that are needed in working out its various plans for aiding American agricultural progress. Some of the queries, it is said, may sound like prying into the personal affairs of individuals, but they all have a useful purpose in view. There are a lot of things the government wants to know and needs to know in order to be able intelligently to work out some of the problems affecting agricultural advancement and which could never be ascertained in any other way.

The agricultural census statistics are divided into facts concerning farm tenure; farm acreage; farm encumbrances; farm values; farm expenses; uses of the land in 1919; drainage; crops produced in 1919; live stock maintained, including an enumeration of the various numbers of each class and grade on every farm; farm facilities, such as tractors, automobiles, trucks, and other farm conveniences; cooperative marketing; purebred animals maintained; fruits, nuts and forest products.

SOME OF THE QUESTIONS.

Among the questions the farmer will be called on to answer are the following:

How many years, if any, did you work on a farm for wages?

How many years have you been, or were you a tenant?

How many years have you farmed as an owner? [illegible]

"Do you rent from others part, but not all, of this farm?"

"Do you rent from others all of this farm?"

"If you rent all of this farm, what do you pay as rent?"

"If you own all or part of this farm, was there any mortgage debt or other encumbrance on the land so owned on January 1, 1920?"

"What was the total amount of debt or encumbrance on land on this farm owned by you January 1, 1920?"

Other new questions in the coming census involve the amount of land from which no crop was harvested this year because of crop failure; crop land lying idle or fallow in 1919; pasture land in each farm. The farmer is also requested to give the total value of his farm January 1, 1920, as well as the value of all buildings on the farm and the value of implements and machinery belonging to the farm. If any encumbrances exist against the property, he is asked to specify the total amount of debt on the land on the day the census is taken, and the rate of interest he pays on this debt.

Under the head of farm expenses, each farmer is asked to state the amount expended in 1919 for hay, grain, mill feed and other products raised on the farm which he used for feed for domestic animals and poultry; the amounts of cash expended for manure and fertilizer and for farm labor, exclusive of housework. He also is to give the estimated value of the house rent and board furnished farm laborers in 1919 in addition to the cash wages.

The government wants to know who have tractors, automobiles, motor trucks and other up-to-date equipment. Information is also requested as to the farmer's activity in cooperative producing and marketing associations.

The average farmer is going to wonder and some of them will doubtless ask what the blank blank business it is of the government's how much money they owe on their lands. The Department of Agriculture explains that two of the things to which it has been giving deep study in recent years are farm tenancy and rural credits, and that such information will be valuable in working out the various problems in this connection.

The past three censuses have shown an increase in the number of tenants. Alarmists have felt—and said—that the country is going to the bow-wows by the landlord route. The Department of Agriculture, however, looked into the matter as well as it was able, and refused to be alarmed. Where it was able to make surveys it discovered that while the number of tenants 25 years old was greater in 1910 than in 1900 or 1890, the number of tenants 45 years old was considerably smaller in 1910 than in 1900 or 1890.

The inference is that tenancy is a step toward ownership, that the young fellow who becomes a tenant farmer when he marries, say, is likely to be a farm owner before his first child is grown—the farm paid for and the money that used to go to pay off the mortgage available for sending the children to college.

Now, to the Department of Agriculture, that looks like a thoroughly normal, healthy and beneficial process. To just the extent that tenancy leads to farm ownership, it is a good thing for the country and for the individual, the department holds.

FULL ANSWERS ESSENTIAL.

But it has not been possible to get a complete, nation-wide survey of the situation. The forthcoming census offers the opportunity for doing that. If every farmer will answer the enumerator's questions fully and fairly, the Department of Agriculture says, it will have the data from which to analyze the situation accurately and to determine what things can be done to best advantage to help the tenant in his aspiration to become a farm owner.

One of the directions that aid may take, it is believed, is encouragement of rural credits—finding all of the ways possible of helping the young farmer to get the money that he may need to borrow. It is necessary, therefore, to know what proportion of farmers who advance from tenants to owners have to borrow money to make the change, and how much, in proportion to total value of the farms bought, they have to borrow.

The road toward ownership does not necessarily start with tenancy, [illegible]

COMPETITIVE EGG-LAYING.

The enterprising poultrymen of Santa Cruz, not to be outdone by their brethren within the realm of web and feathers, have inaugurated an egg-laying contest of their own, the same to be put in operation November 15. Each competitor is supposed to enter ten pullets. These will be trapnested and fed on a specially prepared ration, under the direction of the University of California agricultural department. The cost for entering and upkeep of the birds during the contest is $2. The result of this contest will be watched with more than local interest. The White Leghorn being dominant in that section, the competition will be largely between different flocks and strains of this popular breed and variety.

DOWN-TO-DATE REPORTS FROM TIMES CORRESPONDENTS.

BRYN MAWR.—The agricultural and horticultural activities of the residents of Grand Terrace, a bench of land between this place and Riverside, have become so varied that they have attracted attention of the farm centers of the county bureau. The Grand Terrace folk believe in diversified farming; they are not single crop farmers. They grow everything from oranges to onions and have the reputation for growing the best. The Grand Terrace country is fine for peaches, judging from the reports this year, for the crop was valued at close to $50,000. Some of the growers have their fruit contracted for by canneries years in advance. W. B. Oliver, big peach grower, says that they have discovered that it pays only to grow large peaches. We thin out the crop three to four times in a good year," he said. "The white peaches are also no good for the red centers make a streaked syrup that spoils their market value." Many of the Grand Terrace ranchers have large flocks of hens, one of them having about 6000 White Leghorns, with each hen making the owner close to $1 a year. Many are also growing onions between the rows of young fruit trees and have realized as high as 300 sacks to the acre. The orange groves pay well, but in a year when the crop is light other crops make up the loss.

CITRUS SEASON RECORD.

POMONA.—Setting a new record in the twenty-six years of its history, the San Antonio Fruit Exchange, which is the marketing center for practically all of the citrus fruit grown in the Pomona Valley, including the Pomona, Claremont, North Pomona and Walnut districts, received a grand total of $5,913,740 for the 3972 cars of oranges and lemons shipped out during the past year. The figures form the center of interest in the annual report of R. L. Knox, secretary and manager of the exchange. This report is now being read at the various annual meetings being held at the packing-houses of the valley. Not only does the report show a record season for the past year but it predicts another great year for the coming season.

SEASON IS CLOSING.

REDLANDS.—J. H. Strait, manager of the Redlands Fruit Products Company, says that the company will soon close its seasons run on orange and lemon culls. After that t[illegible] no more fruit can be secured until [illegible] [illegible]ary when the navel oranges [illegible] come in. It has been a fine season and the company has shipped many carloads of candied and pickled orange and lemon peel. This peel is being used extensively by large confectioners in the East and the demand for it is growing steadily. The company has had some trouble with the marmalades and jams this year, believed to be due to the poor quality of the sugar. Some of it failed to keep but the loss has not been heavy. The company has also shipped a number of carloads of jam and marmalades, practically all made from fruit that could not be shipped and that would have been dumped in the "wash" to rot a few years ago. During the height of the navel season there is a certain amount of the fruit that the company can not take care of yet, but the plant is growing steadily and it is believed that orders will soon be heavy enough so that all the cull oranges can be used. There has been a big demand from England this year for marmalade and that has taken practically all the pack not sold in this country.

TULARE FARM BUREAU

WILL FIGHT WEEVIL.

PHOENIX (Ariz.)—The Department of Agriculture has given the Salt River Valley a special expert on boll weevil, boll worm and other cotton pests. He is Torbet Slack, a graduate of the boll weevil laboratories at Tallula, La., where there has been a degree of success in killing the weevil by means of a spray of calcium arsenate. He will work in co-operation with State Entomologist D. C. Mote, inspecting all cotton offered under suspicion of harboring insects. Just now, the State Horticultural Department has a force of men working in the foothills of the Catalins and other mountains near Tucson, pulling up and burning all wild cotton found. This wild cotton has been found infested with a species of weevil, though it has been known only lately that the insect may be washed down to fields that lately have been planted to high-grade cotton in the nearby Santa Cruz Valley. Thus far in the Salt River Valley about the only trouble has been with a blight that usually is found in fields that have been overcropped and that should for a time be turned back to alfalfa.

RABBIT BREEDERS MEET.

SAN DIEGO.—At a recent meeting held at the San Diego Chamber of Commerce, the rabbit growers of San Diego county took the first step toward organizing a co-operative association designed to be of assistance to growers in marketing their products. Rabbit growers of San Diego have for more than a year now experienced the advantages of organization through their rabbit club, of which W. E. Mellinger is president. In this way not only the great strength of concerted effort has been made clear, but also the need for exerting it to improve many existing conditions. Both for the good of the consumer and the producer, the present system of distribution has been found inadequate, and a co-operative association similar to the Poultry Producers' Association seems the so[illegible]. A committee of three was appointed at the meeting to complete the work of preliminary organization. A. B. Bowman, Geo. Carns, and Richard DeBarrow will confer with the proper authorities, and will present a plan for properly launching the new association. Their report will be given at a meeting to be called soon.

CITRUS BLAST IN NORTH.

Mr. Harry S. Smith, in charge of the office of the Pest Control, State Department of Agriculture, has been going over the "citrus blast" situation in Northern California with Dr. H. S. Fawcett of the Citrus Experiment Station. It is now understood that the University of California will undertake studies on the control of this disease, while the Department of Agriculture will concern itself with prevention of further spread. SHOW A SUCCESS.

TULARE.—The success of the recent Tulare County Live-stock and Agricultural Show held at this place has pleased the people of this region to the extent that one and all are hoping that a still larger show may be held next year. The pure-bred stock and poultry exhibits were particularly noteworthy and, with the growth of these industries in Tulare county, it is believed that the displays in these lines can be greatly expanded. Of the agricultural displays that of the Tulare Farm Bureau was unusually complete and interesting, expressing what this organization is doing for Tulare county agriculture.

WHO GETS THE PROFITS IN BEEF PRODUCTION?

BY ALBERT LINDLEY,
Chairman Farm Owners' and Operators' Association.

The investigators sent out by the Farm Owners' and Operators' Association, from the Stockton headquarters, turned from potatoes and onions to an inquiry into the high price of beef. They were instructed to make minute inquiry into the situation, so as to be prepared to lay the plain and indisputable facts before the public. Their previous inquiries had shown that potatoes for which the farmer received $1.91 per hundred reached the consumer at prices ranging from $4.16 to $4.40; and that onions sold by the farmer at $1.51 per hundredweight were sold to consumers all the way from $3 to $3.30 in advance.

And as the potatoes and onions were traced from their initial source to the ultimate consumer, so the steer was followed from the farm and range until its meat was served to the consumer.

The farmer received 9 cents a pound for beef for which the consumer paid as high as $1.60 a pound, an advance of 1678 per cent. That sounds like a startling statement, but it is proven by the figures carefully gathered and assembled and which follow.

The farmer sold his No. 1 steer, weighing 1000 pounds on foot, to the wholesaler at 9 cents a pound, or $90. The wholesaler killed and dressed the animal and sold the dressed meat to the retail butcher at 16⅛ cents a pound, save for the trimmings, which brought him as follows: liver, 9 cents; heart, 12 cents; tongue, 15 cents; tripe, 10 cents; brains, 15 cents; and then through other sources of marketing he sold the hoofs, horns and bone at 1 cent a pound. The tallow brought him 6 cents and the hide 30 cents a pound. This brought the retailer approximately $121.88, not counting other by-products and offal which sold at their varying commercial values. Speaking in totals the wholesaler received an advance of $31.88 over the $90 he paid the farmer.

The meat for which the farmer received 9 cents a pound was distributed to the consumer at the following prices per pound: porterhouse, 38 cents; sirloin, 29 cents; rib roast, 34 cents; round steak, 28 cents; pot roast, chuck steak and stew, 20 cents; liver, 20 cents; heart, 15 cents; tongue, 15 cents; tripe, 15 cents; brains, 25 cents; suet, 15 cents—advancing the price to $182.77, or an increase of 103 per cent. over the $90 paid the farmer.

In view of the fact that in many instances the wholesaler also is the retailer, he is able to thereby receive the benefit of the 103 per cent. increase.

Considering the fifty-five beeves that are slaughtered daily in a city of about 40,000 population, this 103 per cent. advance in price over that paid to the farmer and the price paid by the consumer means $5000 gross profit on the daily turnover, while the farmer is required to wait three years for his small profit; and the dealer is able to turn over his money several hundred times in the same period of time. It should be kept in mind that it requires three years to bring a steer to a marketable age and condition.

In addition to the fixed charges against the raising of the beef, the farmer's risk from disease in his herd, shortage of feed and poor markets must be taken into account. His land investment, his labor and his losses of calves must be reckoned with just as is the various items of fixed expense and hazards undertaken by other business men. With a gross price of but $90 for his steer, even a slight estimate of the costs of production will bring his net return down to a small margin.

The farmer himself is brought into contact with high prices just as soon as he sells the steer. Consider the hide of the steer. It weighs about sixty pounds and he parts with it at 9 cents a pound, but when he goes to buy leather with which to repair his harness he must pay 95 cents a pound. This represents an increase of 956 per cent. Sole leather made from this hide costs 85 cents a pound.

When paying for his beef in moderate-priced restaurants, the consumer does so at the rate of $1.23½ a pound for porterhouse steak, or an advance of 1272 per cent. For rib roast he pays at the rate of $1.60 a pound, or an advance of 1678 per cent. The former rib steak now costs at the rate of $1.24 a pound, or an advance of 1278 per cent. over the 9 cents a pound paid the farmer after he had spent three years in bringing the steer to a marketable size, weight and condition.

Such net profit as the farmer may secure (and it is small) is the result of considerable initial investment in land, continuous labor, much risk and an uncertain market in the end. But from the time he sells the steer the meat is moved to the consumer through established channels, at fixed prices and carefully calculated profits. The profits by the dealers are generally secured within forty-eight hours, and the repetition of the investment and its rapid turnover exceeds anything that the farmer in his slow and steady process of production could devise.

No attempt has been made here to fix the point of the reasonable profit, the investigators' figures serving to absolve the farmer from the charge of profiteering. What he receives and what the consumer pays, told in figures, ought to remove any misunderstanding between the two touching the mutual problems they confront in this modern day.

Gillette E. Gordon of the Los Angeles County Farm Bureau is one of the judges of the stock show of the Arizona State Fair at Phoenix this year. Mr. Gordon has judged in various divisions of the stock departments of a number of 1919 shows, including those of the San Diego Farm Bureau, Tulare County Agricultural and Livestock Fair, the Antelope Valley Fair at Lancaster and the Southern California Fair at Riverside. As reported in last week's Farm and Tractor Section, F. H. Scribner, Farm Bureau dairy cattle expert, has been engaged to judge dairy animals at the Royal Live-stock Show at Spokane, Wash., this month.

FARM BUREAU MILK TESTING EXHIBITION.

Showing how it is possible for a dairyman to be fooled in placing too much dependence on the mere fact that a cow is registered, the Los Angeles County Farm Bureau conducted a milk test exhibit at the Live Stock Show, in which the performance of five cows for a year was shown, a grade Jersey making more profit for her owner than a registered Holstein.

Five cows were shown with their records for ten or eleven month lactation periods. Cow No. 490, grade Jersey, produced 8730 pounds of milk; the value of her produce was $462 in a year, the feed cost $180, and the profit was $282. Cow No. 337, a grade Guernsey, produced 4665 pounds of milk, 203 pounds of butter fat, valued at $203.50. Her feed cost the same as the others, and the profit was but $23.50. Cow No. 639, a registered Holstein, showed a profit of $220 in a year.

"Cull out the scrub cow or you will go out of the dairy business," and "test, don't guess" were signs prominently hung in the booth.

Reports have been received from various sources relative to the dislike of American bacon by British consumers. Messrs. Wright and Bell of the Department of Agriculture reported this sentiment in their review of the meat situation in the United Kingdom. American business men returning from England have made similar statements. The prevailing opinion was to the effect that American bacon became rancid either through improper curing, by being held in storage too long, or being too salty.

Cow HEALTH is as Important as Good Feeding

When a cow's milk yield falls off, it is more likely to be a question of health than of food. Over-feeding will only make matters worse. Milk cows are subject to impairment of digestive and genital organs and the milk production is immediately reduced.

These vital organs can be toned up and strengthened by feeding KOW-KURE, the great cow medicine. This remedy is also used in treating such ailments as Abortion, Barrenness, Retained Afterbirth, Scouring, Bunches and Milk Fever. The best dairymen keep it constantly on hand. Sold by feed dealers and druggists; 60c and $1.20.

GREAT INCREASE IN VALENCIA ORANGE ACREAGE IS CERTAIN

RESPONDING to an increasing demand, and a better price than is received for the navels, citrus growers, present and future, are engaged in a Valencia orange-production campaign which is unprecedented in the annals of the orange industry in California.

When the Valencia shipping season ends in December, nearly twice as many Valencias as navels will probably have been shipped. Within five years, officials of the California Fruit Growers' Exchange estimate, the ratio of acreage of Valencias to that of navels will be 4 to 1. When the price and demand for a certain fruit is high, California planters run to this certain fruit and set large acreages, sometimes without due regard to the question of supply and demand at the time when the trees begin to bear in five or six years. But Valencia planting is based on a foundation of reason and is the result of a careful survey of future demand and takes into consideration future foreign competition.

Here are some of the reasons given by growers for planting Valencias:

(1.) The price of this fruit is higher at present than that of other orange varieties.

(2.) The demand, notwithstanding a heavy supply this year, is stronger for Valencias than for any other citrus fruit.

(3.) Even at the present rate of planting, there will not be enough Valencias to glut a carefully handled market at home and abroad in five years.

(4.) The Valencia is the best shipping orange, and therefore the best export orange.

(5.) It is a safer orange to plant than the navel, and bears heavier.

But one of the chief reasons for the heavy planting of Valencias in late years is that the area available for orange planting is in regions where conditions are more favorable to the production of Valencias than navels. Orange county, where the citrus fruit has not been affected by extremes of heat and cold as has that of some of the other Southern California counties in late years, led in 1919 in the planting of Valencias.

BIG ACREAGE COMING ON.

The non-bearing acreage of Valencia oranges is greater than that of any other Southern California fruit. Three years ago, the non-bearing acres numbered 21,000. Some of these groves came into bearing for the first time this year. But during 1917 and 1918, the demand for Valencia planting stock taxed the capacities of the nurseries, and last spring eight times as many Valencia trees were planted as navels. In Los Angeles county this year 1170 acres of Valencias and 145 acres of navels were planted. The total bearing acreage of Valencias in California is in round numbers 42,000 acres. This is greater than the acreage of navels.

The production of Valencias in five years will be double what it was this year, 24,000 cars, in the estimation of officials of the California Fruit Growers' Exchange. The production of this orange last season was 8000 cars, but this was because of the severe June drop in 1917. Two seasons ago the Valencias shipped out totalled 16,000 cars. This was at the time a record. For the last two years the shipments of Valencias have exceeded those of navels.

The consumption of oranges in the United States is greater during the navel shipping season than during the Valencia season. But Florida fruit is in competition with the navels, and during the height of the Valencia shipping season there is practically no competition for the California growers. The Valencia, too, has been well received abroad.

The Orient is taking a constantly increasing number of cars of Valencias. Agents of the growers are now in China and Japan, where, although the California orange comes into competition with inferior local fruit, they are getting on well in regard to export increases. New Zealand likes the California Valencia more and more each year. Several hundred cars of Valencias were shipped to Europe this year.

CONTINUOUS SHIPPING NOW.

Owing to the increasing shipments of Valencias, there is now no California orange season. Shipments are almost cotinuous. The first cars of navels will move out in December before the last of the Valencias are wrapped. California oranges are now on Uncle Sam's table every day in the year. It was the popular impression a few years ago that oranges sold in summer and early fall were cold stored but the benighted who has wrongly characterized the Valencia orange is now singing the praises of the fruit.

From present inquiry it appears that the setting of Valencias during the planting season beginning in February will be fully as extensive as during last spring. The growers propose to give the marketing forces of the combined citrus associations something to do when all this acreage comes into bearing. It is believed that from 8000 to 10,000 acres will be set to Valencias in the early spring.

NEED FOR COVER CROPS IS URGED.

SAN BERNARDINO.—Use more organic matter and less water will be needed in soils, says Prof. J. W. Nelson, the soil expert from Berkeley who has been speaking at the different farm centers in this vicinity. The soil of San Bernardino county is low in organic matter, which emphasises the necessity for cover crops here. Rye, melolotus, clover and the vetches are recommended by Prof. Nelson, who believes that by the judicious use of these crops the need for commercial fertilizers will be largely eliminated.

At the Riverside experiment station some of the finest fruit trees in Southern California are being grown on the lighter soils with the aid of cover crops, the records showing that less irrigation is needed in such cases than with "clean cultivation."

Purple vetch is especially recommended, as this variety yields from five to eight tons more of organic matter per acre than any other crop. The purple vetch is nearly equal to alfalfa hay as a food for stock, and good financial returns are being secured from seed sales.

Humboldt county, according to Prof. Nelson will this year produce some 400 tons of purple vetch seed, and as California farmers are now demanding over 2000 tons of the seed of this valuable crop, farmers with the seed for sale are assured of good prices for it. Several farmers have already placed orders for the seed here through the farm bureau, the seed being secured on condition that a seed crop will be raised to help satisfy the demand.

SUGAR BEET PRICE.

The contract price for sugar beets this year is $10 a ton, with some local exceptions. In addition to this price, growers in California, Washington, Michigan and Wisconsin will be paid an additional price of $1 a ton of beets for each cent in the average price of sugar in New York above 9 cents during the four months beginning October 1. In Ohio the base price for beets is $9 a ton, and for sugar 8 cents, and in some other States the base price for beets is $9.50 a ton.

IMPERIAL BUYING SEED.

Imperial County Horticultural Commissioner Waite's September report shows heavy shipments of various seeds moving into Imperial. These shipments include potato, onion, alfalfa, clover, vetch, pea, lettuce, spinach, tomato and squash. In all there are 872 sacks of seed exclusive of 2000 sacks of potatoes.

SEPTICEMIA OUTBREAK MISTAKEN FOR FLU.

Several hog raisers have had outbreaks during the spring and summer of what was often termed the "flu," but in all probability was hemorrhagic septicemia, says the Los Angeles County Farm Bureau Monthly. This disease is caused by a definite organism and is more often known as swine plague, stockyard fever, fowl cholera, etc. There have been no reported cases of this trouble in this county except as affecting hogs. As the name indicates, the disease is a septicemia, or poisoning of the blood, and therefore, when it appears in an acute form, often runs a short course and the animal dies quickly. It is often attended by a high mortality, although when it appears in a chronic form, very few deaths may result. With the chronic form the animals show a general unthriftiness and fail to make proper gains. While the organisms affecting different types of live stock are almost identical, affected sheep or hogs may run in a field with cattle, eat and drink from the same receptacles and not infect the cattle, or vice versa.

The symptoms of the disease in hogs are very similar to those in hog cholera. In acute swine plague the disease usually occurs as a form of pneumonia in which the lungs are seriously affected. This is accompanied by labored respiration and a dry spasmodic cough, and quite often by a discharge from the nostrils. The digestive organs also are usually affected. The animal then becomes very thin and usually dies in from one to two weeks. Sometimes the acute form changes into a chronic condition, when the acute symptoms subside but the cough continues for some time. A chronic inflammation of the joints may also develop.

The affected parts of the lungs sometimes become healed over and the animals may even be fattened in spite of the condition of the respiratory organs. The various parts of the body may be so affected as to make diagnosis difficult. Most of the internal organs may be affected while hemorrhages are constant in the tissues around the kidneys and within the walls of the intestines. The spleen is not affected in cases of swine plague but remains normal. This is a valuable point in differentiating between hemorrhagic septicemia and anthrax. This disease may sometimes be confused with anthrax or blackleg, although by careful diagnosis one will usually be able to determine the specific trouble.

It is very difficult to distinguish between swine plague and hog cholera. Both diseases may occur in the same animal. If the outbreak seems to be but slightly contagious and not inclined to spread from the premises upon which it first appeared it is probably not hog cholera but if it spreads rapidly through the district it is undoubtedly due to hog cholera infection. The bacilli of swine plague are often secondary invaders in cases of hog cholera. The use of virus made from cultures of hemorrhagic septicemia organisms has been found to give very good results in controlling the disease by establishing an immunity. It is often wise in a severe outbreak to vaccinate for hog cholera, and then if the trouble persists to try the virus for this particular disease. In most cases treatment of a fully established case of hemorrhagic septicemia in an animal of any species is quite useless.

All apparently well animals should be removed from sick ones by placing them in separate noninfected quarters. If new cases develop among them the healthy ones remaining should be removed again to another locality. The unaffected animals will in this way soon be out of danger, especially if they have been well taken care of and have had an abundance of good feed and water.

The premises where such outbreaks occur should be well disinfected, especially the interior of stables, the mangers, drinking thoughs and manure trenches. Cresol or carbolic acid solutions make good disinfectants. The yards may be disinfected by copper sulphate solution, five ounces to the gallon of water. A spray pump provides a convenient means of application.

MARKET CLASSES OF HOGS ARE DEFINED.

Important factors in determining market classes of hogs, prime, butcher and packing hogs, market pigs, roughs and stags, are weight, condition, quality, form and sex. It is impossible to lay down a hard and fast method of classification because of different methods used by buyers, and the exigencies of the market sometimes cause a shifting of classification lines, but the following class definitions are generally in use on the Chicago market:

Prime Heavy Hogs—Hogs weighing from 300 to 400 pounds, prime in form, condition and quality. Only certain of the hogs of this weight will fall in this class. They are usually barrows, running from ten months to eighteen months old.

Butcher Hogs—Divided into three classes, heavy, from 260 to 300 pounds; medium, from 200 to 260 pounds, and light, from 150 to 200 pounds. They must be well finished young stock of proper weight for the butcher's block. Nothing that will grade less than a good hog is in the butcher class.

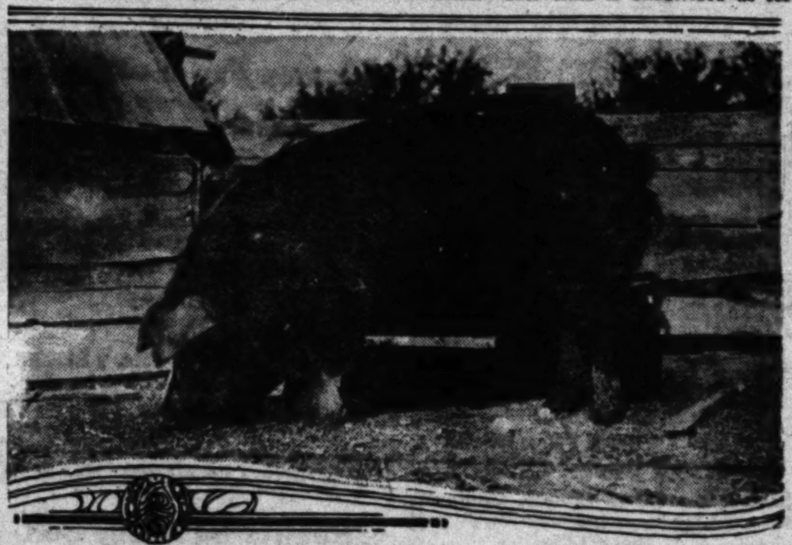
Packing Hogs—Into this class fall the heavy hogs that do not have the quality to grade as prime hogs, and the lighter weight hogs that are not good enough for butchers. This class is subdivided as follows: heavy, 275 to 350 pounds; medium, 225 to 275 pounds; mixed, 200 to 300 pounds.

Light Hogs—These usually go into the cheaper grades of meat, and are graded as good, common and inferior. This is chiefly made up of young sows, or light weight barrows. This class has grown more popular in recent months because growers make better profits from feeding hogs not to exceed this weight. On some markets hogs of 200 pounds and under now constitute the greater part of the receipts.

Market Pigs—These weigh from 50 to 130 pounds, and are graded as choice, good and common, and often have much the same form as a finished hog. There is a strong sentiment against marketing this class of swine. They should be held back a few months and marketed mature.

Roughs—These hogs, sometimes called throwouts, are too coarse to grade at all. They lack condition, form and quality and sell at the lowest market price.

Stags—These sell with a dockage of eighty pounds, and are as is generally known, castrated boars. The price for these is usually so good that, though they are wasty in dressing out, they pay well.



A High-priced Gilt.

POLAND CHINA GILT BRINGS HIGH PRICE.

California has the distinction of having produced an exceptionally high priced Poland-China gilt that would be something of a sensation in any sales ring in the country. At the Kings County Poland-China Breeders' Association sale at Hanford, where she changed hands recently, it was announced from the ring that she was the highest-priced open Poland-China gilt on record.

This young Poland-China female was bred by F. D. Ross of Hanford. She was farrowed September 23, 1918, and was just a year old at the time she was sold. M. Bassett & Sons of Hanford were the successful bidders. The bidding was rapid and many buyers were anxious to get her. When the price reached four figures the bidders gradually droppd out, and Mr. Bassett made the final bid of $3150.

C. W. Bowers, president of the Merritt-Bowers company of Tulare, has purchased the entire shorthorn herd of 146 head of the Bartlett-Heard Land and Cattle company of Arizona for a reported consideration around $30,000. Most of the cattle already have been

Good, thrifty pigs weighing from fifty to seventy-five pounds may be ready for market in ninety to 100 days if fed the self-feeder way.

SICK HOGS MUST NOT BE SHIPPED.

Farmers who knowingly endanger their own and their neighbors hogs by marketing sick hogs or other live stock instead of properly disposing of the animals on the farm and disinfecting the premises should be legally restrained and punished by the proper authorities. Such men retard the work now being done to eradicate cholera and other diseases of swine

Farmers should shun stockyards not having any Federal or State supervision, when purchasing stockers or feeders. To buy swine from infected districts, whether stock yards, feed lots or farm, without the proper precautions of immunizing and disinfection, makes the chance for introduction of disease into healthy herds more probable.

NEW ASSOCIATION IS FORGING AHEAD.

The vast acreage in California devoted to alfalfa and milo maize, the economic value of these products and the far reaching markets that are opening for them were responsible for the organization of the State-wide non-profit co-operative association known as the Alfalfa Growers of California.

The association was organized to put modern factory methods back of the production of these products, and modern merchandising methods back of their distribution and sale. Already a great volume of business is assured, as nearly 2000 growers, owning approximately 60,000 acres of alfalfa and maize, having combined themselves into the association. The volume of business for the coming twelve months, already assured, is stated to be upwards of $5,000,000.

"The purpose of the association," said one of the prime movers in the organization recently, "is to deliver each producer's crop to the best buyer at the right time and at the least expense. The process involves many activities, and a correlation of all, from seed to sale. It involves improvement of farming methods, lessening costs, increasing yields, developing cost systems to the end that each district knows exactly its factory efficiency and rating; it means storing, grading, standardizing, distribution and sale of a vast tonnage; it involves a close analysis of each exporting district and conclusion as to the importing district which can best utilize the excess; it necessitates research and propaganda to open up new districts for both production and consumption, to develop and foster new uses, and, in short, by precept and example demonstrate the true economic position of alfalfa and maize in the economy of the nation and the world.

"These great results cannot be reached under competitive private-concern methods of handling and distribution—only the producer is interested in standardizing his product and establishing it in its true position. The interests of the speculator is best served by keeping both producer and consumer in ignorance of real values, real accouting, and the mysterious machinery of private distribution. Under association practice the grower will know, not guess. He is learning that the producers combined constitute a powerful machine capable of anything and everything that private interests can accomplish, and, because its efforts are co-operative, non-profit making, and non-competitive, the association can accomplish infinitely more, and with this strange and wonderful difference—the advantages gained in efficiency, economics, better grading and better distribution, are all to the benefit of those who need the advantage—the producer and the consumer.

"It can be accepted as axiomatic that for every food product there is a willing buyer at some time and some place and at a fair price. The problem is scientific distribution, and under the association plan that science is in the process of demonstration."

ORIENTAL "POTATO" WORTH INVESTIGATING.

BY EDWIN TARRISSE.

The dasheen is not a new vegetable, since it has been known and utilized in Japan and China for thousands of years. But in the United States it is practically new to the people, for it was introduced into this country but a short while ago. Even now, however, it is unknown to most persons.

That a vegetable that makes such an excellent substitute for the Irish potato should have a name like "dasheen" would indicate a Celtic origin for the latter also, since the name certainly sounds Irish. However, as pointed out, it is far from that; and the name is oriental. It is also cultivated in the West Indies, Central and South America, parts of Africa and Malaysia. For some years experiments in its cultivation in the United States have been conducted under the auspices of the Department of Agriculture.

To cultivate the dasheen a particular sort of soil is required. It cannot be grown to great advantage in sections where the summer is short, as in Canada, but it is believed that it would succeed in most parts of the United States. The Trinidad variety of the dasheen has been made to yield 400 bushels to the acre. A rich, wet soil is needed, with plenty of potash. The potash can be added if the proper soil is otherwise obtained.

The dasheen is excellent cooked in as many ways as the potato may be served, perhaps in more. It can be boiled or baked, fried, mashed, made into croquettes and also used as a stuffing for fowl and meat. It is said to contain more nutriment than the potato, having from 40 to 70 per cent. protein or nitrogenous substances. It has an added advantage in that it does not taste like the potato. It would not add much were it to taste like the potato, for people are always seeking new foods and new flavors. The dasheen has something of a flavor of boiled chestnuts

The leaf somewhat resembles the leaves of marshy or water plants, being elephant-ear shape. The vegetable is a bulb or tuber and is planted much like the potato. It is harvested, however, with less labor, as the plants grow close together and one dasheen or tuber is at the end of the stalk. It is gathered by pulling up the stalk. Then it is allowed to dry on top of the ground, if possible. If there is too much rain, it has to be dried elsewhere. It will keep six months, sometimes longer, if kept dry.

While it will probably never take the place of the potato, it will supply a new food and, because of its nature, it will doubtless partly take the place of the potato, giving us two such vegetables instead of one. Just how cheaply it can be grown is not known as yet, but the government experimenters hope to learn all this within a few seasons.

The desirability of a vegetable that will at least partially substitute for the potato is understood by all agriculturists and by many housekeepers. Farmers are always seeking some new variety of potato that is hardier than the old ones—for unusually wet or unusually dry seasons always affect the crop seriously, sometimes to the extent of a potato famine. Much has been done toward obviating this, but still such is the popular dependence upon this tuber that the cultivation of an acceptable substitute would meet a real and widespread economic need.

It is well known that the failure of one potato crop in Ireland reduces thousands of the population to starvation's point. In this country a scarcity of potatoes, with prices increased three or four times above normal, adds a heavy burden to those borne by a majority of households, as few families now economize in the matter of potatoes any more than they do in the case of bread.

Thousands of American families who planted gardens as a war measure have now acquired what is known as the "garden habit," and are growing gardens as a peace measure. It is a good habit to cultivate.

THE GREAT NATIONAL BREEDERS' ASSOCIATION.

BY F. H. SCRIBNER.

It may be of interest to Farm and Tractor Section readers to know the names of the various National Registry Associations of the different breeds of animals, and who the secretaries are. If a breeder has a sufficient number of animals to warrant his becoming a member of an association, he should do so for two reasons: first, a member usually gets his animals registered for half the amount of a non-member; second, there is a certain prestige that goes along with the fact that a breeder is a member of a national association. He receives some publicity in the fact and it carries with it a feeling of more substantiality and gives the breeder a reputation for dependability. So if a breeder is in the game to stay it would certainly be for his interest to become a member of the National Registry Association to which his particular breed belong.

DESTROY INFECTED STOCK.

A survey of Island County, Washington, recently completed, which was undertaken to determine the extent of tuberculosis among the live stock, showed that approximately 1 per cent. of the cattle were tuberculous. All such animals have been destroyed. In the State of Oregon there are five counties engaged in systematic eradication of tuberculosis from circumscribed areas. In Idaho, Utah and Nevada campaigns are being carried on in a similar fashion. In the three States last mentioned tuberculosis does not exist extensively.

MAKES HENS LAY LACTEIN CONDENSED BUTTERMILK MAKES HOGS PAY FOR HOGS AND POULTRY

Buttermilk Is Nature's Food and Tonic

It is nature's first ration. Lactein is the concentrate of buttermilk after removing the butter fat, casein and water.

It contains all the health-giving food and tonic values of the original buttermilk without the useless bulk of water. On account of its high lactic acid content it will keep almost indefinitely.

Lactein is now recognized as one of the most necessary food digestive agents known for both growing hogs and poultry, due to the large amount of lactic acid it contains. The lactic acid aids digestion and assimilation, causing the hog or fowl to digest all the good from the grains given them to eat, and to eliminate all the dead and disease matter from the digestive organs, thereby promoting growth and preventing disease. Lactic acid is considered the best tonic, appetizer, liver and bowel regulator known for hogs and poultry.

COSTS LESS THAN 2c PER GALLON TO FEED

One gallon of Lactein mixed with thirty gallons of water and fed with the usual grain feed will show greater gains than from feeding the grain alone, besides it will keep the hogs and poultry healthy and their appetites keen.

You can buy it from your local dealers. Phone or write for the name of your nearest dealer.

COUNTIES JOIN TO FIGHT THISTLE PEST.

A year ago the Boards of Supervisors of San Bernardino and Riverside counties had the seriousness of the menace of the Russian thistle brought home to them by facts and figures, resulting in a joint plan for its present check and final extermination.

The fight was begun in July. On the ground that is cleared of it there should be no return of the pest, say State Department of Agriculture experts. In battling the thistle a small arsenal of unique weapons has been developed, among them a harrow with the teeth bent back to loosen the roots and a section of steel rail or eight-inch iron-plated timber dragged behind to gather the uprooted weeds. The hoe, weed knife, plow and other modifications of the harrow are also used.

The alfalfa growers are fully alive to the necessity of an unceasing campaign. While the first and second cutting of alfalfa in ground that appears to be clean may be free from the weed, the third may be choked with it, and the pest further distributed by this means.

A Remarkable Yield of Ponderosa Tomatoes.

GROWING PONDEROSA TOMATOES HIS HOBBY.

It's just as easy to grow more and better tomatoes on a vine as it is to produce a few small ill-flavored fruits, says A. E. Buell, 517 East Forty-seventh street, who is a specialist in the growing of the Ponderosa variety of the "love apple." One vine grown on Mr. Buell's back lot is shown in the accompanying picture. The fifty-five visible fruits do not represent more than half the production of this one vine, and it is all in three utensils, seed selection, proper irrigation and fertilization.

Mr. Buell does not have the falling blossom trouble experienced by some gardeners who fertilize and irrigate too heavily. He believes that proper culture will take care of this trouble and assure a heavy set of fruit, regardless of the fact that the ground has been well fertilized and watered.

The largest and best shaped tomatoes from the most prolific vines Mr. Buell saves for his hotbed. He plants his seedlings in shallow, well fertilized trenches, instead of on ridges, and keeps the vines off the ground by staking and pruning the lower branches. He places papers under the fruits when, by reason of a heavy load, the vines sag to the ground during the harvest.

WARNS OF JOHNSON GRASS.

Los Angeles County Horticultural Commissioner Ryan has issued a "Johnson grass warning:" Johnson grass infestations not now being worked with eradication in view should be taken in hand immediately by local inspectors to prevent seeding. Every day of delay at the present time makes more sure an increased area of infestation which must be attended to next season.

COTTON-LEAF MINER APPEARS.

A leaf miner has caused some damage in the cotton-producing sections of California this year, the damage running from 5 to 10 per cent. in some cases. The remedy suggested by the State Department of Agriculture is the planting of earlier maturing varieties of cotton, which will develop before the insects can make serious inroads on the plants.

RAINY SEASON IS ON; SAVE PLOWS FROM RUST.

During the long dry spell which has been broken by recent rains, some farmers formed the habit of leaving out in the open their tractors and farm implements. This practice never was safe. Provide a shed for the tractor and another or two for the plows, harrows, etc., and protect your machinery investment from the rains that are here and coming.

Good farmers take care of their implements. They may not always find it convenient or profitable to build expensive sheds, but they will find means to protect them from the rains in one way or another.

The plow is the basic tool on the farm, and should be given protection from the elements as well as harvesters, tractors and harrows. When the plow is laid by, it should be stored in a dry place, away from contact with the ground. If it is to be laid up for a few weeks, the bright parts should be given a coating of grease. If the moldboard and share becomes pitted with rust, a good job of plowing can hardly be done until the parts become polished by use.

Next in general neglect comes the harrow. This tool is often left under a tree, in the fence corner, or out in the open field. Harrows should be stored in a shed, the teeth being supported by blocks so that they will not become embedded in the ground if the shed has no floor. All earth and trash should be removed from the harrow. The wooden parts should be painted. The disc gangs should be run upon boards so that the discs will not be partially in the ground.

Sometimes the alfalfa mower stands at the edge of the field from one cutting to another. This is a great mistake. Get the mower under shelter after it is used, clean the knife bar, and wipe it with a greasy rag. Put a block of wood under the mid-point of the tongue so that it will not acquire a permanent sag.

GAS TRUCK BOOSTS POULTRY BUSINESS.

BY H. A. CRAFTS.

A good example of the great benefits to be derived by the farmers and poultry men from the use of the gas truck may be seen in Alameda county.

The development of the egg and chicken industry in that section has been very rapid in the past few years, and this may be easily traced to the influence of the gas truck.

The products of this region are shipped daily to supply San Francisco, Oakland and other bay cities. The center of the industry is at Hayward, some fifteen miles east of Oakland.

Beginning but a few years ago, the industry developed at an almost incredible rate. The section had had steam and electric lines of transportation, but these were slow in their deliveries, and the real boom did not come until the advent of the motor truck.

These trucks began to collect the new-laid eggs as fast as produced. Early morning collections were rushed to market as soon as made, and a large proportion of the eggs were delivered fresh to the hotels, restaurants and boarding-houses. Besides Oakland, Alameda, Berkeley, Piedmont and Emeryville were supplied in this manner.

Four collections and as many deliveries of eggs from the Hayward region were made daily. So rapidly did the poultry business develop in this section that the annual output of eggs soon amounted to 6,000,000 dozen. The production of meat fowls increased in almost like proportion.

From Hayward, under the influence of prompt and rapid truck delivery, the poultry industry spread to Niles, Irvington, Mission San Jose, Pleasanton, Livermore and other points within easy reach of the big markets.

Some of the poultry plants in this region have grown to be very large under the impetus of this movement, some hatching as high as 50,000 eggs at one time. In fact chicks designed for broilers, fryers, bakers and roasters are hatched in Alameda county by the million.

Another favorable feature of the delivery-by-truck system consists in the satisfactory results accruing to consumers, and dealers in the cities where these products are delivered in quick time, and in the very best condition.

So the gas truck distributes its blessings in more than one direction.

IN NEW LOCATION.

The L. M. Railsback Company, distributors for California of the Electric Wheel Company's Allwork tractor, has started business operations in a new location at No. 222 North Los Angeles street, Los Angeles.

Heavy rains during the latter part of September were of decided benefit to citrus, increasing the size of the fruit materially.

then tenants, then owners with a mortgage, then owners debt free. The census will show, if the questions are answered fairly, how many years, if any, every farmer worked for wages; how many years he was a tenant; and how many years he has been an owner. The Department of Agriculture believes it will then have the basic information it needs to help men to success in farm ownership.

Here are some other questions that will be asked: "Has this farm a telephone?" "Is water piped into the operator's house?" "Has the operator's house gas or electric light?"

This, the census officials explain, is information that is necessary if the Department of Agriculture is to be able to intelligently go about helping promote comfort and convenience in American farm homes.

Every farmer will be questioned as to the character of his land, its productiveness and the like. The enumerators will want to know all about his water or drainage problems and, in fact, about most of the details of his operations. Each individual questioned will at least know that all his neighbors are being asked for similar information.

All of this is going to help every farmer, say the census heads, and they ask the willing co-operation of the farming population in making the agricultural census complete.

CERTIFICATION FOR POTATO SEED MEN.

The 80,000 acres of potatoes grown annually in California require considerably more than a half-million sacks of seed potatoes. Heretofore this seed stock has generally been picked up by the grower wherever he could find something that he thought might meet his requirements. Often, to his great discouragement and disgust, when he received his seed potatoes he has found them of a poor quality.

The seed-potato problem in California is acute. The Legislature at its last session made a small appropriation to the new State Department of Agriculture for the purpose of seed-potato inspection. An inspector has been appointed by Director G. H. Hecke, and it is now possible for any potato grower in California to have his potato fields inspected for the certification of his potatoes. Upon all seed potatoes which pass these inspections will be placed a tag stating that they are California certified seed. No potatoes can be sold as California certified seed which do not bear this tag on every sack, and no potatoes which are not certified can be labeled with this tag.

TAKE TRACTOR AGENCY.

Arnott & Co., implement dealers with headquarters at 112 South Los Angeles street, Los Angeles, have been named Southern California distributors of the Advance-Rumely line of tractors. Within a few days the first carload of tractors will arrive. A sales and service force has already been organised by Manager M. D. Schatzman. The Advance-Rumely, which is made in several sizes, has been in use for many years on farms all over the country, and is adapted to Southern California conditions.

Choice ham and breakfast bacon can be produced by the farmer for much less than the cost of purchased meat.

BIG CROP INCREASE.

The government crop report just issued by L. M. Harrison, Arizona field agent for the United States Bureau of Crop Estimates, shows that Arizona will exceed her 1918 production by a wide margin. Increases are forecast in nearly all of the staple crops grown in the State. Cotton promises to exceed last year's record crop by 14,000 bales; wheat, by 132,000 bushels; corn, by 300,000 bushels; oats, by 100,000 bushels; white potatoes, by 100,000 bushels; grain sorghums, by 400,000 bushels, and beans by 60,000 bushels.

Feed to produce one dozen eggs cost 10 cents with pullets, 14 cents with two-year-old hens, and 19 cents with three-year-old hens, in a three-year feeding test conducted by poultrymen of the United States Department of Agriculture. These were the cost figures of feed at the time of the experiment, which began in 1912, and must be corrected to present prices.

Fig planting has been so brisk this past season, and orders for next year are piling up so fast, that nurserymen are predicting a shortage of trees in the near future.

The Choice of Governments

The "Caterpillar" Tractor was the only tractor used by the Allies for their heaviest war work—a choice made after severe and prolonged tests.

How the "Caterpillar" Tractor made good in war service is a matter of history—a marvel to the officers and men serving where "Caterpillar" Tractors were used.

This record merely verified what thousands of farmers who had been using the "Caterpillar" already knew—that Holt design, Holt choice of materials and Holt workmanship give the "Caterpillar" Tractor drawbar pull, stamina and dependability almost beyond belief.

TRACTOR CULTIVATOR GREAT AID TO THE GROWERS OF ROW CROPS.

BY MARVIN H. LOOMIS.

Row crops, beans, beets, cotton, potatoes, cantaloupes and garden produce comprise a large and important part of the agriculture of the southern part of California, Arizona and Lower California. The impression that Southern California is exclusively a country of orchards may be dispelled by a trip throughout the fertile irrigated valleys inside the Coast range, where the great food crops are grown. Row crops are becoming more popular year by year in this region. Indian corn acreage is increasing, and grain sorghum fields are growing in size each season.

Therefore the importance of the cultivator is growing among southwestern farmers. In order to raise their lima beans, cotton, beets and cantaloupes so that they will get a proper return for their labor and investment, the row crop farmer realizes that modern methods must rule in cultivation. The tractor cultivator here steps in, and this machine has already proved efficient on the larger farms of the region. It is now being adapted to the smaller farms by manufacturers who are turning out light two and three row motor cultivators which complete the stirring of the soil in much less time than is required by horses.

The horse has retained his position on row crop farms in such large numbers chiefly because of the situation due to cultivation work. Many of the tractors sold to row crop farmers were not designed to do cultivating as cheaply and as well as horses. If all the tractors sold had been capable of cultivating as well as plowing, harrowing and harvesting, the horse would have lost his standing long ago, as the need for retaining him through long idle periods would have been eliminated. The peak load for machine horse power on a farm devoted to row crops comes during the cultivating period. It is estimated by United States Department of Agriculture statisticians that it cost $316,908,800 to plow and prepare the land for the cotton and corn crops of this country last year, and $339,543,000 to cultivate them. Hence the imperative need for a motor-driven cultivator which shall do this work better, more economically, and with less destruction to growing plants than when horses are used.

SPECIAL MACHINE NEEDED.

Many of the four-wheeled tractors which have been in use on farms in the southwestern corner of this country are adapted to cultivate one or two rows of crops. Many of them, however, have such heavy, wide wheels that the cultivating points must be placed behind the wheels in order to break up the crust made by the passing of these wheels close to the plants. Tractor makers long ago sensed the demand for an exclusive motor cultivator which should have three wheels, or four wheels including two small wheels in front, the wheels to be properly spaced for getting in between the bean, cotton, corn and beet rows. There are now on the market a dozen makes of tractor cultivators which are being eagerly utilized by the growers of the leading Southern California row crops. Many of these machines are arranged with variable gauges, through the use of extensible main axles or other mechanical means to widen the tread or shorten it to fit different widths of crop rows. Motor cultivators designed for row crops are for the most part made for two rows, although there are several makes designed for one row. Several of the lighter types are not provided for the seating of the operator, but these are designed chiefly for garden and truck crops.

One of the chief claims of designers of the tractor cultivator is that they possess lightness, passing over the ground without compressing it to any extent. The roots of many row crops, such as cotton and corn, lie near the surface, and go deeper as they grow. It is important that the machine cultivator wheels be light enough and of such a design as not to compact the earth around these roots. The two-row types are generally of the three-wheel design, and have been found practicable in turning at the ends of the rows.

IN THE COTTON FIELDS.

In the Imperial Valley cotton growers last season are reported to have purchased more than fifty tractor cultivators from Los Angeles dealers for work in cultivating their cotton, an important operation in securing good results. These machines have [illegible] hand to getting out and following a horse in the heat of the day has given way to a willingness to drive a tractor cultivator over the field, and one problem of the cotton planter has been solved.

In Ventura, Santa Barbara, Orange and other counties wherein the great lima and bush bean crops are raised, the tractor-cultivator has come into great favor because it does the cultivating in less time than horses, can work twenty-four hours a day, and thus complete the cultivation while the soil and atmospherical conditions are just right. The bean machine cultivators have been found efficient even on the steepest slopes utilized by the lima bean growers near the coast, and the future of the motor-driven cultivator is bright in this industry. Preparation of the land is an important part in lima bean cultivation, in order to conserve the moisture supplied by winter rains. Some of the bean growers have machine driven cultivators which stir the earth around four rows of beans, and this type of tractor cultivator may be the one which will persist in the industry.

The great canteloupe growing industry of Imperial Valley awaits a machine cultivator which is especially adapted to the ridges on the sides of which the grower plants and cultivates his melons. At present, one horse draws a peculiarly shaped cultivator-plow which stirs the slopes. But the operation is far from satisfactory and no doubt within the coming months a tool adapted to canteloupe production will come forth into the light to come to the aid of the melon growers, who must cultivate their rows three and four times between the four-leaf stage and that which precludes any further cultivation.

APPEAL TO BEET MEN.

Sugar beet cultivation requires a machine that will cultivate two to three rows at one time, and many of these motor cultivators are now used in the beet fields, and the growers have found that they fill a long felt want. Tractor-drawn land rollers are pulled over the beets when they are from one to three weeks old, and in two to three weeks afterwards regular cultivation commences. The sugar-beet farmer who is using a tractor cultivator finds that an evener stand and bigger tonnage results from its use.

The approximate cost of cultivating row crops with one of the light motor-cultivators now on the market has been found to be less than that of plowing with a tractor. Figures on tractor cultivating for one acre have been assembled by one of the dealers, and are as follows: two-row motor cultivator, gasoline, 72 cents; distillate, 41 cents; oil, 9 cents; grease, 2 cents; repairs, 14½ cents; depreciation, 26 cents; man labor, 72 cents; interest, 7 cents, total cost for cultivating an acre under Southern California conditions, where gasoline is used, $2.02½ cents; where distillate is used, $1.71½ cents.

BORAX-POTASH SALES.

The Department of Agriculture has investigated reports of damage to crops attributed to the use of fertilizer containing high borax-potash, and has traced in important instances this potash to the product of Searles Lake. In order to permit the safe use of this product in future, the department has, under authority of the Control Act of August 10, 1917, decided to place such restrictions on the use of potash salts containing borax as will guarantee the use of an application of not more than two pounds of anhydrous borax per acre. In order to effect this measure of safety, the department has issued instructions to the producers of potash salts at Searles Lake and to all brokers, fertilizer manufacturers and mixers not to sell potash salts direct to farmers as straight goods when they contain more than five-tenths of 1 per cent. of borax, and not to sell mixed fertilizers containing more than two pounds of borax per ton unless the amount of borax contained is plainly shown upon the container. This regulation is issued to insure that in no case shall a fertilizer application be made by farmers without their knowledge, which would add more than two pounds of borax to the acre. The department feels that such restrictions will make the use of potash salts from Searles Lake as safe under all conditions of agriculture as is the use of nitrate of soda, acid phosphate, and other fertilizer constituents.

TWIN CITY
12-20 Kerosene Tractor with 16-valve engine
Pays Big Dividends

For the first time in the history of the tractor industry, the 4-cylinder, 16-valve engine (valve in head type) is now applied to a tractor. THE TWIN CITY 12-20 with its 16-valve motor actually develops 25 per cent. more than its rated horse power.

This new 12-20 is a lightweight tractor that will out-pull, out-last and out-dividend other tractors of equal rating.

Not built down to a price, but built up to a fixed ideal—to do the work assigned to it better than it has ever been done before.

The highest grade tractor will unfailingly prove the least expensive and pay the biggest dividends.

GRAPES DO WELL IN DAIRY REGION.

PORTERVILLE.—Once considered adaptable only for general farming, alfalfa-growing or dairying, the rich Poplar-Woodville district, west of Porterville in Tulare county, has been found by experiment to be well suited for raisin grapes. As a result of experimental culture, largely undertaken at first as inter-crop for deciduous orchards, an extensive acreage heretofore devoted to alfalfa and totalling well over 1500 acres is now being prepared for the new industry.

Friable soil with a large content of mica and with abundant water during the first growing season for the vines are prime essentials. Fresno county experts have declared the soil conditions over a large part of the Poplar and Woodville sections to be equal to the best in the Fresno county raisin belt. As for water, wells of 125 and 175 inches production at a depth of 150 feet and with a water level standing at 10 to 12 feet from the surface are common throughout the territory. One well on the Nelson place, 87 feet in depth, shows a production of over 200 inches.

Indicating the value of Thompsons for an inter-crop, V. M. Willis is now curing over twenty tons of these grapes, picked from three-year-old vines set between the rows of twenty acres of olives. At the contract price he has received for his raisins, the crop will be worth $480 per acre. Various of the vineyard owners of this district have received upwards of $500 per acre for their raisins delivered at the vineyard.

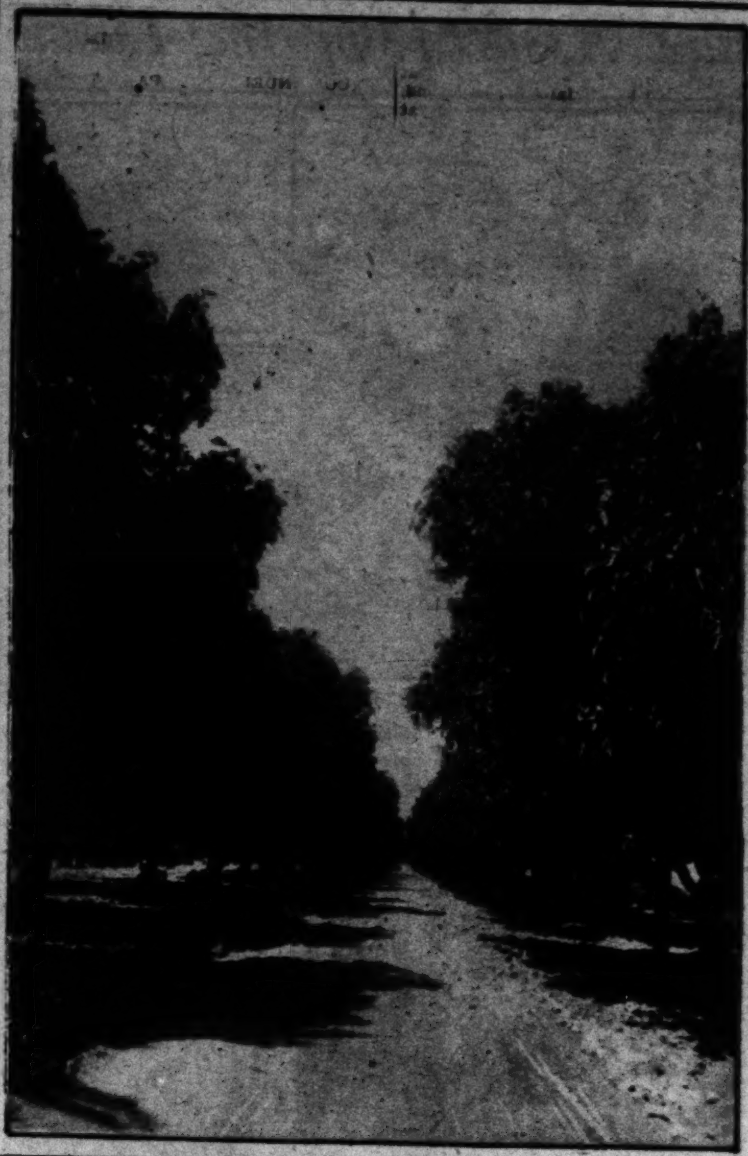
One of the largest single projects in the Poplar district is that begun by G. W. Osterhout, who for a number of years ranked as one of the most successful vineyard men in the Dinuba section. Mr. Osterhout bought the 480-acre alfalfa ranch property of Mrs. Rachael J. Wood, situated a short distance from the Poplar community, and is preparing the entire acreage for Thompson vines next spring. Another large development planned is that of L. W. Conner, who recently bought the Whitten ranch, which for some years was conducted as a stock farm and which was largely in alfalfa. Mr. Conner has contracted for the vines for planting the entire acreage. G. W. Deason, a Fresno investor, has bought 240 acres of alfalfa land which is to be set to Thompsons and Muscats next spring. On the heavier lands nearer the Porterville city limits, W. A. Hawley is developing 160 acres of vineyards, largely set to the table varieties of grapes. Further south in the Saucelito district a number of small vineyards are planned, ranging from 20 to 40 acres in extent, the owners of which will plant various varieties from Emperors to Zante currants.

Present indications are that the development in the Porterville district to vineyards will be limited only by the amount of young stock available. Due to the very stringent horticultural laws and the safeguards which are thrown about the importations of vines and cuttings, the territory from which grapes may be obtained is very limited. As a result of these prohibitions a number of the leading nursery-stock growers have established large tracts of cuttings in the northern Tulare country, but this year, it is understood, the output of vines will be limited. As a result of the demand and relative shortage of available stock, the price of year-old rooted stock has risen to $25 and $30, depending on quality, 50 per cent. more than the ruling quotation of last year.

Because of the ideal soil and water conditions, the relatively low price for raw land and the system of paved roads by which Porterville markets can be reached, indications are that within the next few years thousands of acres of now vacant land will be growing grapes of all varieties.

NO PRICE FIXING.

WASHINGTON (D.C.)—Reports have reached the United States Department of Agriculture indicating that statements have been circulated to the effect that the department has "fixed prices" for raw fertilizer materials pursuant to a conference held with the producers of such materials at Washington on October 6 and 7. The department announced recently not only that it has not "fixed" any prices as reported, but that, after due consideration, it has reached the conclusion that, in the circumstances, it would not be warranted at the present time in naming a fair profit for such raw fertilizer materials as sulphate of ammonia, dried blood, tankage, fish scrap, and cottonseed meal. The department, however, will continue fully to exercise its own powers under the licensing system against profiteering as well as in conjunction with the Department of Justice. The amendment to the control act now pending in Congress carries a provision to the effect that any one who violates the act by profiteering or otherwise shall, upon conviction, be fined not exceeding [illegible] or be imprisoned for not more than two years, or both. Any act of profiteering under the law or any other violation of the law may be [illegible]



Roadside plantings of figs in Tulare county are not only of great ornamental value, but are yielding good returns.

FIG GROWERS ENJOY PROFITABLE SEASON.

Fig growers of Tulare county have had an unusually profitable season, this profit extending to all varieties. The fruit was not only exceptionally heavy as to yield, but has been of a high quality. Market demand has been consistent and prices have continued at a high level.

O. G. Brundage of the Farmersville district, one of the pioneers in the Calimyrna industry of Central California, has completed picking the crop from his forty-acre property and says he has been assured of net returns of more than $20,000 for the season. The gross yield, according to Mr. Brundage's books, was about $600 per acre. It has cost him about $32 per ton to pick, grade, cure and haul the crop, he says. His additional charges for water, cultivation, caprification and interest on his capital invested will be slightly less than $100 per acre. This orchard is twelve years old and has been bearing consistently since its fifth year.

Mr. Brundage has seventy-five acres of Black Mission figs adjoining his Calimyrnas which, he says, probably will prove to be quite as profitable. He bases this conclusion on the absolute certainty of a crop, the absence of sour fruit and the saving in labor.

On a smaller scale Earle E. Goodale of the Lemon Cove district has had a remarkable crop. Mr. Goodale has marketed 1200 eight-pound crates of fresh fruit from a little more than six acres of trees. These brought him, he says, about $1700. In addition he has sold dried figs to the value of $260, making a net profit for the season of $1960.

G. A. Williamson of Porterville has had a very successful experience with Kadota figs. He has ten acres of three-year-old trees upon which the net returns have been more than $175 per acre. Mr. Williamson sold his figs, in the orchard, to a San Francisco concern. The fruit was picked as rapidly as it ripened and preserved and packed in glass in a portable plant erected on the property.

As a result of these and similar experiences, more than 1500 acres will be set to figs next season in Tulare county. Calimyrnas and Missions will predominate as being the most thoroughly proven crops. There is no lack of interest in Kadotas, which appear to be growing in popularity in the eastern and domestic markets, but the planting of this variety will be limited because of the lack of available nursery stock.

WILL GROW TOBACCO TO GET WALNUT PESTS.

Directors of the California Walnut Growers' Association have formed the Walnut Growers' Spray Manufacturing Company for the purpose of furnishing at cost to the walnut growers dusting materials for the fight on the walnut worm and walnut aphis and other grove pests. A warehouse at Fifty-seventh street and Santa Fe avenue, Los Angeles, has been tentatively selected as the site of the new factory. For some time the company has been mixing nicotine-kaolin spray dust for its members, but will now go into it on a larger scale.

Prof. Ralph E. Smith has obtained another year's leave of absence from his work at the University of California and has been selected as factory manager. Prof. Smith intends trying the culture of tobacco near Los Angeles to escape the heavy cost of tobacco shipped from the East to put in the dust sprays. It is also planned to make dry spray dust for the war on aphis attacking melons, beans and citrus fruits, and to supply citrus, walnut and almond growers with a spray for the red spider. Prof. Smith may develop a good spray for the control of thrips on onions as well as orange, lemon and pear tree thrips, it is believed.

CAREFUL STORAGE PAYS.

It should be remembered, says the State Agricultural Department, that treatment of legumes subject to infestation by weevils that can breed generation after generation in storage will not keep them free from weevils if they are stored so that adult weevils can get to them and lay eggs on them. The application of remedial measures may kill all weevils in the seed at the time of treatment, but no treatment has a lasting effect in preventing reinfestation from outside sources. Seeds once treated should be stored in [illegible] free from adult weevils, [illegible]

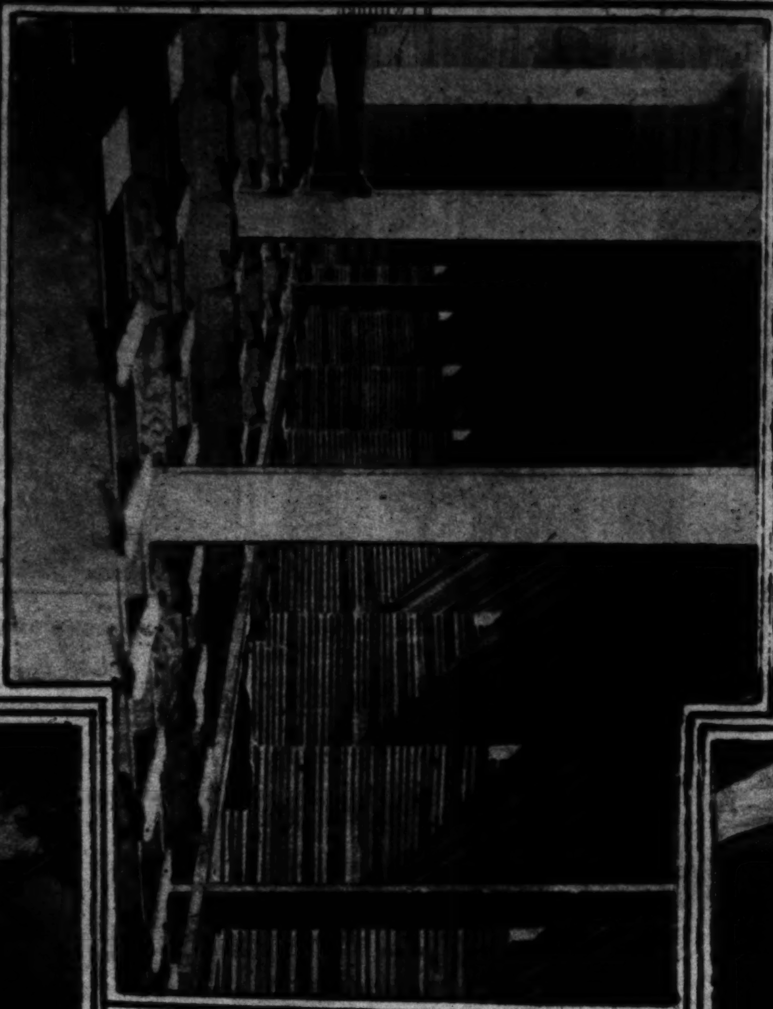
The Last Word in Walnut Packing Houses.

WHITTIER association walnut growers are justly proud of their recently completed new association packing-house, which represents absolutely the last word in walnut packing-house development. According to Manager Lester Cole, The Whittier Walnut Association last year handled a crop of over 1200 tons of nuts, being decidedly cramped in its old Los Nietos headquarters. With a decided increase in crop staring them in the face, it was felt that the time had come for expansion, with the result that the most modern and absolutely up-to-date walnut packing-house in the United States was planned. The plant received the finishing touches in time to be ready for the new crop.

The new plant is situated on the State Highway in Whittier, just east of the Whittier Citrus Association packing-house, thereby being provided with loading facilities on both the Salt Lake and Southern Pacific railroads. It thus enjoys a very central location for the walnut orchards of the district and in addition has the advantage of the splendid network of highways centering at Whittier. Its nearness to two of the citrus packing-houses is expected to prove a permanent advantage in the obtaining of help, as the walnut shipping season coming at the dull time of the year for the citrus packing-houses, will thus make it possible to easily procure reliable and experienced labor.

The house was designed and equipped by F. S. Bishop, who has made a specialty of walnut packing plants, and is constructed entirely of wood, with a concrete basement, the dimensions being 90x180 feet. A special arrangement of trusses for the shingle roof leaves a clear floor space unobstructed by supports of any kind.

The new Walnut Association packing-houses at Whittier, a thoroughly up-to-date plant for the handling of that region's great walnut crop.



Looking down into the huge drying bins of the new Whittier Walnut Association plant. These bins have a capacity of 250 tons. Note the conveyors on the left.

Looking down into one of the grading cylinders. Note the spiral metal worm which forces the nuts along, also the slots in the screening through which they fall.

The machinery has been designed and arranged so as to operate with the maximum of efficiency from the time the nuts are received at the door from the special association trucks, which will haul members' walnuts until they are safely loaded in the cars consigned for eastern shipment. With this idea in view the bleaching-drums have been placed in the basement, supplied with the bleaching solution by gravity feed from the concrete settling tanks of 400 gallons capacity located outside the main building. Acid is added in the basement insuring a fresh solution and added efficiency.

But let us follow a bag of nuts through the plant.

Gathered up in the orchard by the association auto truck, they are brought to the receiving door of the packing-house. At the receiving door our bag, together with others, is placed on a specially built truck platform designed to carry from twelve to fifteen sacks and which can easily be moved about by the use of the regular platform truck. This system permits of more rapid unloading, less handling and much less breakage than usually occurs in the use of the old style handtruck.

Our bag, together with its neighbors, is taken to the feeding hopper of one of the two distinct and separate units, each with a capacity of three tons per hour. Here it is emptied where its contents are mingled with those of the other bags in the same lot, all passing by an automatic arrangement in a steady stream from the hopper to the dry shaker where extraneous materials of all kinds, such as leaves and other trash, are shaken out. Immediately above the lower end of each dry shaker is located a vacuum machine which catches the light and improperly filled nuts, lifting them up to an elevated platform where they are automatically crushed and pass on a conveyor before the eye of the operator who regulates the suction accordingly.

From the dry shaker the nuts pass to the dry culling-tables where they are hand sorted, all culls being dropped down through chutes from which they pass to the basement, where they are sacked for shipment to the cracking plant at Los Angeles. All culling formerly done on the ranches will thus hereafter be done at the packing-house, and done much more cheaply than was possible with the old system.

From the culling tables the nuts pass into the new type concrete bleaching drums located in the basement. After an exposure to the bleaching solution of but a few seconds they pass to a wet shaker at the outlet of the processing drums from which they are elevated to the graders, located just under the roof. These consist of huge cylinders covered with screen netting with suitable sized openings through which the nuts, after passing through the dryer, drop into conveyors leading to the storage bins for the proper grade. The nuts are propelled through these cylinders by means of a metal worm, the entire cylinder slowly revolving. Two sets of graders for the seedling nuts and one for the budded nuts make up the grading and sizing equipment.

From the graders the nuts pass to the immense drying bins, which occupy all the east side of the house, running its full length and having a capacity of some 250 tons. Every precaution has been taken to prevent breakage from the time the nuts enter at the dry shaker to the time they finally come to lie in the drying bins. The conveyors especially are arranged so that the distance which the nuts must fall is small and the shock of impact reduced by sloping surfaces.

When fully dry, the nuts go to the final culling-table where they again receive grading, and thence to drops where they are sacked, weighed, and the sacks sewed. When properly sacked they are conveyed into the cars for loading by means of roller conveyors instead of the old hand trucking so productive of breakage.

The new packing-house is of course equipped with an electric mangle for treatment of all bags in accordance with the regulations of the State Department of Agriculture.

A special feature to be used by the new packing-house is the new pucker string picking bags with the grower's name stenciled thereon which will obviate the necessity of sewing the bags in the field and then cutting them open at the house.

It is believed that this new packing-house will set the pace for future establishments of this kind and that it will establish a record for efficiency and economy in handling the walnut crop of the district.

BEAN ACREAGE.

Bean acreage in the five principal producing States—New York, Michigan, Colorado, New Mexico and California—increased enormously in this country in 1917 and 1918 in accordance with war-food propaganda, to 1,800,000 acres in 1917 and over 1,700,000 in 1918. The previous acreage had been 575,000 acres in 1914, 928,000 in 1915, and 1,107,000 in 1916. Now there is a disposition to recede from these high areas and for 1919 the bean acreage of these five States, estimated by the Bureau of Crop Estimates, is 1,000,000 acres.

Bright Future Assured for the Luscious Feijoa.

PROGRESS in the improvement of that popular guava, Feijoa Sellowiana, by grafting and seed selection has been marked during the past year, and trees grafted with branches from plants producing extra large fruits may now be secured for planting.

W. F. Popenoe of Altadena, A. F. Manz of Whittier and the Armstrong Nursery, Ontario, have this year produced grafted feijoa bushes which are a great improvement over the ordinary type, the fruit on these trees, ranging from the size of a hen's egg to from two and one-half inches long and four and one-half inches in circumference. The flavor, too, has been improved and the year 1919 may be classed as the most important period in the development of the pineapple guava in the United States thus far.

It has been the aim of the feijoa grafters to improve bearing qualities of the bushes as well as the size and flavor of fruit. Those who have been growing feijoas notice that many seedling bushes are shy bearers, while other individuals are loaded with fruit. Thus far, grafting experiments with the feijoa have been a decided success, the scion taking hold easily and growing rapidly after the sap is started.

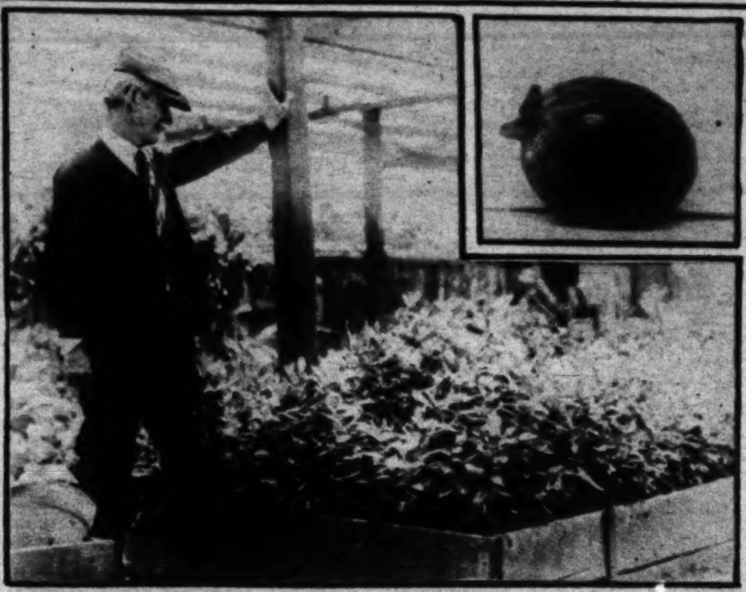
Interest in the feijoa is growing as this fruit becomes more generally used. Mr. Manx of Whittier has done much to introduce the feijoa, distributing hundreds of pounds yearly from his orchard and sending samples to the far corners of the United States. Ranchers are planting trees in both orchard form and as borders, the latter system being the more popular.

Feijoa Sellowiana is a member of the family Myrtacea (Myrtle.) Authorities differ as to its origin. Mr. Popenoe says it is a native of Brazil and Uruguay, while Dr. Webber of the Citrus Experiment Station, Riverside, states that it originally came from Argentina. At any rate, it found its way to France and Spain nearly a century ago.

One of the first importations of this fruit into California was made by Dr. Franceschi of Santa Barbara who brought over two bushes from France in 1900. Mr. Popenoe brought several excellent specimens from South America for his West India Gardens, Altadena, four years later. W. N. Taft of Tustin is one of the first Southern Californians to plant a large tract to feijoas, and now propagates trees from the seed quite extensively. Mr. Manz of Whittier interset feijoa bushes in his avocado orchard, and the trees have begun to crowd each other so that he is taking some out and transplanting as a border. He is very enthusiastic over the future of this fruit.

The flavor of the feijoa grows on one, and orchardists and other ranchers who have planted bushes are the best customers for the fruit. It is eaten out of hand, like an apple, or pared and cut up into slices and sugared for a breakfast dish. Or it is made into excellent jelly, surpassing the other guavas in this regard. It is a good shipper, keeping for long periods, and the demand for it is increasing in the East, although millions have never heard of it because of the lack of advertising as to its virtues. It is difficult to describe its peculiar pineapplelike flavor, which almost invariably pleases.

It appears that the plant has adapted itself to California conditions very well. It seems that bushes planted in this State grow to a greater height than they do in their native habitat. Some of the bushes in the Manz orchard are ten feet high. Mr. Popenoe gives the average height of feijoa bushes as eight feet. It may be planted in regions too cold for citrus fruits. It endures temperatures not lower than 10 deg. Fahrenheit, and is not fastidious as to soil. It seems partial, however, to the coast slope, and does not do well in the interior valleys the bearing being shy in the San Joaquin and Coachella valleys, where it has been tried.



C. P. Taft of Tustin, a firm believer in the future of the Feijoa, is propagating trees from seed to be grafted later. Inset—close-up view of a Feijoa or pineapple guava.

CUTTING CORN SILAGE AT THE RIGHT TIME.

The feeding worth and palatability of good Indian corn silage depends on the quality of the corn and the period of maturity at which it is cut. Where the corn is cut when it is immature, not well glazed and dented, and still in its juvenile stage, it makes washy, low quality, acid-forming silage which is likely to sour. On the other hand, corn harvested when it is well dented and at the proper degree of ripeness for best use as silage, gives a winter feed which is one of the best producers of milk and meat. Corn should be allowed to pass well through the milk stage and become thoroughly dented before being siloed.

In some sections farmers, and particularly dairymen, are accustomed to ensile combination crops, using mixtures of alfalfa and corn, cowpeas and corn, sorghum and corn, or a combination of these three for canning purposes. As a general proposition, where other branches of animal husbandry in addition to dairying are taken into consideration, corn or some other coarse forage is most desirable for ensilage purposes. Acre yield is the end sought, the chief objection to the valuable protein forages such as alfalfa, soy beans and the like being that they are better adapted for hay than for silage. Dairy farmers who require an abundance of succulent silage of a rather balanced composition highly prize the leguminous crops mentioned as supplements to corn and usually realize an adequate return from the sale of their milk to allow them to produce these crops at a profit, say United States Department of Agriculture specialists.

THE TIMES
ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE

We Are Ashamed.

A CANDID friend has written to us to call attention to the fact that in a recent utterance on this page we were guilty of a glaring grammatical error.

When we felt the guilty blush of shame mantling our cheek, we at first tried to find excuses. We recalled that Shakespeare and Robert Louis Stevenson and even Ralph Waldo Emerson were guilty of making errors of grammar, not to speak of Charles Lamb. Indeed, it would seem that almost every celebrated writer, with the probable exception of Cardinal Newman, whose English is as pure as an icicle, can be charged with this offense of faulty grammar, but we found small solace in these reflections.

We are ashamed, and that's all there is to it. Bacon said that writing makes a careful man, as speaking makes a ready man; and when a man writes he should be careful not only of what he writes but also of the structure of his writing.

More than that, it is little less than a crime to maim and distort our wonderful English tongue. English is too frequently written as our high school boys and girls speak it, and that is something appalling to contemplate. Faulty spelling may be easily excused, but faulty construction is not excusable.

When we consider with what magic Tennyson and Shelley and Keats have clothed the English language we see then that it is a thing to adore. To read it in its perfection, and to hear it perfectly spoken, is like music to the ear.

And this leads us to the question: Will the time ever come when our schools will pay more attention to English and less to other things that are not nearly so important?

Memorials.

WE TRUST to see the day when California will have everywhere throughout its length and breadth, beautiful memorials to commemorate all who have by their lives blessed the generation in which they labored, as well as the generations that followed and are still to follow them.

In the public parks of all the cities of the State, and along the golden stretches of the King's Highway, we should have beautiful statues of the men and women who have rendered great service here to their fellow human beings.

There are already numerous memorials to Fray Junipero Serra, who brought civilization and Christianity to California, who laid the corner-stones of the commonwealth and whose hands it was that reared the rafters of our Empire of the Sun, but there should be many more memorials in his honor.

And there are many others who should be remembered. The physicians should build a statue in memory of Dr. Pedro Prat, the first physician who came with the expedition of 1769; the railroad men should erect a memorial to Theodore Judah, the immortal dreamer who blazed the trail for the transcontinental railroad that united the East and West in bands of steel; Los Angeles must build a heroic group in the old Plaza in commemoration of Don Felipe de Neve, who founded the pueblo "by order of the King."

When we have all these monuments, the youth of California and the stranger within our gates shall be able to read our history in bronze and stone, as students read it now from books.

It Takes Two.

AN OLD and a true saying has it that it takes two to make a bargain. Even in marriage this is the case, although it often proves not to be a bargain then, after all. But, as a rule, if both sides fail to agree to the proposition there are no results in business or in love or in war or in anything else.

Now, if we could know the number of brilliant schemes to make money that are hatched out on paper from one man's side of the thing alone, and which never materialize because the other fellow wouldn't play, we would be filled with wonder.

The most noted instance of the kind, perhaps, is the celebrated case of Col. Sellers and his great cure for sore eyes. Col. Sellers invented an eye water and formed a syndicate to sell the stuff, and they figured all to get mighty rich. The colonel stated the fact that there were 300,000,000 people in China and that they all had sore eyes and they would all buy a bottle of the eye water at $1 per bottle. But, the trouble proved to be that the Chinese wouldn't buy the eye water. Outside of that, the colonel's scheme was all right.

Some years ago, too, it flashed into the brilliant mind of a promoter that millions could be made out of a chain of lady barber shops all over the country. That is to say, shops where the barbers would be ladies. Nothing could possibly look like a surer winner than that. The average fool man would be tickled to death to have a lady shave him—a beautiful lady.

And yet the scheme failed for less than two cents on the dollar. Lady barbers proved the biggest fizzle ever known since the Mississippi Bubble. A lady barber, though she has Venus frazzled for looks, can't make enough money to buy herself chewing gum.

Man is a queer animal, isn't he?

Another Mystery.

THERE are so many mysteries in life that we sometimes think that it is almost all a mystery. Nearly everything that we take for granted and of which we make no wonder will prove to be exceedingly mystifying if we stop to analyze it.

Is it not a mystery how so many people not only live at all, but wear good clothes and eat at expensive restaurants and ride in big automobiles? And yet that is only a minor mystery of life.

A bigger mystery than that is how so many men succeeded in getting the wives they have—handsome, good women; patient women, too. There are also many other mysteries on a par with that.

But, here is a mystery, right now, that we defy any reader of this great, religious Sunday magazine to explain.

Listen:

In every town in the United States there is today a shortage of houses. People are running their legs off everywhere between the Atlantic and the Pacific looking for houses to shelter them, and they can't find them.

Where do these people come from and where have they been living? It stands to reason they haven't had houses, or, if they did, they sold them, and they were immediately occupied by other people. There are no more people in this country now than were here last year—that is to say, there were no more families here—and yet everybody seemed to have a house a year ago, while now thousands upon thousands of people have no houses.

We have worked at the celebrated fifteen puzzle, at pigs in clover and all that stuff without injury to our brain works, but this thing of a houseless nation has put us woozy.

Will some kind friend please figure it out for us?

THE NEST.

There stands upon the hill-top's crest,
A home—a one-time family nest,
By love and sacrifice blessed
That memory will hold
The vision of its steep-roofed walls,
The dewy green of terraced falls,
The trees from which the ring dove calls,
Till Life's swift tale is told.

Its garden is a fragrant place;
The lily sways in idle grace,
And brown-eyed Susan bares her face
To wile the breeze to stay;
The rose gives out her perfume sweet
To lure the butterfly, to greet
The humming bird in noonday heat;
The hollyhocks are gay.

But now the stranger dwells therein—
It holds for me no kith nor kin,
And from its windows comes the din
Of unfamiliar song;
But, oh! I pass it in the morn
And in the eve; it is not shorn
Of its old lure. There, I was born
And it was home for long.

JANET GARGAN.

A Strange Case.

A STRANGE case, indeed, is the case of the late William Waldorf Astor. It is a strange case two ways.

First, it is strange that an American should renounce his country to become a British peer or a British anything else, not saying anything against the British. They may be all right, and no doubt they are, but there must be something radically wrong with any man born an American who changes his birthright for anything in this world.

And, in the second place, it is amazing that the British peerage is so cheap a thing that a man can buy his way into it. How can even a dog have respect for it when he knows this fact about it?

The case of Astor proves that the British peerage is not an institution built on "noble" blood or on honor, or on anything but the price in cash. It would have no right to bar Capt. Kidd. But, as far as that goes it didn't bar Harry Morgan, and he was even a worse cut-throat than Kidd.

We know lots of English people who are adorable. Yet, we never knew one yet who wasn't dippy over a lord. It is a strange thing about an otherwise eminently practical people.

But, we can't for the life of us understand how they can have one little atom of respect for the peerage since Astor bought his way with cold cash into it. They say that we Americans are dollar-worshipers, but we are "not in it" with the British.

Well, Launcelot broke up King Arthur's Round Table by falling in love with the King's wife, and maybe now this peerage thing will break up after a few more millionaires buy their way into it.

Let it not be thought, however, that we are speaking ill of the dead. Astor is dead. God rest his soul.

Outshining an Admiral.

THE other day we came down from the green Verdugo hills to bring our wares to the roaring town. It is always a severe strain on us, and we return to the peace and quiet of our glen pretty badly shaken up by the evil noises and the insane rush and clamor of the city. But, that's not what we want to tell you about.

We want to tell you that on this day in question we were standing in front of a big store waiting for a chance to duck safely across the crazy street—a chance that seemed never to arrive. And while we were standing there we saw two gorgeous individuals, straight as two arrows, arrayed side by side on the walk.

We were filled with admiration at the colorful picture the two men made, and were wondering who they could be, and were just concluding that one of the men—the tall, handsome one—was surely the King of Belgium, when we heard a bystander say that it was Admiral So-and-So of our navy.

Well, sir, what did we do but go right up, salute, and tell the tall man that we wanted to have the honor of shaking his hand. We thought we could make the neighbors jealous when we reached home. But, what do you suppose happened? The tall man said he was no admiral, but that he was, instead, the footman for the store. It was the little and less gorgeous man, by far, who was the admiral.

By heck, when a rube comes to town, the best thing for him to do is to keep his curiosity in check. Yet, what is he to do? There ought to be a law to make footmen for stores dress differently, or else force Josephus Daniels to put more gold lace and brass buttons on his admirals.

Folks.

A LADY whom we appear to have offended by our recent remarks about "the provincial East," has written us a severe letter. And, among other things, she says that with all our high talk of California, "It is only a beautiful prison for many a homesick heart."

We are truly sorry if, in our flights of enthusiasm, we have hurt the sensibilities of this good lady, or any one's feelings, for that is a thing we would never deliberately do. We would rather say something to cheer a lonely heart than to wound it. God knows we have all a great need of kindness and gentleness in this rough-and-tumble world.

And, let our correspondent not think that we do not understand her feeling. We, no more than herself, are not native of the golden soil of California. And, oh, it is many the time indeed that we long for the old friends and companions left behind in the far places. Not for the blue hills, our native river or the sweet valleys is it that we long, but for the folks—just the dear, blessed folks that grew up with us and that were, and are, dearer than words can tell.

That's all there is the matter with California—just that we can't have here the folks we used to know. If we could go back and load them all on a train and set them down in a green glen of the Verdugo hills, and have them where we could see them again, morning, noon and night, like it used to be—why, then California would be absolutely perfect and we would never care to set foot outside of it for a thousand years.

We trust that the lady will forgive us for not having thought of all this when we had that raving spell about the "Land o' Heart's Desire."

Genius at the Breakfast Table

There is a story we occasionally hear, of an incident said to have taken place in a certain European town. The statue of a famous man had just been unveiled, and a man present was speaking to the widow of the departed genius, and saying what a privilege it must have been to live with such a person, and to listen to his breakfast table conversation. The widow replied that she had not thought of this for the way he used his knife and fork always upset her nerves.

The point which the story is used to illustrate is that men of genius are nearly always misunderstood and unappreciated, especially by their own families. But there is another fact which it illustrates equally well; namely, that genius may not always be an agreeable breakfast-table companion.

It seems to me that in this instance we may be a little uncertain of the man's genius, if it was not sufficient to enable him to learn to use a knife and fork in a way pleasing to his wife. It is probable, however, that he simply did not think of applying his genius to so small a matter as the use of silverware.

And apparently this is the point at which geniuses, as well as many of us who are not geniuses, fail. We put our best efforts into our work, whether it is writing poems and novels, composing music, painting wonderful pictures; or whether it is the more ordinary employment of running banks, offices, factories and stores, or housekeeping, family sewing and taking care of the children. But while we are devoting ourselves to these perfectly legitimate interests, we often neglect to give any thought to the art of home-making, the noble art of living together happily.

It takes more than a house to make a home. It takes more than a number of people living in the same house to make a family. We think of the wife as being the home-maker, but a wife can not make a home alone. The husband, whether a man of genius or an ordinary mortal (and after all a man of genius is only an ordinary mortal blessed with extraordinary gifts,) must help to make the home if it is to be a happy one.

If his breakfast-table conversation consists in criticism of the toast and coffee, no matter how much of a genius he may be, my sympathy is with the wife. If his morning meal is accompanied by a recital of his latest triumph, if I were the wife I should be glad to hear it—but—for his own sake, the man of genius should not form the habit of continually talking about himself, and repeating the praises bestowed upon him by others, even to his nearest and dearest. If instead, he will give the rest of the family a chance to tell of their successes, too, and devote some time and effort toward helping them achieve successes in their respective spheres, he may discover that while he was mourning as one misunderstood, he has been guilty of misunderstanding and wounding those who love him best; and profiting by this discovery, he will find himself becoming a success in the most important place of all, the home.

Note—If it is the wife, son or daughter, brother or sister, who is the family genius, just change the above to fit yourself.

My Sunland Poppy.

I came from the icy Northland,
  Grim land of Aurora flame;
I heard my soulmate calling—
To Sunland, where the poppy
  Waves its golden head;
Alas 'twas her spirit calling—
  My own true love is dead.

Back, back to the icy Northland,
  With the wanderlust aflame,
Stayed but a moment only
  By the memory of her name.
When northern lights are gleaming
  Her wraith shall softly tread,
Good-by to your golden glories—
My Sunland poppy's dead.

BLENDING—A STORY OF SPIRIT LOVE.

BY WILLIAM STEEN.

THE alienist smiled indulgently upon his aged friend. The latter, leaning forward in his chair, with a little sigh of impatience at the doctor's mental attitude, extended his hands toward the blazing log, but straightened as the other chuckled delightedly.

"Well?" he demanded.

The alienist, with a glance toward the rainstreaked window, forced his chair back a little from the cheering fire.

"I was thinking how incongruous——"

He paused. The sunny twinkle in his eyes dimmed. Something had shaken the veil of the past. Memory had set time and place at naught.

The flickering flames cast grotesque figures around the otherwise unlighted room. Upon the walls they made of the stalwart specialist a palsied, aimless, spreading phantom, and of the old man by his side, a squirming spiral which reached the ceiling only to be bent back. Then the spurting blaze sputtered into a dull red, and the phantasies quieted into barely discernible shadows.

"Well, David?" prompted the old man softly.

"I was thinking how incongruous it is"—the alienist took up the unfinished sentence in a tone of sad reminiscence—"that you, after lecturing to me that matter is nonexistent—that man is spirit, and spirit only—that all our material experiences are faulty beliefs—that after all this, you—you—should attempt to warm your hands at a fire! And don't you, each morning, personally bow the knee to Baal, to Materialism, when you shave?"

The elder man twisted uncomfortably in his chair as he retorted,

"It is explained thus in——"

The alienist laid his hand fondly on the old man's knee.

"Listen, dad! This that I am going to relate may confirm you in your philosophy. As for me, I often wonder whether our philosophies are unequal to our experiences, or whether our experience is inadequate to our philosophy. Same day, I suppose, the sum total of the one will be equal to the sum total of the other. In that day we shall have the expression of true unity."

The red-hot log cracked in two as the window shivered to the whine of the wind. A tiny puff of smoke, momentarily caressing the darkened pathway of innumerable predecessors, escaped over the edge of the mantelshelf. It was wafted up and away.

"Among my patients in the spring of 1877 was a young woman who was the only child of a wealthy widow. Outwardly, she was a fragile little thing—the opposite of her mother. I say 'outwardly,' for she possessed, or was possessed of, an apparently inexhaustible fund of spirit; not the spirit of an esthetic, but the quality we usually designate as 'animal spirits.'

"I doubt whether I can make the case perfectly clear to you, but if you imagine the powerful engines of an Atlantic liner inclosed within the slim, graceful shell of a sailing yacht, and the result of setting those engines in operation, you will appreciate the peculiarity and seriousness of the case. The remedy, of course, was to stop the engines—quiet the superabundant animal spirit—give the energy-racked physique a rest. Simple, but—"

He stretched his leg in a vain attempt to press his foot upon the end of the log.

"Nothing short of a narcotic had the desired effect, and the long-continued use of such means was out of the question. I have seen the young woman's body strained and wearied beyond comprehension by the energy which dominated it. To be 'possessed' has a biblical savor, but it adequately expresses the condition. Understand, though!—the girl was not possessed of a devil in the modern commonplace interpretation—'crazy.' Nor, even, did she suffer with hallucinations, unless to be unconscious of her bodily disruption was hallucination.—You must hold in mind my metaphor of the engine-racked yacht."

The old man nodded his head understandingly.

"Contradictory—absurd, even as it may appear, the straining of the muscular power, the tearing down of the nervous system, in no way diminished the superabundant animal spirits of the girl."

The doctor paused, his expression that of a man mentally reviewing an incredible statement. He continued:

"Thus it could be only a question of time until the body—the yacht—should be demolished, destroyed by excess energy—life—spirit, if you will. To the mother, as to me, such termination was only too obvious. The girl, her mental self being possessed of the feeling of illimitable energy, was completely indifferent to any warnings which her physical perception might grasp: that is, her sight was not envisioned as insight.

"Her mother, religious, intensely orthodox, felt it her duty to waken the girl to the true state of her being. I plainly foresaw this to be impossible. Can you imagine a more improbable situation?—a dying girl, not only imbued with the idea of abundant energy, but actually possessed of it—consumed by the very intensity of her life-flame; her mother, almost her antipode both in physique and energy, religious along strictly orthodox lines almost to the point of fanaticism, striving to impress upon unlimited animal spirits the belief of their immediate extinction."

The older man shifted uneasily in his chair. As if in answer to a personal indictment, the alienist continued rapidly,

"I, I, of course, was opposed to the continual: 'Prepare, prepare; this night thy soul will be required of thee.' The mother, worried beyond endurance at finding that neither she nor her friends could create a conviction of immediately impending disanimation, herself became sick, finally succumbing to nervous prostration to the extent of being confined to her bed.

"The daughter, thus relieved of constant supervision, made many hitherto proscribed acquaintances. Among these was a young man who styled himself a 'mental healer.' He became enamored of the girl, or, as he declared, of her 'superhuman spirituality.' She, in turn, finding his religion of 'Life present' more in keeping with her animal spirits than her mother's 'Life hereafter,' evinced a decided preference for his society.

"At the time I was inclined to look upon the man and his professions with distrust. Subsequent events, however, showed him to be a 'man of vision.' He taught the girl some of his 'Principles of Life,' persuading her to apply or practice them on her mother.

"Whether or not it was as he claimed—that the girl, having immortal spirit beyond her mortal requirements, must apply the surplus to the spiritualizing of less favored mortals in order to retain her own earth body—the fact remains that in energizing her mother she somewhat de-energized herself, it will be, as it now is, unconscious will eventually destroy mortality, and as that which is mortal knows nothing in itself, it will be, as it now is, unconscious of its own gradual destruction.'—a statement which with certain modifications seems to be partially borne out in the case of the girl."

The specialist again gazed at the smoldering fire as if to read in its glowing heart the history of the past or the secret of the future. The old man, dexterously, with the poker, brought the two ends of the log into juxtaposition. At the little ensuing burst of flame, the alienist raised his eyes to the old hand grasping the poker, then to the other hand which was stroking the gray hair of its owner in a contemplative manner.

"I should like to have known that young couple, David, especially the young man," said the older of the two friends.

"Yes,—he was sufficiently given to enunciating ambiguous dogmas to stimulate even your spiritual taste."

This was said banteringly.

"I think, David, the ambiguity lay in your attempted material grasp of the spiritual. I will venture that you have a purely material explanation of the recovery of mother and daughter. For the happy recovery was complete, was is not?"

"The recovery was complete, dad, also the happiness, even to the point of marriage. As to the material explanation—well, at the time—but listen. Before and after their marriage the young people devoted themselves to the teaching and practice of 'Truth.' In slashing materialism or in healing the sick they made liberal use of the old lady's material wealth. To this, although she could not abandon her 'earthly beliefs,' the old lady did not object, her complaisance due, no doubt, to the fact that her unorthodox son-in-law was singularly honest in every sense of the word. Though I was far from being 'in accord' with his philosophy of life, yet I felt a keen satisfaction in his friendship. We pursued our respective thought paths, which, though divergent, were ever linked by friendship's sidetrails."

The doctor's voice grew low, and the old man bent closer with glistening eye.

"But there came a time when the trails closed."

"He died," whispered the old man.

"He died," echoed the other.

The doctor seized the poker and thrust it at the glowing log as the window quaveringly acknowledged the spirit of the night.

"He did not die!" the old man asserted fiercely.

Another little puff of smoke curled up, hesitated under the marble edge, then floated into the room.

The alienist spoke evenly.

"Queer mystical ideas he had. One was that his wife would be blessed with a child—that her superhuman spirituality would culminate in that experience. Understand, dad?—'blessed of the gods?'"

"Holy motherhood," breathed the old man.

"Some seven months after my final handclasp with my friend, the old lady, who had taken her son-in-law's death much to heart, paid me a visit. She was greatly perturbed. Her daughter, who persistently refused to think of her husband as being other than simply lost to material sense, was obsessed with the idea that she was to become a mother.

"I comforted the old lady with my opinion that her daughter would soon recognize the idea as being mental self-deception. But three months later, the mother, deeply distressed, assured me that without doubt her daughter had stated the truth. She begged me to speak to the young woman.

"In a semi-professional way, and as a lifelong friend of the family, I had a confidential talk with the young widow. She was perfectly unembarrassed, explaining that during the 'visibility' of her husband, though their 'desire' was creative, they had yet unwillingly, by their mental attitude, prevented the objectification in mortal form of their 'desire.' Having lost his 'visibility,' the husband had gained much in spiritual insight. This insight he had impressed upon her mind or spirit. The result of this 'blending'—the term is emphatically theirs—was that now their 'supreme desire' would manifest itself.

"Much of her explanation of their previous mental errors was unintelligible to me. As nearly as I could make out, she held matter to be the reflection of spirit in the same way that, under given conditions, the detail of surrounding landscape is reflectd on the surface of a lake, the reflection' being of value only because proving the existence of the real. The 'objectification' of spirit in the material form of a child was therefore desirable to her because the mortal child would be destined to carry on the teachings of the 'invisible' father."

Again the doctor stared fixedly into the fire as if there to find the solution of a problem. The old man sat bent forward, his palms on his knees. He, too, looked into the flame.

The doctor continued, slowly, sadly:

"With my knowledge of obstetrics and its kindred sciences, how could I accept such explanation!"

The old man jerked up in his seat. With eye flashing and fist clenched, he demanded:

"You do not doubt her honor?"

The doctor, apparently oblivious of the outburst, went on:

"In time the promise was fulfilled. I was not there. Her mother was not there. She was alone at night. In the morning she went to her mother's room, her arms bent as though bearing a fragile burden. Her mother looked—looked—but there was nothing.

"Fearing, she knew not what, she pretended she saw. Later, I came, but there was nothing clasped to that young bosom. And the young woman would accept no services from us.

"Convinced that it had come, we searched—searched slyly, for we pretended that she had it by her side. We found nothing—nothing but the unmistakable signs of parturition. For two days we humored her, and searched. On the third day the old lady, torn with anxiety, could not leave her bed. It was in the evening. As I studied the young mother, she asked quietly, 'Why this deception, my friend?'

"Taken aback, I could only say, 'Deception?'

"'Yes,' she answered. 'Or, to you, does our babe partake of the invisibility of his father?'

in size."

The old man caught his breath sharply.

"Nor any sound?"

"None."

The two men looked long into the fire. The log was almost consumed, but they understanding in her eyes.

"'I had not dreamed—I see him so plainly myself. Go, then, tell mother I understand. She thinks I have destroyed—that I am unbalanced—. Bring her to me.'

"When, with the old lady supported on my arm, I reached the room the young mother was going through the motion of placing a babe to her breast. I could see no babe, but I saw the full bosom diminish

"I replied evenly, 'It does.'

She spoke calmly, yet there was a little, a very little, wonder mingled with a grave paid no heed. Presently the old man spoke.

"Where are they now?"

"Gone—all are gone. The extraordinary conditions so preyed upon the old lady's mind that I persuaded her to take a sea trip. The daughter accompanied her. The steamer was wrecked by an iceberg. All on board were lost."

After a time the old man quavered.

"The invisible could not be lost?"

The alienist was a long time in replying.

"It is my studied conviction that it never existed."

The dying embers fell apart in the feeble flame as the old man objected spiritedly:

"But—The Signs!"

The flickering shadows on the wall faded into nothingness as, kissing the blackened shelf, another wisp of smoke passed from under the edge. The doctor's low answer was broken in the roar of the wind:

"——material—'agitation of matter'—the quivering of the reflection on the surface of the lake."

The Valley of Silversheen.

There's a valley in the mountains,
Far away from city strife,
Where the children and the home-folks
Live a happy, peaceful life.

Where the sunshine of the summer
Brings a harvest full and free—
And the sleighbells of the winter
Ring a cheerful melody.

To this valley and its beauty
Go my thoughts in memory dear,
And I seem to see the village
In a vision pure and clear.

And I seem to hear the voices
Of the friends I used to know,
As they bid me ever welcome,
Be my fortune high or low.

Silversheen! My little valley!
God protect you from all harm—
Keep the hearts so true and honest,
Free from sorrow and alarm.

Keep our loved ones safe in honor,
Keep them ever staunch and true—
Watch and guard them, Silver Valley,
Some day I'll return to you!

Some day when the sun is shining,
And the meadow larks are there;
Some day when the apple blossoms
With their fragrance fill the air,

Some day when the girl I love so,
Watches for me down the way—
I'll be coming, Little Valley,
I'll be coming back to stay!

Dearest valley! I have wandered,
Far beyond your kindly care;
I, at times, have almost stumbled
Down to hell and vileness there.

But the thought of "Silver Valley,"
And the girl who trusted me—
Held me true to God and manhood
Bade me strive courageously.

So, I'll soon be starting homeward,
In the finest time of year;
When the harvest fields are golden,
And the whippoorwill sings near.

And I'm asking God to help me,
Live an honest, useful life
In the dearest little valley,
With the sweetest little wife.

As the years roll ever onward,
They shall bring us many joys;
In the laughter of our children
In the wealth of girls and boys.

And old age shall find us peaceful,
With God's blessing as our due—
In the Vale of Silver Shadows,
Where the hearts are tried and true.

MARRIED LIFE OF HELEN AND WARREN

Their Trip Abroad is Followed by the Acute Depression of Getting Home.

BY MABEL HERBERT URNER.

"WHERE d'you want these trunks?" demanded Warren, holding open the door for the houseman who was dragging the steamer trunks off the elevator.

"In my room. Oh, be careful—don't scar the wall!"

The trunks deposited in Helen's bedroom, the houseman pocketed his tip and shuffled out.

"Dear, you'll have to lift out these trays before you go." Helen was pulling down the stiff clamps with a button hook.

"Now take it easy. Don't try to get everything done in one swat." The trays on the bed, he shrugged into his overcoat. "You're going to write Mrs. O'Grady? She'll be here tomorrow?"

"Yes, but I must get things straight," following him out to the elevator. "I can't unpack in all this dust."

"Well, don't overdo it," punching the bell with his cane. "I'll be home about 6:30—we'll go to Shirley's for dinner."

Alone in the dusty, dismantled apartment, Helen gazed about with deepening depression. The "let down" of getting home that follows most trips was strong upon her.

After the glamour and excitement of six weeks abroad, she shrank from the monotonous, colorless routine of home life.

Out of her traveling suit, into a house gown—and she started on the front room. Everything was powdered with dust, and the air heavy with a mustiness that comes from disuse.

Raising the windows she picked up a paper that lay on the sill. Saturday the eighth—the morning they sailed! The very date brought back all the joyous excitement of "getting off"—the glowing anticipation of the trip.

Some steamer tags lay on the desk, and the calendar pad still announced "Saturday 8." Everything was a poignant reminder of that thrilled morning.

If she could only go back! If it were Saturday the eighth instead of Wednesday two months later.

She tried to throw off her depression with work, but a sick dejection claimed her. Just then she almost hated her life and her home. Anything seemed preferable to the deadly monotony that lay before her.

Somehow she had vaguely thought this trip would change everything. Just what she had expected she could not have put into words—except that things would be "different." Now the trip was over—but nothing was "different." She was back to the same commonplace, humdrum existence.

If Mrs. O'Grady could only be reached by phone—if she could come today! Being alone intensified her depression.

And a maid! That problem loomed darkly, but she would not approach it yet. They could dine out for a week or so.

She threw down her dust cloth to answer the kitchen bell.

"Good morning, Mrs. Curtis," beamed the grocer's man, his order book held expectantly. "Glad to see' you back."

"We just got in this morning. No, I don't want anything. We're not keeping house yet," closing the door resentfully.

For the next few days she would be hounded by tradesmen. The baker, butcher and iceman are ever alert to their customers' return.

Leaving the kitchen she paused at an ominous rustle from the shelf over the ice box. A timorous investigation disclosed a mouse-eaten package of cereal.

And she had cautioned Mrs. O'Grady to leave nothing that would bring mice or roaches! The whole shelf was littered with the debris which she now cleaned up and replaced with fresh shelf paper.

It was another hour before she finally finished dusting. The bare floors looked dismantled and cheerless, but she could not unroll and lay the rugs until the place was thoroughly cleaned.

Reluctantly she approached the dreaded task of unpacking. Everything she took out brought wistful memories.

How she loved London! How far away and long ago and almost dreamlike the trip seemed now.

If she were only packing instead of unpacking! For a moment she pretended that she was. They were sailing tomorrow! She was putting things in—not taking them out. Yes, three nightgowns would be enough—she would buy more in London. And this old silk petticoat would do for the steamer.

The phone, strangely hoarse after its two months' silence, broke harshly upon this childish makebelieve.

"Hello. . . . Oh, Mrs. Harding! How did you know we were back? . . . Yes, this morning at 10:30. . . . Yes, a wonderful trip. . . . Oh, yes, so much! . . . Yes, we're both well." . . .

Fifteen minutes of stereotyped effusions before she could break away. How many times in the next few days would she have to answer "Did you have a pleasant trip? Did you enjoy the voyage?"

How much less tiresome life would be, could we dispense with the polite inanities.

Back in her room, the charm of her reverie broken, she hastened her unpacking—guiltily conscious of wasted time.

As she shook out her white cloth suit something fell from the pocket—a Cheshire Cheese menu and a programme from The Empire.

Another pause as she brooded over these souvenirs. That wonderful dinner and evening. Again that feeling of long ago! The programme was dated just three weeks ago—yet it seemed years. The day they had stalled seemed much more recent than that night at The Empire.

The wardrobe trunk empty of her clothes, she began on the tray of the other trunk. That liberty scarf for Carrie! Two pounds ten—much more than she had wanted to spend on her sister-in-law, but Warren had insisted on something "good."

The half-dozen Spittlefield ties, four and six each, for Lawrence, she had also bought under protest. The thirty-shilling hand bag for Mrs. Stevens—but she had kept Pussy Purr-mew.

The real lace collar for Warren's mother, the wrist watch for Edith, the folding umbrella for Aunt Emma—something for all the family.

With all the expense of traveling, Helen had never felt less like buying presents. Yet it is an unwrittn law of a trip abroad that everyone must be "remembered."

She worked on through the long dismal afternoon. Outside it was drizzling—and the dripping gloom contributed to her despondency.

It was 6 o'clock when Warren called up.

"See here, Kitten, I'm so infernally busy—can't get up to dinner. I'll have something down here."

"Oh, dear, couldn't I come down? I've been alone all day."

"No—no," impatiently. "I'll just have a snack. Now you have a real meal at the Wilton. Wager you didn't have any lunch. What's that? No, not very late. I'll be home around 10 o'clock."

Dinner alone—after this long desolate day! Waves of gloom engulfed her. She shrank from the very thought of dining out alone. Now that Warren was not coming, even the exertion of dressing seemed monumental.

A forlorn search through the pantry yielded a can of salmon, a package of stale crackers, a bottle of olives and a withered bulletlike lemon.

The silver locked up, she made out with a kitchen fork and spoon. It was not an attractive nor nourishing meal, but she had no appetite.

Again at the trunks she worked on through the evening. By 10 o'clock everything was unpacked and in place, her room straight, and the soiled clothes put to soak. If Mrs. O'Grady should not come!

Tired, headachy, and depressed almost to the verge of tears, she was finally ready for bed.

Too weary to sleep, she lay there in brooding discouragement until almost an hour later she heard Warren's key in the door.

"Hello, turned in?" Switching on the lights in the bedroom he flung himself on the window seat. "Jove, I've had a day and a half."

"Dear, you must be tired," shading her eyes from the sudden glare.

"No, I feel fine! Getting things in shape, too." He fairly exuded a vigorous energy. "Good to be back—and on the job!"

With his usual dispatch he had his bath and was ready for bed.

"Well, how'd you get along?" as he turned off the lights. "Wear yourself out?"

"No," faintly, "but I've had the blues. Dear, didn't you feel—oh, I don't know how to express it—the 'let down' of getting back?"

"Wasn't any 'let down' around that office. I've been driven every minute—string of people in."

"And I've been here all alone—too blue for words."

"Blue!" explosively. "Here you've had a ripping two months' trip and you start whining the minute you get home."

"Oh, I know it seems ungrateful—but I can't help it. Your life is so much more wholesome—you see so many people! You don't know what it is to be here alone all day."

"Well, I'd like to be alone long enough to get caught up. Big day tomorrow, too. A 10:30 appointment with Bradwell, lunch with Judge Martin, and Tracey's coming in at 3 o'clock. By George, forgot to call up Henderson!"

Then as he settled down and shouldered up the covers,

"Mighty good bed. We didn't strike anything like this."

Helen, staring into the darkness, was thinking of his tomorrow—and hers. The stimulus of his varied interests and the people he would meet! While she faced the dreary monotony of house cleaning alone—except for the inspirational companionship of Mrs. O'Grady!

SOUTHLAND'S SEA OF MYSTERY.

BY PERCIVAL J. COONEY.

THE Salton Sea, or Salton "Sink" as it was once called, holds first place among the numerous and striking natural wonders that make the Imperial Valley one of the most interesting and unique sections of the great Southland.

This lonely body of water, lying 169 feet below the level of the sea, is not only intertwined with the latter-day history and development of the valley, but holds within its placid depths the key to the archaeological history of the entire region. The center of much that is interesting and romantic in this region is located on Mullet Island and no trip to the valley is considered complete nowadays that does not include a stop at this quaint spot which is located on the eastern shore of this mysterious inland sea.

The Spanish pioneers of the coast in the mission days knew all about the Salton sink and its wonderful salt deposits. Don Antonio Coronel, the intimate friend of Helen Hunt Jackson, author of "Ramona," informed the late J. W. Guinn, the historian of Southern California, that on more than one occasion he had visited the sink with careretas drawn by oxen for the purpose of obtaining rock salt which they quarried out and carried back, for the use of the herds of cattle on the old Spanish grants.

Those were the days when the Colorado Desert, as the Imperial Valley was then called, held a place in the minds of men similar to that now occupied by Death Valley. Even the indomitable Apache feared its terrible desolation. Some years ago old Jimmie Redfoot, one of the oldest Indians on the Yuma reservation, and now departed to the happy hunting grounds, told the writer, with considerable glee, of how in his father's and grandfather's time, the Yumas made the desert serve them in their never-ending struggle with the Apaches. Uncertain as to when their enemies would make a raid the Yumas always prepared for it by filling a number of skins with water, carrying them miles into the desert and burying under some mesquite trees. When the tidings came that the Apache raiders were approaching, they would take to the desert, carrying a supply of provisions, and rendezvous where the water was concealed. The pursuing Apaches often followed them as far as the sand hills on the edge of the desert, but daunted by the scene of desolation that met their eyes, they would return, and content themselves with carrying off as many of the Yumas' horses as they could find.

Yet the desert was crossed twice during historic times by American military expeditions, that of Gen. Kearney in the autumn of 1846, and by the Mormon expedition a year later. Lieut. Emory of the Kearney expedition kept a diary of his experiences on the route and it is still on file in the archives in Washington. He speaks of the "Blistering days and chilling nights," of how many times they traveled only at night, and marvels at the fact that the horses of the expedition died one by one while crossing the desert, while the mules came through unscathed. The expedition passed within a short distance of Salton Sea, and Emory mentions it, giving it its Spanish name the "Laguna Salada."

A few months ago a rancher along the Alamo River dug up a rusted cavalry sword which bore the date of manufacture 1821. This relic is now in the possession of Mr. C. T. Gibson of Imperial city and was undoubtedly lost by either the Kearney expedition or the Mormon battalion. As it is a cavalry sword of the type known to have been used by the dragoons of that day, and as Kearney's command contained a contingent of the First United States Dragoons, it was probably dropped by the former. The fact that the Americans had lost their horses and were mounted an mules would perhaps explain their defeat when a few days later they encountered the Californians, cavalry under Don Andres Pico at San Pasqual, near Escondido.

The Desert Has Seen Dark and Stormy Times.

EVEN in prehistoric times before the eyes of the Indian had gazed on the Colorado Desert, this waste land had seen many and strange vicissitudes. The tourist, as today he climbs in a motor car through the clay-cliffed gorges on each side of the Alamo and the New River, the valley's two water courses, cannot fail to notice that the vertical water-cut adobe walls are striped horizontally with alternate layers of dark and light earth. These layers, the geologists tell us, are the result of slow centuries of deposits. The lighter layers were formed while the valley was an inland sea, while the darker layers, which contain no evidence of life of any kind, were deposited by the rock scouring winds during the long periods when the valley was a desert. In the lighter layers may be found remains of sea shells and other indications of marine life.

Fishing Boat Stranded on Mullet Island by Retreat of Water.

For centuries possibly the Colorado River would flow quietly to the Gulf of California, and gradually build up a sand bar across its mouth. Then some spring flood would cause a washout in the river's banks further north and in a few hours the whole torrent would be flowing northwards towards the Salton Sea. The desert would become an inland sea and so it would remain possibly for centuries till some great flood would bite out a shorter way to the ocean and again the sea was drained and relapsed to a desert region.

Changed from Desert to Sea Fifty Times.

AND it was during these periods that the strata were built up which contain evidence of sea life. According to the testimony of the adobe cliffs, the Imperial Valley in prehistoric times has changed from desert to inland sea, and vice versa, at least fifty times.

In spite of the coming of the white man and the settlement of the valley, the whimsical and turbulent Colorado could not forget its old trick of whirling about, turning its back on the sea and filling the basin. In 1908, it burst its bonds and sent a long finger of water northward from the border that soon reached the Salton Sea. Soon the torrent formed a waterfall. Then could be seen in miniature a repetition of the process by which nature carved out the great canyons of the Yellowstone and the Colorado. Back towards the border the face of the waterfall retreated at the rate of about a mile a day, cutting across ranches, and leaving vertical adobe walls on both sides of a gorge fifty to two hundred yards in width. To cut down the great Colorado Canyon through the eternal rock required millions of years; to cut down the canyon of the New River through its hard adobe formation required only days; but barring the difference in the size of the torrent and the difference in the hardness of the material, the process was the same. Here and there in open spaces in the bed of the New River stand great masses of detached adobe, pinnacles and towers, that remind one very much of similar formations of rock in the great canyon of the Colorado.

The great flood of 1908, the terror it brought to the pioneers and its subsequent conquest by the Southern Pacific are events too recent to need recapitulation. But it is not generally known that the threatened disaster proved to be the proverbial cloud with the silver lining, and that as a result of it the ranchers of the valley came into possession of their water system, which up to that time had been owned by a private corporation. When the waters of the Colorado raging wildly down the new-cut river bed to the Salton Sea finally covered the top of the smokestacks of the Liverpool Salt Company, they started a chain of events that freed the Imperial rancher from paying tribute to a water company.

The factory, located on the banks of the "sink," had been in successful operation for some time and found a ready market for its product in the coast cities. When the factory was submerged, the Liverpool company held that the California Land and Development Company, which owned the headgate ditches and the whole irrigation system of the valley, was responsible, inasmuch as it was while carrying out orders from the company that the break occurred. The salt company immediately entered suit against the California Land and Development Company for $900,000.

The bondholders of the land company becoming alarmed also went into court and asked for a receiver, and the Southern Pacific Railway, which had a large bill against the company for expenses incurred in attempting to stop the flood, also entered suit against the irrigation company. Eventually the Southern Pacific obtained judgment and the entire possessions of the California Land and Development Company were sold by sheriff's sale and bought in by the railroad. The Southern Pacific then paid off all the claims of the salt works and the irrigation company's bondholders.

Imperial Valley Ranchers Get Water at Cost.

THE entire plant of the irrigation company, consisting of ditches, flumes, headgates, dams, bridges and dredgers, was then offered to the settlers of the valley for $3,000,000. After some hesitation the offer was accepted. The railroad company accepted a note for that amount which has forty years to run and is backed by the organized inhabitants of the valley. Since that time the Imperial Valley ranchers secure their water practically at cost, as the water rates are paid to an organization which they own themselves.

While the area of the sea and its depth below sea level vary somewhat, on the whole it is sinking. This is particularly noticeable on the eastern shore where the approach is level, while on the western side the mountains drop right down into the Mud Volcanoes Near Salton Sea—Nature's Safety Valves.

Salton Sea is the mud volcanoes, another undoubted proof of the volcanic origin of the whole region. These are located about three-quarters of a mile inland from Mullet Island, and cover about ten acres—a small wilderness of mud cones and hot water. They are of all sizes, from the little cone born only yesterday, bravely spouting steam, to the great mound of mud sixteen feet in height, that has taken several years to build. All of the volcanoes emit steam, some jerkily, some in a steady stream, others steam and mud alternately. Many of them give out gases strongly tainted with sulphurous odors. At all times they can be heard a short distance spitting, coughing and grumbling, but at the time of slight earthquake disturbances, such as the valley experienced this spring, their roaring can be heard for miles and the odor of gas is so strong that it is difficult to approach them, except from the windward side. Opinion as to the cause varies, but the best scientific view is that they are openings located over a great crack in the earth's crust. The surface water percolating down the fault or break at length reaches a depth where the rocks are hot—hot enough to turn the water to steam. The steam rising takes with it a certain quantity of mud, which on arrival at the top helps to build up the mud cone which surrounds the vent.

Some years ago, there was in the valley considerable sentiment in favor of doing something to retain the Salton Sea at its present level and present area (about eighteen miles long and nine miles wide at its greatest point.) Undoubtedly it has a moderating influence on the high summer temperatures in the northern part of the valley. But the rapid and continual increase in land values has overcome this sentiment. Land that in 1908 sold for $15 and $16 an acre is now renting for $30 an acre, cash in advance. And, as for the heat, the pioneer of the Salton Sea laughs when you mention it and asks you mildly if you know that it is the heat that makes dollars grow.

It is probable that the shrinkage of the Salton Sea will continue till it becomes as it was in the old Spanish days, a salt "sink" with a pool of brackish water in the center. But underneath, it is certain, lie millions of cubic yards of rock salt, and with the passing of the sea it will not be long till the smokestacks of another salt works rise on the banks of the sink. With the immense deposits of mineral paint close at hand, and a veritable mountain of pumice stone only a short distance away it is within the bounds of possibility that the Salton basin will not only be a great agricultural area, but the center of considerable industrial activity in the years to come.

Care of the Body.

light requires for its existence pure air, and the Old World has little of it left. When you are in Rome again, and stand upon that hill where all good romanticists go at sunset, look out and notice how dense is the atmosphere between you and St. Peter's dome. That same thick air is all over Europe, all around the Mediterranean, even over in Mesopotamia and by the banks of the Ganges. It has been breathed and burned and battle-smoked for 10,000 years. Ride up and over the high table lands of Montana—one can still ride there for days without seeing a trace of humanity—and how clear and scentless, how absolutely intangible that sky-blown sunshot atmosphere. You breathe it without feeling it, you see through it a hundred miles and the picture is not blurred by it."

To this I add that in high altitudes, on deserts, in Arctic regions and on the ocean men do not "catch colds." Immediately on returning to houses and civilization they have a running at the nose, with some fever. This means that their systems have sufficient resistance to expel the foreign matter they have breathed in. This is the explanation of a "cold." Then "medical science" seeks to suppress the healing process, and the foundation is laid for chronic disease.

Arctic explorers have even been known to "catch cold" on opening a bundle of blankets from home, and inhaling the invisible offscourings of civilization. This has falsely been attributed to "germs." Everything is "germs" nowadays.

The lesson is plain. It is to places where the air is pure, not to misnamed "health resorts," that health-seekers should go. You may not always be able to do that, but the nearer you get to it the better.

Eating When Not Hungry.

IT IS not the infrequent indulgences that count, but the regular overconsumption of food, or eating of wrong food.

If you have a strong digestion, the effects may only begin to show themselves after a long maltreatment of the stomach.

Thus, you may for years eat oatmeal porridge with sugar and cream, or mix sours and starches, without noticing any appreciable ill-effect, but after a time acidity causes the lining of the stomach to suffer from chronic inflammation. This is followed by a gastric ulcer, and perhaps, later on, if the conditions are favorable for its growth, it may become a cancer.

Eating when not hungry is one of the great follies of what we call civilization.

"Sinking at the stomach" is not a call of nature for food, but for oxygen. Instead of eating, or taking a "pick-me-up," indulge in a little exercise and deep breathing, and take a glass of water.

Real hunger is when the mouth waters for a crust of dry bread. How many city dwellers know what real hunger is, and the pleasure of satisfying it? Only those who know the hunger that goes with health can appreciate the enjoyment of a simple meal of plain food, an enjoyment unknown to the jaded gourmand, who tickles his palate with an "appetizer."

Moderation in eating is really a luxury. Only those who have fasted appreciate to what a refined keenness of mental and physical senses and bouyancy of spirit one may attain.

It is in the power of all to achieve health, with long life and efficiency, but it must be earned. There is no royal road either to health or knowledge.

Even those who have so abused themselves, by diet, or drugs, that they have acquired organic disease, and are apparently hopeless wrecks, may greatly improve their condition.

This may be done by care in regard to alimentation and elimination—by eating in moderation of natural foods, that have not been deprived of the necessary mineral elements, and by eliminating waste matter, through the various depurating organs. To insure proper elimination there must be some daily exercise, and fresh air must be breathed.

In other words, you must keep the out-go equal to the in-take, or you will store up clinkers, that will block your furnace, prevent your machinery from working harmoniously, lessen your efficiency, and shorten your life.

Mercenary Medicine.

FOLLOWING is from the Truth Teller:

"In an interview with Dr. Richard C. Cabot, published in the Boston Post of August 2, that distinguished high light of allopathy says that his kind of doctor would not use osteopathy if he believed in it, because it requires too much muscular work. 'He would rather dose,' says Dr. Cabot.

"Dr. George Starr White once reported to us that a doctor acquaintance, whom he was trying to induce to give up serum injections, said, in reply: 'Show me how I can get $5 per dose for prescriptions and I will quit injecting.'"

It is no wonder that honorable members of the medical profession feel a growing sense of disgust at the swamping of the profession by commercialism and political intrigue, fostered by the A.M.A., under its present unworthy management.

Signs, Wise and Otherwise

by Winona Breazeale-Johnson

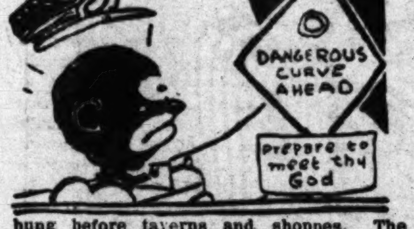
DO YOU believe in signs?

Whether you do or not, you could not help pausing to laugh—or wonder—at certain signs which meet the eye in this big city of ours, and the very fact that no subtlety is intended, as a rule, makes them all the more enjoyable.

From the very beginning of time, man has set representation, or signs, to inform the way-farer, and we find many interesting references to various signs in the Bible.

Since the masses, in early days, were illiterate, signs took the form of objects, or pictures, often crudely designed and gaudily colored, but serving their mission as indicators. We find Habakkuk enjoining: "Make it plain . . . that he may run that readeth it."

Thus signs in olden times often took the shape of animals, etc., cut from wood, or beaten from metal, fancifully colored, and hung before taverns and shoppes. The quaint names, such as "Ye Signe of Ye Purple Hen," or "Ye Spotted Cow" thus became known throughout the country, and the place thrived accordingly. In one of La Fontaine's fables, he says tersely, "The sign brings customers," and that still holds good today—but if said customers should take literally some of the signs of today in our midst, the question is, would they remain customers?



Out on West Eleventh street, a barber shop thus advises passers-by through means of a neat placard in the window: "Ladies Shoes Polished on the Inside." With silken socks rapidly becoming passe in swell circles because of the cost, methinks the customer who runs as she reads will continue to run past unless particularly desirous of having her shoes neatly polished on the inside regardless of the indignation of said socks.

It is down on South Main street that a certain firm puts candor above all else. "Why go elsewhere to be cheated?" they demand ingenuously, adding cordially, "Come in here!" And yet we are told that the days of candor among business firms are past!

Fit companion to this firm are two colored brethren who operate a small real estate office farther out. "Come unto us," they implore, "and we will do you Good." I would not doubt it, myself.

Shakespeare speaks of "An ale-house's paltry sign," but a certain dealer in liquid refreshments whose place has closed since July 1, has a terse sign which is too striking to be paltry. Nailed to the door is a placard which comments:

NO BOOZE
NO WORK
NO NOTHING

During the recent Victory Loan campaigns, the striking placards issued by the government met the eye on every vacant wall or stared from windows, their biding-places adding unconsciously to the meaning. One of the most interesting of these was fastened over an undertaker's sign downtown and said significantly:

SURE, WE'LL FINISH THE JOB
JONES BROTHERS,
UNDERTAKERS.

But the unintentional placing of one of these stirring posters which amused passers-by the most was on the gate post of a local cemetery, where it blatantly shouted:

WAKE UP! YOUR COUNTRY NEEDS YOU!

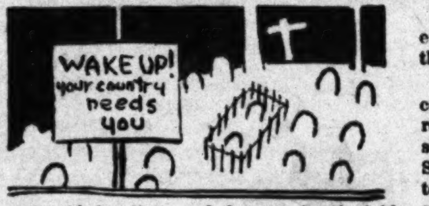
One of the amusing examples of unconscious humor in the placing of signs is apparent to the sharp-eyed spectator with a sense of humor when he passes a certain building where a bakery turns out its spicy goodies. Above the shop, an earnest religious organization keeps open house for poor old derelicts, and does an incalculable good. But the two signs dangling over the building's venerable countenance read:



WAKE UP! your country needs you

TRY OUR MINCE PIES, AND PUT YOUR TRUST IN THE LORD.

"Our coffee is bully, so is our beans," declares a sign down on First street.

Two gentlemen of assorted shades ply a brisk trade with brushes and bottles on Broadway, and the sign which stops people advertises, which they frankly are.

SHINES, BLACK AND TAN.

"War relics welcome," hails a notice over a certain doorway. Kind o'out-spoken, eh, when some of the so-called relics might resent being called so?

In the suburbs an all-round artisan aims to please everybody:

W. A. SMITH,
BLACKSMITH,
GOLDSMITH,
WATCH REPAIRER.

English as she is spoke is often puzzling to the foreigner, who fails to realize that one or two letters out of place may change an ordinary sign to one provocative of a hearty laugh on the part of the reader. Thus on a certain menu card in a Japanese cafe you may read, listed among the vegetables,

CORNS ON THE EAR.

Cognomens furnish a good deal of amusement when displayed in certain signs, all the funnier because of their unconsciousness of the ridiculous. In Santa Barbara I saw a sign which sounded for all the world like one constructed especially for a movie farce: "Rip and Stitch, Tailors." A certain business man y-clept "Schuck" here in Los Angeles ingenuously uses his name to proclaim his special method: "The others don't amount to Shucks," he declares, which I claim is clever.

"Certain signs come before certain events." Thus Cicero, sagely. I'll say they do.

A certain unique character who until recently resided in Los Angeles, for years roamed the city and its suburbs for the unselfish purpose of posting up signs from the Scriptures containing precepts and warnings to the unrighteous. His choice of location was indiscriminate, but he was unconsciously responsible for a motor mix-up on one of our nearby mountain trails.

The eminently proper chauffeur drove the big machine as carefully as possible, but with mounting concern as the road became steeper and the precipices more abrupt.

Finally he drew up to scan a sign looming before them, placed by the Auto Club, and unconsciously aided by this poor old religious fanatic. The chauffeur, a colored gentleman, struck right there. In a state of collapse, he refused to proceed, for beneath the auto warning, "Dangerous Curve Ahead," he read the solemn words: "Prepare to meet thy God."

DANGEROUS CURVE AHEAD.
PREPARE TO MEET THY GOD.

Southland's Sea of Mystery.

water. During the last five years the water has retreated about a mile a year, leaving the alkali-crusted adobe filled with great cracks, as the mineral salts in the soil harden under the sun's rays.

In spite of its unfavorable appearance, slimy, salt-encrusted and filled with yawning gaps, it is eagerly grabbed by homesteaders, and location stakes and the humble cabins of the settlers, often built of boxes covered with flattened tins from kerosene cans, follow up the retreating waters. There are always more claimants than land, and disputes are frequent. Last spring one eager homesteader planted his stakes in the water, while another who had his eye on the same land, waited till the water had retreated, beyond the other's stakes then planted his stakes, and made location in his own name. The result was a fist-fight, threats and few revolver shots. Most of the new settlers along the Salton Sea beach took sides, and even the women were going armed. For a time it seemed that a pitched battle was imminent, when the sheriff's deputies from El Centro swooped down on the contestants, carried all of them before the court where they were persuaded to give a written pledge to leave their differences to be settled by the slower process of the law.

The disputed cases, many of which will doubtless appear later in the Federal courts, will, it is understood, be precedent-making, as they will decide a question that is a very vital one in the north end of the valley. "May a homesteader set his stakes and location notice in land that is covered or partly covered by water? And if he may not, will the presence of water in the cracks in the soil make his location illegal?"

Salton Sea District is Date Producing Land.

IT MAY be amazing to the outsider, who has heard much of the terrific heat of the valley, to find that men and women will voluntarily subject to the great discomforts of pioneer life for at least four years in order to secure a homestead along the Salton Sea littoral, but very few people are aware that the reports of the United States Department of Agriculture state empuhatically that about the Salton Sea lies the largest area of date-producing land in the country, and that there is no doubt that in time to come, by reason of its altitude, climate and location, the Salton basin will be the center of the date-producing industry in the United States. To the man who is willing to pay the price—a few years of toil and hardship—the acquirement of a strip of the Salton Sea territory means eventually not only a competence but a great deal more. Year by year the waters are going back, and pushing close behind them is the eight to ten mile strip of desert dotted with the new homes. Year by year behind the desert strip, the green fields, too, are marching on toward the west.

More and more is the sea being visited by tourists who come to the valley, attracted by the story of its romantic vicissitudes. Particularly do they visit Mullet Island, which is rapidly becoming the favorite Sunday resort of the valley—though Mullet Island is no longer an island as the retreating waters have left it high and dry, and autos now roll across a sandy roadway where once fishing boats landed.

Mullet Island is Fast Becoming a Regular Resort.

THE island is owned by Capt. Davis of Niland and is rapidly being equipped with accommodations, which are making it more and more attractive to visitors. Fish dinners (for the captain has two steam launches on the lake, and supplies the local trade of the valley with mullet) are served, and the old wharf which once served as a landing place for the boats has found a new usefulness as a dancing platform. On the top of the island is a shady ramada, where picnic parties can get a good view of the sea, and lunch in comfort. The temperature during the heated season is generally from 10 to 20 deg. cooler than in the valley towns, and the bi-weekly dances are well patronized by the young folks who come from all parts of the valley by auto.

Undoubtedly the island and the Salton Sea are located on the line of the great San Andreas fault. Signs of volcanic activity are everywhere visible. Mullet Island itself is but a great mound of torn and twisted blocks of lava, and a mile or so away looms another peninsula known as Pumice Island, so called because it is covered with immense slabs of a very fine grade of pumice stone.

During the war a government agent visited the sea, and coolly notified the owner of the pumice that the United States intended to commandeer the entire deposit, and that he would be compensated for it later. Whether the theory held in the valley—that the pumice stone was to be used in some way in the construction of concrete vessels—be correct or not, it is undoubtedly true that there is no substance except specially-made steel that will resist a projectile as will pumice. The writer has seen a bullet from the well known wicked Colts automatic revolver fired at a distance of ten feet from the pumice and it penetrated barely two-thirds of an inch. The bullet still almost perfect in shape was, by the elastic resistance of the pumice stone, ejected almost three feet.

Nature has Immense Deposits of Natural Paint.

A GREAT point of interest to the tourist are the bubling paint pots. As the water retreats — at the present writing it is still clinging about the western shore of the island—it is in a state of constant ebullition. Gases from some unknown subterranean source are continually finding escape through unseen vents in the bottom. Undoubtedly this has been going on for centuries, for it has deposited layer after layer of colored pigment, that varies from bright yellow, through all shades of brown to olive and bright greens. The retreating waters have left uncovered acres of this deposit, which has been pronounced by experts as fully equal in paint-making value to the dry sienna and umber colors of which we import thousands of pounds every year from Italy. One expert claims that there are at least a million tons of pigment in sight on the surface and undoubtedly the deposits have a great depth.

But the chief point of interest about the

After you have succeeded in getting back a live, breathing skin, you will experience a healthy glow and elation that you have never known since the days of your youth. Your relieved internal organs will be "back on the job" and you will feel the joy of living.

Finally—and this may appeal to my women readers—as a beautifier, it beats all cosmetics.

Homeopathy.

THE original homeopathic remedies were purely suggestion. There is a hundred times more medicine in Los Angeles River water than in some of the higher triturations. Then they began to give stronger medicine. Now they have gone over to regular methods, and like the osteopaths, have been swallowed up by the American Medical Association.

Some independent thinking men stay out. They will form the nucleus of a rational school of healing, for which there is a crying need. The people demand something better than the guessing, stuffing, drugging, carving and serum injecting methods of allopathy that prove such a dismal failure, when put to the test.

The Appendix.

ONE Dr. Evans, who disseminates medical information through a newspaper syndicate, was asked "Of what use is the appendix?" To which he replied: "I do not know."

It is deplorable that Dr. Evans should continue in such a state of ignorance, so I hasten to enlighten him.

The appendix, like all other organs of the body, has a use. There are no "superfluous organs." Nature makes no mistakes.

The appendix serves to lubricate the lower bowel. Consequently, its removal—when not fatal—is always followed by chronic constipation, varied occasionally by diarrhoea, as nature endeavors under these discouraging conditions to cast forth the waste.

In so-called appendicitis the appendix is seldom involved. The ailment is simply inflammation of the bowel, due to the dietetic errors.

Under natural treatment — cleansing of the colon, and fasting—the patient is well in a few days. Removal of the appendix can never cure, so long as the causative conditions are maintained.

Why, then, always operate? Partly ignorance, partly greed. Removal of the appendix is a profitable "pot boiler," as artists say, paying expenses between times of "big business."

And the public pays the bills—not only from their pockets, but in their loss of health.

Feeding Infants.

FOLLOWING is from a Los Angeles physician:

"It has been time and time again impressed upon me that the average physician knows but very little concerning the artificial feeding of infants. I have had patients came to me in which the baby was given paregoric, or even morphine in small doses, to 'kill the colic' which was caused, mind you, by the physician's own ignorance in feeding the infant an improper food. Think of that? I know this to be so, because it was a case I got from Santa Ana only last week. The baby has no more colic, because he is receiving proper food, which he can digest. This is only one such case. I know of many. The average physician knows of a brand of condensed milk and he tells the mother to try it. If that does not 'work' perhaps a 'baby food' is tried; and so on, until the baby finally survives by all odds or dies or becomes a chronic invalid."

Constipation.

FOLLOWING is from an article by Harry B. Galatian, M.D., in Physical Culture:

"About eight out of ten cases of chronic diseases give a history of constipation. This does not mean, however, that constipation is necessarily a cause of, or even a symptom of the disease that is present, but simply that the bowels are weakened along with the other organs of the body. Many people, however, attribute their illness to their constipation, it becoming almost an obsession with them. It is the one symptom about which they worry and lament. 'If I could only cure my constipation I would be well [illegible] is a constantly recurring statement.

"To realize the prevalence of constipation, one has only to note the extent of the manufacture and sale of drugs and appliances for its treatment. I know of one comparatively small concern that ships over a ton of a saline laxative daily, besides millions of pills and pellets, and dozens of bottles of liquid medicine—all for constipation. Then think of the scores of other plants, some of large capacity, engaged in the same business. Besides, the many kinds of mineral waters advertised on the billboards—the sand, bran bread, oils, and, last but not least, the multitude of enema appliances displayed in the corner drug stores—all used for the same purpose. My contention is that the very means used to treat constipation but perpetuates the condition, and that the sooner it is looked upon as a pathological condition and not as a symptom, the sooner will a real cure be found and applied.

"When the foundational basis of constipation is clearly understood, and treatment in accord with the physiology of the intestines employed, I believe there is no case, not due to organic causes that can not be relieved."

The Dangerous Age in Business.

A MAN in a southern city, who has built up a large connection as a business adviser, is reported in the Saturday Evening Post as saying:

"We have been taught to believe that the forties is a dangerous period in the life of a business man; so many go broke during their forties it has come to be the belief that a man loses his pep by that time and lets his younger competitors go past him. I believe this is exactly the reverse of the truth. Men go broke between forty and fifty not because they have lost their pep, but because they have got too much of it."

The Educated Colon.

FOLLOWING is from "The Itinerary of a Breakfast" by J. H. Kellogg, M.D.:

"The house dog is necessarily trained to avoid evacuating his bowels in the house. In other words, he is taught to restrain his bowels from moving when they are so disposed, until it is convenient for his owner to turn him out of doors. A dog so trained is house-broken.

"If dogs were the only house-broken creatures, what a world of wretchedness, suffering, even crime and human wreckage, would be saved.

"All civilized people are house-broken and like poor house-broken dogs, pay for this sinister education an infinite price, not only in misery and inefficiency, but in deadly disease and shortened life.

"The whole civilized portion of the human race is house-broken. The mother or nurse of every infant begins the work of training the child to control its bowels, which means to thwart the automatic process by which the wastes are normally dismissed from the body, and by the time the child is two years old it is well house-broken, hence constipated. In this respect the infant house dog learns faster than the human infant."

Hiccough.

I DO NOT often agree with Dr. Leonard Hirschberg, but he is right when he says:

"An overfull or a dilated stomach gives origin to hiccoughs. Hence a sot, a 'pig' and a gourmand are apt to be upon terms of intimacy with this affection.

"The over-distension of the stomach by eating excessively of sugar or starch, which ferment and cause an evolution of gases, all cause these paroxysms."

Pure Air and Health.

PURE air is almost as difficult to get nowadays as pure food. To find really pure air, you must go to the desert, to mountian heights, to the Arctic region, or to the ocean. Wherever man settles he pollutes. Following is from "The Desert" by Henry Van Dyke:

"The older portions of the earth show their desolation plainly enough, and the ascending smoke and dust of the ruin have even tainted the air and dimmed the sunlight.

"I am not speaking figuratively or extravagantly. We have often heard of 'Sunny Italy,' or the 'clear light' of Egypt, but believe me there is no sunlight there compared with that which falls upon the upper peaks of the Sierra Madre, or the uninhabitable wastes of the Colorado Desert. Pure sun-should not have any more children because my husband—who is a train dispatcher—doesn't make enough money to support more 'decently' than the two we already have. I told her I didn't want to be put in a position where, in case I might lose either or both children, I should be left childless. She said that the operation 'wasn't nearly so dangerous as having babies.'

"Finally I gave up. I had the ligaments shortened, a curettement and incidentally a laceration of the cervix, which later trouble seemed to count as nothing with her. I was literally frightened into the operation. I did not consent to anything being done with the tubes and gave instructions that the appendix be left.

"Now I have a hideous eight-inch hidebound, uncomfortable scar. The operation took place a year ago last April. I had a complete breakdown four months later, also the uterus comes down so that it is often visible.

"I have had two physicians examine me, but neither can tell me for sure what has been cut out. After a year elapsed I asked the surgeon, and he claimed to look up the record and said he performed ovarotomy and, took a portion of the other tube, removed the appendix and did a tri-corner fixation of the uterus. I told him Dr. B. said they didn't touch the appendix and he said: 'Well, I won't say for sure.'

"Not one thing Dr. B. said before the operation as to the many benefits I should derive from it has proven true. One of these was relief from profuse menstruation. I was always regular—every four weeks. Now it is irregular.

"I really believe that all my trouble was originally caused by overeating and wrong eating, causing auto-intoxication.

"Of course you have scores of such experiences dinned into your ears. But the main reason for my writing you is to know if something can be done to put a stop to these operations, especially the practice of tying, or cutting the fallopian tubes to prevent conception. Dr. M., the surgeon who did the operating on me, advised the cutting of the tubes, saying that was the only sure way to prevent conception. I have always desired from four to six children, at reasonable intervals.

"I'm only one poor fool, but to me the experience is hell."

The law should check this mercenary medical mania for unnecessary surgical operations. In one State at least they have made a beginning, by obligating a surgeon to produce the appendix, when he cuts it out. However, that is not enough, as it would be quite possible for enterprising surgeons to keep an assortment of diseased appendices in alcohol.

Meantime, why not inform yourself a little about the care of your body?

A Good Food Apostle.

ALFRED W. McCANN of the New York Globe is a valiant fighter for wholesome food. He wars against the evils of starvation white flour, sterilized and pasteurized milk, and doped and emasculated foods of all kinds. He shows why modern refining processes are more deadly than war, and that while we dream over the children among the Lusitania's dead, 400,000 children die every year in the United States from malnutrition—not from lack of food, but from eating starvation foods.

Following, about the author, is from the preface to the new edition of the "Science of Eating:"

"The author has acquired his knowledge of food conditions in America through years of service 'on the inside.' For five years during the period of Dr. Harvey W. Wiley's service as chief of the bureau of chemistry McCann's activities were largely confined to a laboratory under the roof of a modern food factory. His constant daily associates were Federal, State and municipal food, inspectors, chemists connected with Federal and State departments of agriculture, food manufacturers, importers, jobbers and commission men.

"Then as advertising manager of a food business handling prepared foodstuffs to the extent of $12,000,000 a year, he learned than no food reform can come through advertising as now conducted. 'The advertising manager,' he declares, 'cannot state the truth in a food advertising compaign.' . . . Mr. McCann then received the support of the New York Globe which set him free to report the results of his discoveries. Subsequently forty-one other newspapers in as many cities took up his work but so heavy was the pressure applied by advertising agencies that the papers with one exception found themselves compelled to [illegible] his exposures.

"Mr. McCann has been made deputy health commissioner of five municipalities, has been employed to make surveys of food conditions obtaining in many communities. He has been used as a witness countless times in government prosecution. He has initiated two hundred and six successful prosecutions of food adulterators and has never lost a case. As a result of his vast experience he no longer looks to commercial publicity or to legislation as a means to bring about food reform in America. Most of the conditions described in this book are now known to various State legislative bodies but all efforts to influence enactment of adequate laws covering the abuses described have thus far been defeated. It is his belief that the work must be done in schools, that our children must be taught the meaning of depraved foods, that they must learn how foods are processed bleached, colored, sifted, denatured, demineralized, chemically treated and refined; the relationship of foodless food to sickness and death; the relationship of natural food to health and life, so that with adequate knowledge of economic facts concerning the food supply of America, war may be successfully waged against abuses which threaten the very foundation of national health and prosperity."

The New York Globe is to be congratulated on its courage and public spirit in permitting Mr. McCann thus to disseminate the truth on a subject of so great importance to the American people.

A Supreme Test.

MRS. MAUD BALLINGTON BOOTH, speaking on behalf of prison reform, told a Chicago audience that until they had been tested by hunger it was unwise to say: "I would rather starve than steal."

Quite true. Be charitable. You cannot tell what you might do until you have been put to the test. It is no virtue for a wealthy man to refrain from stealing.

Smothering the Skin.

MAN was not intended to wear clothes. He pays a heavy penalty for doing so. Patagonian natives, stark naked, would row out through sno wand sleet to ships where sailors stood shivering in sweaters. Missionaries came and induced the natives to wear clothes. They were soon decimated by tuberculosis.

Native police in Samoa were clothed by the American authorities in abbreviated suits of khaki. They began to develop consumption. They were then permitted to go back to a fringe of fiber.

There is a hot war on just now between missionaries and the British governments of South Sea Islands over this question of clothing. With rum and syphilis it is rapidly exterminating one of the finest races on earth.

We do not appreciate the importance of the skin as a ventilating organ. When the millions of pores are sealed tight—as with gold leaf—death follows immediately.

"Colds" in their various forms, as bronchitis, grip and influenza, are largely due to the smothering and enervation of the skin. Extra work is thus thrown on the other depurating organs—the lungs and kidneys and bowels—in consequence of which they break down. There is also congestion, and a tumor may be found.

Wear light clothing. Put on more outer clothing, when it is cold.

Harden your skin. Never wear wool next to the skin. It is filthy and unwholesome. It overheats, and then chills. It retains moisture longer than any other material. It makes the skin tender and supersensitive, easily affected by changes of weather.

The best material for wear next to the skin is ramie, the linen of the Bible. They do not grow flax in Palestine. Then linen mesh. After that cotton mesh. You will find this ample, in the coldest weather, after your skin begins to function. In very cold weather you may wear a cotton or woolen garment over the mesh.

You can't go naked habitually. The police would not let you. You may, however, seize every opportunity to do so. Sun and air baths are much more important than water baths. See that you get one daily.

Especially let the little children be naked, as much as possible. They will enjoy it and it will preserve them from many unnecessary "children's ailments."

Stimulate the skin by thorough friction with the hands. This gives you exercise and an air bath at the same time. Rub off the dead cuticle, after a hot bath.

Let Nature Cure Rupture

Don't make it worse by wearing an old style truss or mail order "appliance."

The Benjamin Natural Support, made complete for each individual case, embodies the only principle, which will hold securely and give Nature a chance for steady improvement. Adenoids and Tonsilitis:

This means nothing more or less than an inflamed and swollen area of tissue normally a part of the walls of the nasal cavity and pharynx of every human being. It is only when the nerves extending to and ending in this particular tissue are severely pinched or heavily pressed upon, by one or more bony segments of the spinal column, that the condition of your child will be diagnosed as "adenoids," and the diagnosis, of course, accompanied by suggestion for immediate removal, that they (the adenoids) are "dulling the mentality and keeping the child back."

But, just stop for a moment and think! Did it ever occur to you that the very condition in the spine which leads directly to, as the cause of, the "adenoids" was also the cause of the brain involvement expressed as mental dullness, and that this accounts for the inability of the child to forge ahead?

Removal of Adenoids and Tonsils Unnecessary and Injurious:

Should your ear become inflamed and swollen, it would be no less sensible to cut it off than to cut out, or off, the adenoids and tonsils, or either, when they become (diseased) inflamed and swollen.

The chiropractor, by adjustment of joints in the child's neck, releases the nerve from its pinched state, and the life-force is carried over such nerves to the adnoids and tonsils normally, the inflammation and swelling disappears, the brain involvement disappears and the mental dullness is gone, the child is "sharp as a tack;" and no injury to any tissue of the body, no nervousness, no deafness, no malformed mouth or nares.

Some Good Short Stories from Everywhere.

Compiled for The Times Illustrated Magazine.

Ty's Logic.

TY COBB, like all great players, learned the great American game on the sand lots; a fact which brings to mind the story of one of those earlier games and in which Ty was the hero.

Seems the youngsters played in an open lot next to which lived an irascible old woman. One day Ty swatted one of those now famous home runs of his. Slam over the fence it went, and it was up to Ty to get it back.

"Please, ma'am," he asked timidly of the woman when she answered his knock, "may we have our ball back again?"

"No, you can't," snapped the woman. "Your horrid ball hit the baby and nearly killed it."

"I'm sorry, ma'am," said Ty, "but after all, you've got three babies, and we've only got one ball, so please won't you give it back to us?"

How "Aw" Ful.

"A TENDERLOIN AU JUS, potatoes au gratin, very well madam," and the waiter departed.

Daughter: Mother isn't it too bad such a nice waiter should be so illmannered? He used that word you said only common people use."

Mother: What dear, I noticed nothing?

Little Daughter: Why, mother, while taking your order he said "aw" twice.—[A. L. M.

Fierce

A POLITICIAN was talking about Senator Lodge.

"He's an able man but a mighty caustic one," the politician said. "The polite way he can turn a chap down! It's something fierce.

"A big New Yorker once called on Senator Lodge to try to persuade him to change his attitude towards an important bill. It happened that the New Yorker stuttered. Anyhow he made Senator Lodge quite a speech, proving that if he didn't swing around he was doomed to political extinction.

"The New Yorker was stuttering into his peroration when Lodge held up his hand and said in his blandest manner:

"'I'm afraid I cannot understand you now. Come again when you are sober.'"

The Mean Man.

EVERYBODY knows the story about Tom Sharkey, who electrified the loungers in his saloon one day by saying heartily, "Well, boys, what are we going to have?" And then as the loungers gathered round the bar, he added, "Rain or shine?"

Representative Gordon Lee of Chickamauga told a story of a similar kind about a man at Atlantic City. Some friends visited him on a hot evening, and after they had sweltered a while in his sitting-room, he said:

"'Well, friends, could you stand some refreshment?'

"'We certainly could!' the visitors replied, and they moistened their dry lips in pleasant anticipation.

"'Then,' said the mean man, rising, 'we'll open this window. There's promise of a breeze'"

Got Even.

"GOOD MORNING, professor," said the landlady sweetly as that individual entered the breakfast-room.

"I hadn't noticed it," returned the professor.

"Hadn't noticed what?" asked the landlady.

"That it's a good morning," retorted he. "It's raining cats and dogs outside. Where is my umbrella, Mrs. Gog? I left it in the corner of my room on going out yesterday morning, and it's not there now. I can't understand why it is that the morality, integrity, the—the common, every-day honesty of life seem to disappear when one gets within the portals of this house. Where, madam, I demand to know—where is my umbrella?"

"Where?" replied the landlady, striking a high C and pouring hot water over the cat in her excitement. "Where? Why, the owner came here yesterday and took it away."

Experienced

A YOUNG Boston artist, looking for a model, found on the Common just the specimen of genus hobo she required. In making arrangements with him she said:

'You know, posing is not particularly easy to one not accustomed to it—how long can you stay in one position without moving?"

"Till the cops get busy, miss," was the tramp's reply.

Scent Him Away.

SOME sort of a prowler had been making nightly visits to Joe Payne's cellar the past week. It was decided that the visitor was a large rat. So a steel trap was set Sunday night and Monday morning they had the intruder by the foot.

It wasn't a rat, however, but a half grown skunk. No, don't hold your nose—nothing of the kind happened. The skunk was so frightened that he forgot all about it, putting up no defense whatever.

Joe was so grateful to the little fellow for neglecting the perfumery that he carried him to the alley, stepped on the spring to the trap and let the skunk escape into the weeds.

Being Polite.

THE case was going badly for the defendant and his counsel was getting upset. "Has my client a reputation for being abnormally lazy?" he asked an opposing witness sarcastically.

"Well, it's this way—"

"Will you kindly answer the question?" struck in the irascible lawyer.

"Well, I was going to say it's this way. I don't want to do the gentleman in question an injustice. And I don't go so far as to say that he's lazy exactly; but if it required any voluntary work on his part to digest his food—why, he'd die from lack of nutrition!"

A Social Clean-up.

THEY had been dining in state in the dining-car. Husband, who is a teacher of English, was glad that little daughter had behaved so perfectly. Mother also was in a happy frame of mind. There were numerous other diners in the car and the parents were proud of their child. Not a single thing had happened to mar the serenity of the occasion.

Finally the meal was over and they started to leave the car. Their way took them past all of the other tables. Suddenly the little girl felt impelled to ask a question.

"Mother," she called in a shrill voice. "aren't we going to wash the dishes?"

Lingering End.

MRS. BROWN was at the back of the church waiting to have her baby christened. Baby was getting restless, so she beckoned the verger.

"Is the sermon nearly finished," she whispered.

"No, mum," replied the verger. "Another half hour of it yet. He's only on his 'lastly.'"

"But," said Mrs. Brown, "will it take him half an hour to get through 'his lastly?'"

"No, mum," was the demure reply, "but there's the 'one more word and I'm done,' and the 'finally' and the 'in conclusion' to come yet. Don't be impatient."

Goose Eggs.

BERT LYTELL told visiting sailors of the U.S.S. Wyoming, U.S.S. New York and U.S.S. New Mexico this story when they visited him recently:

"Say, men, did you hear about the Englishman at his first ball game? He watched one side hang up a score of three runs in the first inning, and the other side follow it with four runs Then for inning after inning the scorekeeper hung up his empty scores on his board Finally the Englishman left in disgust.

"'What was the score?' asked the gatekeeper.

"'My Gawd, old chappie, it was up in the [illegible] millions—I lost count!'"

Not Missing Anything.

IT IS part of the job of Manager Sibald of the Alex. to be a walking guide book. Many of his patrons rely on him to map out their daily sightseeing programme and thus it came about that two young women from Kansas City buttonholed him one morning and asked what they should do next.

"We've seen the movie studios, we've been to Vernon, we've seen the orange groves, in fact we've seen about everything, I guess," said one.

"Are you interested in art?" asked Sibald.

"Sure," breezed the other, "anytime I find a city with an artery I always like to blow in for a few minutes."

MANAGER: (to a new guest) Ah! And how did you find the service this morning?

All There.

CITY MAN: Isn't a big hotel wonderful? It's just like a city all in itself

Stranger: More like a farm, I should say.

Cloud Bursts.

"SOME people," declares Judge White, "don't know when a good quarrel has come to a perfectly good ending. If they did, half the troubles between man and wife would never be aired in court. Too many are like the couple at Venice whose bickerings, which the thin walls of the summer cottage could not stifle, kept the neighborhood awake for hours.

"Finally the storm seemed to have passed, but just as the whole block was breathing a sigh of relief the woman snapped:

"'Well, I hope that now I can take my beauty sleep without further interruption.'

"'My dear,' retorted the man, 'if that's what you're going to take, you'll have to imitate Rip Van Winkle,' and with that the storm broke out all over again.'"

Medical Education and Practice.

ROCKEFELLER has given the immense sum of $20,000,000 for medical "research" and education.

How much good might be done by this great sum of money were it utilized for teaching people how to get well and keep well. Instead of that, it will do harm.

Reading between the lines of articles in medical journals, we may see that part of the money will be utilized in a further effort to stamp out independent medical colleges, and to bulwark the drugging, serum-injecting and carving school. And this at a time when public opinion—not only "lay" but medical—is pointing out the need of radical reform in medical education and practice.

Thinking men, of the drugging, serumizing and carving school of medicine, are beginning to admit that the system is a failure. This explains the increasing effort to make such discredited methods compulsory, by legislation. In the Medical Summary (Philadelphia) for August, Eli G. Jones, M.D., of Buffalo, N. Y., writes:

"It is a fact that drugless healers are growing rapidly in this country. We find them located on about every street.

"We as physicians have got to do more for the sick than ever before, or else we will see the drugless healers grow and fatten on our failures. They are here to stay, and must be reckoned with in all our future calculations. As physicians we have failed in our duty to the sick; we have failed to find a definite treatment for the diseases common to our country. As a result of this sad state of things, there are 35,000,000 people in the United States that depend upon some form of drugless healing when they are sick.

"I warned the profession of what was coming in 1909. In the ten years since then the number of people who employ drugless healers when they are sick, has doubled.

"At that rate, where will the medical profession be in ten years from now? It is a crisis in the life of our profession, and it is about time that we should wake up and do something! The very first thing for us to do is to urge our medical colleges to teach their students the definite action of remedies, to teach the students a definite treatment for the diseases common to our country.

"The professors in the medical colleges have failed in their duty to the students when they have failed to teach them definitely how to cure the diseases they will meet with in everyday practice. A doctor's reputation depends upon the cures that he makes, not the failures; the undertaker reaps the reward of his failures. It is said that "the average mortality from disease in this country would not be over 7 per cent., without any medical treatment.' The mortality under the treatment of some physicians is 12 per cent. From this it will be seen that the public would be better off without them. If we, as physicians, are to be of any real benefit to the public, the mortality under our treatment must be below 7 per cent.

"The above are facts for the reader to think about."

Physicians will not lessen mortality by introducing new drugs, or serums, or operations, but by studying and aiding nature's efforts to remove morbid matter from the system, which they call disease, and seek to suppress, with disastrous results, as we all see, and as many of them now begin to admit.

Following is from an address delivered in Denver, by George S. Weger, M.D., and reported in the "Philosophy of Health:"

"Being away from the pungent atmosphere of drugs and the enslaving environment of active medical centers for a few years may have dulled my knowledge of so-called ultra-scientific methods of research and laboratory diagnoses. The ramifications of medical science have made this an era of specialization, and this specialization has separated the warp and the woof of a once fairly stable fabric. The poor patient is so bewildered that he allows himself to be led from one specialist to another, and, when sentence is finally passed, the composite diagnosis in which he finds himself enmeshed paralyzes him to the roots of his very being.

"Every physician to whom I have spoken or written for some years past has frankly acknowledged the impotence of drugs and admitted the futility of drug administration. We are prone to hide behind the subterfuge that our patients demand drugs and refuse to pay for advice alone. Such deception cannot go on forever, and there is no valid excuse for its continuance. If drugs are admittedly innocuous, what can the doctor substitute? Does he give fitting advice instead? By his own admission, he does not. He confesses that he does not know what to do. And still our colleges turn out thousands of bright young men to practice an art which fails to satisfy, protect, or heal. It is so inconsistent that one wonders at its continuance and perpetuation. It is the only line of endeavor which has the effrontery to 'carry on' and not deliver the goods. Then to add insult to injury by influencing legislation compelling people to accept a wrong and admittedly inefficient system is the most preposterous and inconsistent of all the shafts aimed at personal liberty. Outside of palliation, little, if anything, has ever been accomplished, in a curative sense, with drugs. However, through sanitation and hygiene, the profession has really and truly been of inestimable service to mankind. These two branches of science stand out pre-eminently great. And when that is said, all has been said that is worth while. Surgery is a branch of the science that has always illumed the gloom which goes hand in hand with drugs. This also has become such an obsession that men fail to distinguish the little that is necessary from the much that is not.

"I cannot excuse the stand taken by the profession, because it fails to see anything better than what it has to offer. And I am sure that the time is not far distant when the intricate maze of detail in which it is buried will be cast aside, and simplicity and common-sense will rule."

All who practice the healing art should have a thorough knowledge of the human body, but why should they waste years in studying the effects of drugs and serums, a false and harmful system? In the better drugless colleges—osteopathic, chiropractic, naturopathic and so forth—a more thorough knowledge of anatomy is gained than in allopathic colleges, because no time is wasted on bacteriology.

Knowledge of healing can be gained only by experience at the bedside, not in a laboratory or dissecting room. The stomach is not a test tube. The human body is not a locomotive. All the misinformation that has been acquired in a medical college must first be unlearned before the healer becomes wise and recognizes that his mission is to aid, not to interfere with nature.

Above all, the true physician is born, not made. He must have human sympathy, and a desire to do good. The physician and the preacher who enter their professions merely for the purpose of making money can never achieve true success.

Medical education and practice will have to move in accordance with the enlightenment of the age, or it will have to be moved—to be shoved aside, to make place for natural methods of healing, that never fail.

Aspirin.

A CORRESPONDENT writes:

"Women give aspirin to their babies with a most lavish hand, and advise its use for every malady under the sun, and are quite peeved when anyone has a contrary opinion of the efficacy of the 'sovereign remedy.'

"These aspirin fiends contend that there is positively no danger in taking barrels of the drug, but during a mild attack of the flu I was regaled to such an extent on this 'remedy' that my heart cut up all sorts of capers, cavorting as it were, all over my body.

"So you will be a real benefactor to a suffering community if you will in the near future give a clear opinion on this subject I contend that there is but a short step from a morphine fiend to an aspirin fiend."

This correspondent is right. Aspirin is a dangerous habit-forming drug. Many obscure deaths from "heart failure" are due to aspirin. To give aspirin to adults is a grave error. To give it to children is a crime.

The journal of the A.M.A. reports the case of a man who acquired the aspirin habit, and increased the dose which was necessary to obtain the desired relief, until he was taking sixty grains a day. Very naturally, he was found suffering from indigestion, constipation and low blood pressure.

R. L. Alsaker, M.D., writes:

"For some reason members of the medical profession have spread the idea that aspirin is harmless. This lie has cost many lives, and will continue to spread death so long as it is believed. There does not exist a harmless pain-killing drugs. Because people think that aspirin is harmless, they take it in great quantities. They begin with five and ten grains per day, and gradually increase the dose until they are taking from twenty to forty grains a day.

"Aspirin, when frequently and freely taken, causes depression and deterioration of the whole body. It ruins the stomach, but in spite of this it is generally believed that it does not harm the digestive organs.

"Not long ago I saw a woman who had taken aspirin for several years. During this time she had been under the care of several prominent physicans, and all of them had old her that the aspirin would no hurt her. The poor woman died miserably, because the aspirin had so wrecked her stomach that it rebelled, and would not even tolerate water So if you value your health, beware of the aspirin habit."

Yet this dangerous drug is permitted to be recklessly prescribed by young doctors just out of medical college, and is even sold to the public in drug stores.

And this in a country where the sale of beer and light wines is prohibited.

Morbid Plays.

THERE is an epidemic of morbid plays—sex passion torn to tatters, "vampires," "triangles," pimps, prostitutes, degenerates, drug addicts, and to this of late has been added medical propaganda for exaggerating the horrors of syphilis, and the inculcation of misleading methods of treatment. Also boosting of a dangerous method of deadening the pains of childbirth, a method already discredited by more intelligent physicians. A nice selection of entertainment, truly. When you go to a show you may have to choose between the hospital and the brothel.

They say these are "educational." Sure. So are safe-cracking scenes. A poor kind of education. Inspection of a sewer outlet is educational—but not nice.

They say these are "true to life." Doubtless there is plenty of filth and crime and suffering in life, but why constantly stir it up and parade it, except to satisfy morbid and prurient curiosity?

A wholesome old-fashioned comedy would be like a draught of fresh air in a close room. There are surely enough who desire clean, rational, cheerful entertainment, in place of this garbage. Why don't some enterprising producers supply the demand? As a steady diet, crime and disease are beginning to pall on the public.

Mutilation of Women.

THE following is from a woman correspondent. I told her that if I printed all the letters of similar import that I receive, it would not only fill the Care of the Body department, but the department would have to be greatly enlarged:

"I wish there were more physicians of your type. 'Regular' physicians seem to have so little sense—except the sense of touch—touching people for money.

"Is there anything that can be done to put a stop to the useless, barbarous practice of operating on poor scared women for slight uterine troubles, and to prevent conception or pregnancy?

"I was advised to have my fallopian tubes cut or tied, to prevent having more than the two children we now have, both healthy. I know other women who were advised to have that sort of operation. Neither woman is a lunatic or an imbecile. I know of three other women who submitted to the operation. I think it an abominable practice. There is a Federal law forbidding physicians to disseminate information for the prevention of conception. This seems to me far worse and much more dangerous to life.

"In my own case, I was extremely nervous, from various causes, and had trouble with my heart and digestion, belching at any or every little thing. So this doctor, a woman M.D. who runs a hospital, made an examination, and she said I might go insane unless an operation was performed. She said this was the sole cause of heart trouble and gas, and that nothing could be done to relieve my stomach trouble and nervous condition but an operation. She added that we

INFLAMMATION TABLETS
Strike at Foundation of Disease

The Old Mission Laboratories now announce to the medical profession and the public that they have developed what seems to be a positive cure for constipation. The tests so far indicate that it is a universal cure for this complaint in all of its forms. The remedy was developed upon the theory that all ailments after all are but a form of inflammation, and constipation, like other disorders, is nothing more nor less than a result of this trouble. If these tablets fail we want to know it and we will refund your money—so far as we know there has not been a single failure. They are indicated in all forms of internal inflammation and ulceration, stomach and kidney troubles, and some wonderful cures are being accredited to them. Two sizes at druggists, 60c and $1. HEALING TO ALL LININGS

AT EBB TIDE ON THE OCEAN SHORE.

BY CHRISTINE F. SCOTT.

LAUNCHED upon the world with a worthless name small account is taken of Dollars of Sand. In intrinsic worth the name is no misnomer but from a zoological point of view the American sand dollars or Clypeasteroids are highly interesting individuals.

Resembling a plant or flower much more than a being with life the fragile dollars are not always accredited with the developed system which they possess. The lack of bright shell coloring with which the other sea fauns flutter into the lime light detracts from their popularity, but the unusual circular outline with its flowerlike tracery redeems the tonal plainness of shell by its touch of artistic beauty.

The sand dollars belong to the large class Echinoidea of the phylum Echinodernata which consists besides of two other orders, the sea urchin and the heart urchin.

Sand Dollars.

When comparing the sea urchin with the sand dollar the difference in structure of these classmates is readily apparent but there are three corresponding outward features which characterize and assemble them in one group; the development of the movable spines; the firm test formed by the united plates; and the absence of arms. The internal constructions although confronted to such limited dimensions are also essentially varied.

In choice of location the sea urchins approve rugged shores where their presence can be noticed by hewn out cavities in the rocks, chiseled by their sharp teeth; the sand dollar conversely takes a more leisurely outlook upon life following the lower levels of sandy shore where excavation is not arduous toil.

The sand dollar is rather a sluggish animal with a flat and round, oval, heart-shaped or discoid-shaped shell of many hues; yellow-brown, chocolate brown, grayish green, dark purple and when empty it is a faded green or gray or bleached white.

Often the shell margins are notched at intervals and it is not uncommon to find a disk with open lunales cut through both parts of the shell. It is thought that the flattened shape of the sand dollar is provided in order to evenly distribute the weight of the body and that the lunales are pierced through the shell to further reduce the weight.

Nature Provides a Way for it to Keep an Even Keel.

AS THE animal rises or falls the water passes freely through the five openings and gives more speed to its vertical movements. The holes are so arranged that they prevent the sand dollar from sinking or falling headlong; the creature has really no head but the part nearest the mouth is the heaviest portion and would no doubt plunge the sand dollar downward if not regulated by the perforations of the lunales.

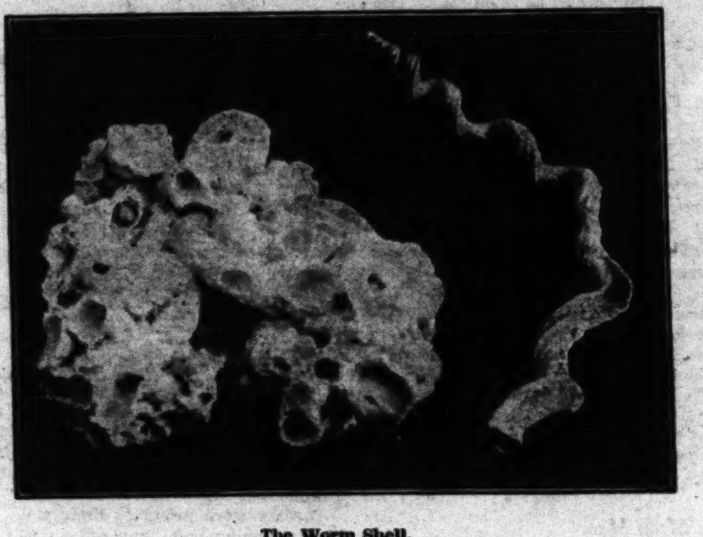
Upon the convex dorsal side of the shell is a petal-shaped figure of exquisite penciling. It marks the paths of the superfine tube feet or ambulacra which trace the leaf formed curves upon the under side. These ambulacral zones are sometimes deeply depressed thereby accenting the petal shapes by their elevation.

The mouth is in the center of the slightly concave ventral side of the "star" of petals meeting at the central space. It is held in a strange case known as Aristotle's lantern. Around the open edge the teeth are evenly distributed. The excretory aperture is on the margin of the disk between two sections of the flower petals. This point designates the posterior portion of the shell while the opposite part of the shell denotes the anterior end.

By the use of its minute sucker feet the sand dollar is enabled to slip smoothly along over the bottom of the ocean or upon the low shore. If thrown upon its back it is not capable of again regaining its feet, and by this mishap during storms great numbers are washed ashore with the glimmering lantern light of life gone out forever.

Fine and silklike spines of different colors, yellowish, violet, purple brown, green, etc. cover the entire shell when the sand dollar is alive, afterwards the spines drop away from the shell. An indelible ink is made by crushing the disks and mixing with water.

The ordinary sand dollars of the Pacific Coast (E. excentricus) are not circular in shape being somewhat straightened across the posterior portion. The ambulacral zones on this side are much shorter than the three others, giving the figure more of the flower resemblance than those of even lobes. The upper side of the disk is decidedly more convex than the lower and the apex of the disk is at the center of the figure so that "flat as a pancake" does not apply to this mintage of American dollars which will not buy a doughnut.



The Worm Shell.

Vermetus Spiratus—the Worm Shell, Made by a Mollusk.

THE singular animals that construct these shells are easily mistaken for sea worms, but notwithstanding the peculiar elongated shapes of their bodies and some of their strange out of caste habits, they are true mollusks and not outlaws seeking prominence upon the rungs of social ladders.

In the earlier classifications of the animal kingdom the division vermes or worms embraced nearly every animal except the insects and vertebrates. From time to time different groups of these have received the attention of zoologists who have withdrawn them from the original class and placed them either in separate divisions or in other groups. Slowly from this first great heterogeneous mass a wider knowledge has opened up new paths of research which lead to a deeper understanding of the harmony and beauty of the diverse natures of these sea-born races.

The most conspicuous feature of the vermes is their "crawling" propensities; nearly all of them adopt this mode of locomotion, moving about by contracting successively the muscular walls of their bodies. Propelling themselves without feet or arms is the general idea of crawing.

Having a short but vigorous foot threws this creature out of this class. It has been designated (Vermetus spiratus) of the family Vermetidae. Most unlike its former associates it constructs a calcareous covering for itself; a one-piece shell, so it rightly is called a gasteropod mollusk, although it has left the beaten track of architectural designing and created a free-hand system of perspective all its own.

Starts With Many Curves but Tires of Monotony.

STARTING out with the conventional idea in view it gracefully twists a line of symmetrical spirals for the corner-stone of its pergola, but tiring of the monotony as it grows older it soon lengthens its whorls in careless half-hearted curves until at the end, the shell is nearly straight.

In order to accommodate itself to its wandering quarters the body is very long and slender. It is pale brown, dotted with black spots.

The shell is yellowish brown or white, darker at the apex, delicately shading to lighter as it lengthens. It is tubular in shape with partition walls.

The opening or aperture of the shell is round; the operculum which fits the aperture is circular and of a horny texture. The shell is concave on the outside to encase the rounded outline of its occupant. Longitudinal keels, beautifully angled upon the top of the whorls run the length of the shell, which often attains a stretch of ten inches.

The body is tubular with a long head; upon the head are tentacles and eyes; the tongue is set with teeth similar to other mollusks. The foot which is poorly developed is short and broad.

These peculiar seashore dwellers depend for sustenance upon the same overflow of tides as the other gasteropods; minute animal organism of the water and sea plants which sweep over them in recurring floods.

In the shallow waters, and along shores where these shells are found, masses of them wound together like contorted serpents may be seen caught in strands of tangled seaweeds or tossed lifeless and pebble-filled above the foam-fringed edge of the waves.

Some varieties remain free while others similar to V. squamigerus Cpr., found abundantly upon the coast of Southern California, congregate in loosely twisted clusters firmly cemented together. The shell is a yellowish white on the outside, showing ridged growth lines with a dull or glistening white lining.

There is no apparent reason for these half-wise sea-builders to rank their submarines in their gregarious manner. For safety or for pleasure who can tell what protective or social instinct draws the near akin together?

DO ANIMALS HAVE GHOSTS?

BY EDWIN TARRISSE.

WHILE, from time immemorial, psychologists and others have dealt with the question of the return of the spirits of human beings to earth after death, in few cases has the return of animals to life after death received attention. Of course, unthinkingly men have been made to come back on horseback, as in the case of the "white horses of the O'Donoghue," which are supposed to arise from the Lakes of Killarney once every year, their riders on their backs.

Then, of course, there have been the white horse of the Peppers and other famous ghostly steeds, but always in company with the wraiths of men. The appearance of the animals alone after death has not been generally treated.

There are many stories of psychical appearances, all of which constitute a strain on the credibilities. Others, even the most skeptical have been compelled to admit, bear a large semblance of fact about them. Profound thinkers have held tenaciously that the natural and the spiritual world are closely allied.

Lord Kelvin and even Darwin himself, have not been credulous or spiritual men, but they could never be brought to say that believers in the occult were overcredulous or insane. Horatio tells Hamlet that his father's ghost "would much amaze" him. Doubtless it did, but the appearance of the ghosts of animals does not seem to have any such effect upon many of those who profess to have seen them.

Most instances, of course, come from Ireland, which is peopled by a highly organized Celtic race, and which is the home and habitat of elves, ghosts and fairies. But they must not be given less credence when properly authenticated.

Ireland is the Home of the Banshee.

EVERY one knows something of the Irish banshees, weeping wraiths of women who predicted by wailing the death of a member of a noble Irish house. It is not likely that any one ever really saw a banshee, but millions of Irish people will assure you that they have heard a banshee. Many of the great Irish families had their personal banshee, and it is a mark of birth and at least a former, if not a present, glory, to be able to say, or to say whether able or not, "There is a banshee in my family."

One of the best authenticated stories of the appearance of animals after death is that of the famous "Foxes of the Gormanstowns," one of the great Irish houses. The story has it that the original Gormanstown was, at an early date, lost in the woods, and, like another Romulus or Remus, suckled by a she-fox.

Now it is said that the foxes of Meath have never forgotten their motherhood of the Gormanstowns. It is said, and many Irishmen can be found to confirm the phenomenon, that about the time a Gormanstown is to die the foxes surround Gormanstown Castle. This strange occurrence was observed when the twelfth viscount died in 1860, and again in 1876, when the thirteenth viscount passed away. To this time no particular record of the "phenomenon" had been kept, but in 1907, when the fourteenth viscount was ill, data were kept. His widow, who is still living, stated that the foxes appeared, "barking and making other uncanny noises." Lady Gormanstown added that it was not until the twelfth viscount died that any record was kept. Many visitors to the house bore similar testimony.

The Foxes Came to the Funeral of the Earl.

IT IS, of course, possible that some retainer of the family may possess some means of winning the foxes from their dens. It can be done. But these do not seem to have been live foxes. When the fourteenth earl died his son and successor, the present earl, in a letter to the New Irish Review, wrote that when in the chapel sitting by his father's bier he heard noises outside as if a dog desired admission. Opening the door he found a full-grown fox at the portal and several more around the church. The daughter of the fourteenth earl, sister of the present earl, also bears testimony that the foxes presented themselves. The family crest is a running fox and the coat of arms is supported by a similar animal.

Now, no one can bear testimony as to whether these are live foxes drawn from their dens or mere apparitions. No one, it seems, has ever caught or tried to catch any of them. The fact that the dogs in the neighborhood did not annoy the foxes is a circumstance which, in the minds of the Irish, proves that the visitors are apparitions.

Here is another weird story from Ireland. The family of Patrick Plunkett, a well to do stockman, rented a house in the parish of Denore, County Roscommon. Mrs. Plunkett was worried by frequently finding the footmarks of a large dog on the floors. She never saw the animal, but her mother, quite aged, said that she had seen him; that he was brown in color with two white feet, and that he walked with a limp. Also, she stated, he smelled around a certain old chair and the fireplace and then left the room by a window.

Upon mentioning the apparition in the neighborhood an old woman told Mrs. Plunkett that the late Sir Greville Nugent, who had occupied the house some thirty years previously, had a dog of such a sort; that the animal had been accidentally shot, and limped afterward. Sir Greville had used the particular room, wherein Mrs. Plunkett's mother had seen the dog, as a sitting-room, and the dog probably had often been in it. There was another dog about the grounds, a black hound, seen at night, and there are the usual legends of horses refusing to pass the place where he was so seen. This, however, is in line with the regular Irish ghost-story.

A Horse that Came Back on Nocturnal Visits.

THE following is a story that came through an Englishman who was traveling in India. Sir Elston Cruikshank was proceeding with a large party that included several women. They camped one night near a ruined temple, and resolved to make use of it as sleeping quarters. The native servants with the party begged the Britishers not to do this, that many travelers had tried to rest there, but had bitterly regretted it. The Britons pooh-poohed the idea and retired.

About dark the three English dogs with the party precipitately fled the place, howling dismally. Then the members of the party began to feel nervous and queer and sleepless. By and by there was a tramping as of horse's hoofs, but nothing could be seen. No sleep was had that night, and in the morning the hoof marks of a horse were plainly visible. The natives took this as a matter of course. They said that a black horse was known to enter the temple every night. It seems that the owner of this equine ghost had been very fond indeed of his steed, and that when the horse died he had ordered it to be buried on a hill near the spot where he marked the spot for his own grave. The owner died soon after the horse.

In London they tell this animal ghost story. A member of the famous banking house of Coutts was extremely fond of a tame robin that came and fed out of his hand. The bird died before the banker did, but Mrs. Coutts, who afterward married the Duke of Devonshire, held that the bird appeared at the window of the room Mr. Coutts had occupied, and when she was dying she begged to be taken to the room in question so that she might again see the phantom robin. Mrs. Coutts, however, always believed that the apparition was her husband in bird form.

In Ireland a mare died when she had a colt about five months old. A former servant of the house came to visit after the mare's death and, not knowing that she was dead, remarked that he had seen her with the colt. When told that the mare had been dead for four months, he expressed surprise but adhered to his story. "I even heard the colt whinny his welcome," said he. This explained something that no member of the household had been able to account for. The colt had been in the habit of neighing a welcome to "something that no one could understand." He seemed to remember his dam. He was moved to another stable, and the old one was cleaned out and painted; but the other horses refused to enter it for a long time afterward.

At Umbayo, South Africa, John Jeter, an English settler, owned a very fine hound that was run over and killed by a train. For months after the Jeter family was much annoyed by the wild whistling of the passing trains. On complaining of this, they were told by the engineers that they should keep their dog at home, that the whistling was merely a warning to the dog, which was always on the tracks. The engineers described the dog with such accuracy that the family was greatly mystified, especially when the engineers added that the dog would always refuse to leave the track until the engine was almost upon him.
